Sermon: "When Paul Visits Athens."

The Athenians, with all their philosophy, with all their culture, with all their splendid temples, were not satisfied. Indeed, they were very much dissatisfied. They were afraid they had not found the truth, that they at least might not have found the true God. Their minds were not satisfied. Their hearts were hungry.

What Paul tried to give Athens—that, and that alone, can give abiding peace.

Women IN THE CHURCH
by Mary Fowler

On an evening, almost sixty years ago, a teen-age girl, the daughter of a famed American missionary family, sat alone in the missionary bungalow in Vellore, India. There came a knock at the door. She opened it to admit a tall and handsome Brahmin who asked her aid for his child-wife who was in childbirth. "I do not know how to help; but my father will come; he is a doctor," she said. "She had rather die than have a man take care of her!" he exclaimed. Later that same night a Mohammedan came, and then a high-caste Hindu with the same plea. Each said their religion forbade their wives to be treated by a man. In the morning there were young Indian girls dead in three homes of Vellore. That night's experiences sent the girl, Ida S. Scudder, to America to study medicine, to return to Vellore as a physician and surgeon, and to found the now world-famed Missionary Medical College for Women. The college through the years has trained more than 300 Indian young women as doctors and sent them into service in every province in India. The present buildings at Vellore were built by women of eight Protestant denominations in America, and by Indian Christian women.

Illinois State Capitol News

Traffic on Illinois roads is still declining, according to a report from highway engineers which shows a decline of five per cent during the second quarter of this year, as compared with last year. As compared with 1941, the decrease amounts to 43 per cent.

Commercial hatcheries in Illinois produced only 5,135,000 chicks during June, compared to an output of 17,248,000 in June 1943. A number of hatcheries in Illinois and other states have been closed since the latter part of May. Increased hatching for broiler production is expected during the fall season if the feed situation is favorable.

July was the first month in which financial assistance to the blind citizens of Illinois was provided wholly by the state. Although state allowances began to be made to a few blind individuals last October, some counties continued to make grants under the county blind pension law until June 30, when repeal of the measure became effective. Under the old law, grants were made in a fixed amount. Under the state blind assistance act, aid is given according to need.

Keeping Meat

A good refrigerator is not the complete answer to the keeping of meat in summer, according to Mrs. Marion Kessler, Champaign County Emergency War Food Assistant. If not given the right care in the refrigerator, meat may dry out, mold, acquire an unpleasant taste or even spoil.

Never wash or wipe meat with a damp cloth until just before cooking. Usually washing is unnecessary and wastes good juices and flavor. Remove meat from the paper as soon as it reaches the kitchen, lay on a plate, cover lightly with waxed paper, and put in the meat compartment of the refrigerator just under the freezing unit. Do not cut or chop meat until just before using because cut or chopped meat spoils faster than whole pieces.

Chocolate Economy

Grocery stores generally will have less cocoa and chocolate on their shelves for the rest of the year. Greater military demands have cut civilian supplies. The home cook, used to turning out chocolate cake, pie and ice cream with a lavish hand, now needs to know how to use chocolate economically so that none will be wasted.

Members present were Mesdames Ruth Mumaw, Ruth Henson, Olive Benefiel, Zermah Witt, Freda Maxwell, Jennie Nohren, Belle Smith, Thelma Clem, Jessie Bergfield, Leona Bergfield, Nola Donley.

Let Us Pray

Things have gone haywire again. Having received the children's pictures from the Waltz studios in a cluster, we sent them to the engravers to be cut apart, so we could print a few of them in each issue. However, the engravers have not returned them to us, so we will just have to wait until they do. Let us hope and pray that they will be here in time for next week's issue of The News.

Lieut. Butler Completes Orientation Course

LT. RALPH JOSEPH BUTLER

An Air Service Command Station in England:

2nd Lt. Ralph Joseph Butler, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Butler, of Broadlands, Illinois, recently completed an orientation course designed to bridge the gap between training in the States and combat soldiering against the enemy in France.

At this Air Service Command Station, 2nd Lt. Butler attended a series of lectures given by battle-wise veterans which included instructions on chemical warfare defense and pertinent tips on staying healthy in a combat theatre.

His next station will be one from which America's fighting planes cover our liberation of Occupied Europe.

POWER THROUGH SELF-DISCIPLINE (TEMPERANCE LESSON)

LESSON TEXT—Proverbs 1:7-10; Jeremiah 35:5-10; I Corinthians 9:24-27; I Thessalonians 5:22.
GOLDEN TEXT—And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things.—I Corinthians 9:25.

Discipline — that word doesn't sound exactly attractive, does it? It makes us think of punishment for wrongdoing, when in reality it is a very helpful word which means teaching. Disciples learn, and thus are disciplined, so that life becomes safer, simpler, and more efficient.

When the Morro Castle caught fire, there was time for everyone to escape, but 134 out of the 500 on board perished because they fought each other. When the President Coolidge sank in the South Seas 4,500 soldiers escaped alive. What made the difference? Discipline, that's all, but it was enough.

There are many kinds of discipline, and all have their important place in preparing men to live well ordered and useful lives. The disciplined life has power to meet trials and temptations. We find in our lesson three kinds of discipline:

I. Home Discipline (Prov. 1:7-10).
The training received by the child early in life from its parents is of the utmost importance in forming character. Children should learn the true standards of life, and be held to obedience to them if they are later to walk in the right way.

It is here that they most effectively learn the danger of the use of intoxicants and the importance of keeping their bodies clean and strong for the service of God and country.

Some parents (possibly misled by attractive, but false theories of education) think that the correction or punishment of a child is not to be permitted. They assume that they are being kind to a child by not limiting his development, or trying to direct it. These are the people who "curse their children with kindness," which is in fact the greatest of unkindness.

Only a fool (v. 7) will despise the instruction of his parents, and only a fool of a parent will fail to give that training which is like "an ornament of grace" (v. 9) in the life of the young man or woman.

But the discipline of the home needs the support of

II. Social Discipline (Jer. 35:5-10).
The social order, which concerns our relation to our fellow men, disciplines each of us. It makes many and what sometimes seem burdensome demands of us in order that we, as well as those around us, may have the privilege of living ordered and useful lives.

Wise is the man or woman who draws from his fellowship with others that helpful training which gives him stability and grace.

The Rechabites had made a vow that they would not drink intoxicants, and as a tribe they stood by that vow even when tested by Jeremiah. (Note that we say tested, not tempted. He knew they would stand.)

Fine family traditions have great value in guiding and controlling young people. We should, like the good man Jonadab (v. 6), establish a tradition of abstinence from intoxicants which will make all of our descendants say, "No one in our family ever drinks."

The training of home and of society has one great goal and that is

III. Self-Discipline (I Cor. 9:24-27; I Thess. 5:22).
In the life of every one of us there should be that determined purpose that life shall not be lived in careless disorder, or be permitted to run out at loose ends.

We are all running a race (v. 24), and it is for us so to run that we may achieve success. We cannot run with uncertainty (v. 26), we must know where we are going.

We are fighting a fight, and at times it is a desperate, life-and-death struggle. We must not beat the air (v. 26), but strike home the telling blows which will bring victory over our enemies, the world, the flesh, and the devil.

To do this calls for training and self-discipline. It means bringing the body and its demands into subjection. The man who runs in a race does not destroy his chances for victory by using intoxicants, or other detrimental things. Surely we who run the race for Christ must be even more determined that self shall be disciplined for God's glory.

The standard for the conduct of the Christian is higher than is commonly supposed, for he withdraws himself from "every form of evil."

The disciplined believer knows that sin is sin—that what looks comparatively innocent often wears a false face covering real wickedness, or it is the first step on a downward path. To start on that way is to invite disaster. A striking example of this is the social drink—the fashionable cocktail—the friendly glass. Abstain is the word—"abstain from every form of evil."

Pressure On Turkey

It is reported that the United States, Britain and Russia are again exerting diplomatic pressure on Turkey, with a view to inducing that country to join the Allies actively in the war against Germany. Renewed conferences with Turkish representatives on this subject are said to have been in progress in Ankara, in Washington and London for a month or more.

Turkish newspapers, which are under considerable government restraint in discussing matters of foreign policy, have been more openly favorable to the idea that Turkey should enter the war, so as to have a better national position among the Allied powers afterward.

Prime Minister Churchill stated bluntly a few weeks ago that Turkey would be entitled to little consideration by the Allies if she held aloof until after victory is won. He also intimated that her aid was not essential to the defeat of Germany.

Whether the Turks will declare war is still uncertain, but such a move would be advantageous to the Allies in connection with operations in the Balkans. In the long run it would doubtless be to the advantage of the Turks themselves to be actively aligned on the winning side.

German Air Strength

Robert A. Lovett, Assistant Secretary of War for Air, declared recently on his return from England and Normandy that he was unable to understand "the amazing wave of reasonless optimism" which recently has swept over a large section of the American people.

He told a press conference that he had not the slightest idea how long the war against Germany would last, but said, "I'm convinced that it is going to be a darned sight longer than anybody back home, except the military command, thinks it is."

Mr. Lovett said that while the Nazis offered little air opposition over the invasion beachhead in France, the necessity of using most of the Allied air strength to support the invasion has given German industry a respite from strategic bombing, which is being used to rebuild the Luftwaffe for a terrific fight.

Perhaps no phase of the German situation has caused more speculation than the question, "Where is Hitler's air force?" It is known, of course, that large numbers of its planes have been shot down, but it seems improbable that more have been destroyed than the Nazis have been able to build, even under the handicap of having many of its factories bombed.

One theory is that Hitler is deliberately boarding planes and airmen for a last desperate effort after the Allies are lulled into the belief that his air force is virtually non-existent. Others argue that if he had had the planes he would have used them in greater numbers to resist the invasion of France. Both views are mere guesses, and only time will reveal the truth of the matter.

Vegetable water can be kept to use in soups, stews, or gravies.

Sidelights

Willard Cashman of Madison, Ind., was much put out when, after drilling 160 feet on his farm for a well, struck gas. Experts measured the flow of gas and advised Cashman that the well produced enough to heat his home, refrigerate his food and cook his meals for years, but still he wasn't happy. He was drilling for water and water was what he wanted—so he started drilling elsewhere for water.

Frank A. Brazo, Long Beach (N. J.) commissioner of public safety, went on the warpath recently after spending a good part of the day on the beaches. He called the police force together and gave them instructions to warn all women more than 16 years of age, who were seen on the streets wearing shorts, swimming costumes or bath robes, to go home and change. "We are tired of seeing 200-pound, 40-year-old mamas trying to make themselves pin-up girls," Commissioner Brazo said.

Things are going to be different after the war. Yes, in many ways. For one thing the shiny old blue serge suit will be no more. New chemical treatment of fabrics will prevent the shine no matter how long you wear it, and it won't wrinkle, either. The creases in pants will be razor sharp and will stay that way even after walking through heavy rain. Women are going to get their share of the breaks, too. Silk and nylon hose, when available, after the war, will be run-proof, and many new fabrics will be added to present lists that will be wonders for their long-wearing qualities, chemists say.

Household Hints

Odorous foods like fish, onions, cabbage, and melons should be kept away from butter, milk and eggs.

A teaspoon of lemon juice added to the water in which rice is boiled will help separate the grains.

A ten-cent rubber mat kept on enamel covered work tables will keep mixing bowls and dishes from slipping.

Women who mend or make over what they have and do without new clothes and household textiles help keep prices down.

Simple one-dish meals and using the quick-to-prepare foods save time for the housewife on cleaning days.

Meat, fish, poultry, milk and eggs develop poisonous organisms if they spoil. They must be kept clean, cold and covered.

In very hot weather do not make meat sandwiches and salads long before using them. Keep them very cold.

Fine steel wool pads are good for removing spots or stains on a wooden floor before painting or varnishing the floor.

When preparing the canning budget the housewife may expect a bushel of beets and snap beans to yield about 20 quarts.

Waxed paper fastened with toothpicks to the breast of chicken while roasting will help keep the chicken from burning or drying out.

Lettuce, celery, radishes, cabbage, onions and other raw salad vegetables, washed, drained, and stored in a covered vegetable pan will keep crisp if kept cold.

A bar of soap, wash basin, wash cloth, and paper towels kept outside on a shelf will be convenient to men workers and help keep the washstand or bathroom neat.

Knight Errant

MADLINE saw the soldier while she was some distance up the highway and impulsively she started to slow down. But as the car stopped beside him she was a trifle uneasy. She had never before picked up a hitchhiker. She scanned his face as he tugged at the door handle and a measure of confidence returned. He was lean and brown and hard and reminded her of her brother; he wore overseas ribbons, too.

The lieutenant brought into the comfortable coupe the not unpleasant odor of a mild soap and good tobacco and also, to Madeline's astonishment, a casual intimacy that did nothing to improve her driving.

He sat half-facing her, with one arm thrown over the back of the seat and his fingers played gently with the collar of her polo coat. She turned toward him reprovingly and saw that his eyes had missed nothing — from the tight roll of chestnut hair clear down to her slender ankles.

"You'll do," he decided, catching her glance.

Madeline blushed. "Thanks. I was expecting a whistle," she said tartly.

"You'd rate a whistle if you'd take off those shell-rimmed cheaters, fluff out that hair-do into something modern and slip into a jersey that should be more becoming than that gunny sack you're wearing," he shot back at her.

Madeline clamped her jaws tightly to regain control of herself, then

"She wasn't?" asked: "You're going to Middleton?"

He nodded. "And I would that I were not."

"Home to a wife and children?" Madeline chided.

"An obligation, yes, but not that kind." He stared at the road ahead. There was silence for a minute before he explained:

"It's a long story, Beautiful. Maybe I'd have been better off in the long run if the Jerries had got me. This fellow saved my life the first day out. I was a wise guy, see, a smart aleck, but he shoved me into a hole when those MEs started coming over. I made that right a little later by drilling a sniper who had his head set on him. So we got to be buddies — the best kind. Well, I thought his sister must be all right, too—" He hesitated and Madeline gave him a look of encouragement.

"She wasn't?"

The lieutenant closed his eyes and frowned. "You can judge for yourself. I get a letter from this girl, thanking me for saving her brother's life. Then our outfit splits up and my buddy and I are separated. I don't find out anything about her from him but I answer her letter and away we go. Well, at first she's amusing. Then she begins to write about our 'glittering tanks that charged into battle like avenging angels of death.' Even that sounded kind of cute, but after a while everything gets daffy. I don't get it at all."

"No?" Madeline prompted, her twinkling eyes glued to the road.

"No. She wrote about the night having a thousand eyes that watched over me. I was her knight-errant and she was my ladylove. Imagine it!"

Madeline smiled. "You've no appreciation of romance. Besides, she probably thought it would be good for your morale."

"Nuts! Jerries on the run is all my morale needs." They were entering the town and he leaned toward her eagerly. "Listen, Beautiful, I won't even call up this gal with the fantastic ideas if you'll give me a break."

Madeline stopped the car at the curb and faced him with severity. "But Lieutenant Milton — Lieutenant James Milton — my brother never described you as a person who would run out on anyone."

She waited expectantly, but no astonishment was evident. Only a good-natured grin.

"O. K., Mary, we're even now," he said softly. "You knew me when you picked me up. But those initials M. S. on your car door were a dead giveaway, too. So forget all I said about your letters. How about tonight?"

Madeline laughed. "It's all right, but first you'll have to speak to my eleven-year-old sister. Her name is Mary — and she's the one who's been doing all the writing."

I'm the Bright Spot in Your Budget

"When you get out the family budget book, Mrs. Housewife, and start figuring new ways and means of being thrifty—pause to examine my record! Maybe you're feeling a little "blue," trying to balance that budget, but there's one BIG bright spot . . . my service record!

"Even though food, clothing and other necessities cost more today, my dependable service actually costs you less now than ever before. Actual figures show that although the 1943 dollar spent for living expenses would buy 43 per cent less than the 1913 dollar, the same dollar spent for electricity would buy 192 per cent more than the 1913 dollar.

"I'm sure you can understand why I'm proud of this record for economy—and why I'm so confident that my thrifty habits and usefulness are the bright spots in any household budget!"

War Bonds as Investment for Farmers

by Warren W. Hawley, Jr., President
New York State Farm Bureau Federation

IN CHECKING figures of the Farm Credit Administration, I find that farmers are paying off mortgages faster than at any other period in the history of the Federal Land Bank.

At the same time, farmers are building up cash reserves, but the wise investment of this money is an extremely hard job for farmers to undertake. The temptation is to try and obtain as high an interest rate as possible.

Many of us see no reason why we should not get as much interest on our money now as we had to pay the bank when we were forced to borrow during the depression.

The answer is that today money is cheap—"expanded", as the bankers express it. Therefore interest rates are low except in very speculative securities. Naturally no farmer wants to risk losing his hard earned cash.

We farmers know our own business and we can invest money in it safely because we understand it. However, when we branch off into other fields, especially the highly technical field of investments, most of us encounter sad experiences.

In these days it is virtually impossible for farmers to put their surplus cash back into the farm. War-time conditions prevent us from repairing buildings, and buying new machinery, automobiles, trucks and other equipment we must eventually have if we are going to stay in business.

So the smart thing for farmers to do is to invest their surplus money in War Bonds where it is as safe as a dollar bill. These bonds increase in value the longer they are held; they can be cashed after sixty days in case of need, and they will provide a reserve for investment after the war in the business the farmers know best—the business of farming.

I confidently predict that if farmers will do this, the dawn of peace will signalize a new day for agriculture.

Do You Know Illinois?

By Edward J. Hughes
Secretary of State

Q. Who was the Speaker of the House of the 2nd General Assembly?

A. John McLean of Gallatin.

Q. What were the expenditures of the 2d General Assembly?

A. The members received $3.50 per day and mileage and $97.50 was spent for stationery.

Q. What was McLean's action on the State Bank Bill?

A. By the rules he was not allowed to vote except in case of a tie or a meeting as a meeting of the whole. The House refused to so meet and McLean resigned his position and on the floor gave a powerful argument against the bill in which he predicted all the evils which ultimately resulted from the operations of the bank.

Q. How much money was circulated by the State Bank?

A. $300,000. Silver being scarce the bills even were cut to serve as fractional currency.

Q. What was the ultimate result of the State Bank law?

A. The cost to the State was at least equal to the amount issued by the bank.

Q. Was a duel ever fought in Illinois after it became a State?

A. Yes, in 1820 William Bennett fought and killed Alfonso Stewart.

Q. What happened to Bennett?

A. Gov. Bond refused executive clemency and Bennett was hanged before a large crowd.

Q. What position did Gov. Bond take after the expiration of his term in 1822?

A. He was again appointed to the office of Register of the Land Office, at that time the most lucrative position in the State, the salary being $3,000.

Q. Did Bond ever run for office again?

A. In 1824 he ran for Congress from Crawford County against Daniel P. Cook. Cook won by a vote of 7,460 to 4,374.

Q. When did Bond die?

A. April 12, 1832. In 1881 his remains were removed to Chester by the State and a monument erected over his grave.

Explained

The other day a couple that lived 20 years in one house puzzled the community by moving into the house next door. The wife was asked about it.

Well, she replied, Jim says it's the gypsy in us.

Be Well Dressed—
Save Bond Money

Pinafors have come out of the nursery and taken the place they deserve in fashion. Besides being flattering and practical for warm weather, they are easy to make; an ideal choice for a beginner's sewing project. The ruffled, be-ribboned pinafore pictured here is especially beguiling, and can be worn with or without a blouse. Make it yourself and put the money you save into War Bonds. The pattern may be secured at your local store. Back the Attack—Buy More Than Before.

MAKE YOUR OWN
CANNING EQUIPMENT

Be determined to do your part toward saving food, canning equipment or no canning equipment. Don't glibly use the shortage of equipment as an excuse for not getting busy and filling those pantry shelves with jars of non-rationed food, put up just the way your family likes it best.

You will do well to follow the advice of Gladys Kimbrough, Home Service Director for Ball Brothers Company. To all who lament the lack of canning conveniences she suggests: "It is true that a skilled workman requires good tools but when he can't buy what he needs, he makes the best use of what he has and makes what he hasn't."

A few of Miss Kimbrough's suggestions for home-made canning equipment are illustrated in the photograph above. They are:

1. A lard can to use as a water-bath canner. A pail, sirup bucket, wash boiler, or any other container in which water can be boiled, will serve, provided it is twelve or more inches deep.
2. Funnel. This was made from a No. 10 tin can.
3. A rack or platform to fit in the bottom of the canner. Make by tacking strips of odorless wood together.

4. Coal tongs (part of fire set) make good jar lifter.

5. Strong string looped (slip hitch) around neck of jar. Use when neither jar lifter nor tongs can be found.

7. Wire basket to hold the jars while they are in the canner. Made from a scrap of wire mesh. (Poultry wire will do.)

7. Wooden paddle for stirring apple butter, chili sauce, etc. Whittled from hard wood. Wooden spoons can be made in same manner.

This year the government is releasing more metal for the manufacture of canning equipment. Production and distribution may make it unnecessary for the housewife to assemble home-made equipment, but it can be done and done easily.

Silver Wings

By BYRON McCLURE

"CARE to dance?" Captain David Holbrook had been drawn by some irresistible force across the ballroom to the uniformed girl sitting alone at the corner table. Cool gray eyes appraised him and time stood still for a moment as they gazed into each other's eyes; then the girl nodded. Gradually they drifted to the edge of the floor and through a door opening on a small balcony. Neither spoke. Speech was unnecessary. It was enough to be together, complete in each other. Finally David broke the silence, "Just . . . like . . . that!"

She smiled tremulously. "Yes, just . . . like . . . that. I had never believed it could happen so suddenly."

"Neither had I. Gives you a sort of all-gone feeling inside, doesn't it?"

She nodded. "Just like pulling out of a dive."

David grinned. "Exactly! But what do you know about pulling out of dives, young lady?"

She pointed to a pair of shining silver wings pinned to her jacket. "I'm in the Air Corps," she said simply, unable to conceal the pride in her voice. David laughed gaily. "What's so funny about that?" she demanded.

"Funny? Why, I was just laughing happily at finding that we're in the same outfit."

"You know that's not true," she retorted, anger in her voice, "it's just that you men are all alike! You're not willing to admit that women can do things you can . . . just as well and sometimes better! If men aren't the stupidest, the most conceited . . ." she paused, searching for words. Finding none, she gave him a stinging slap.

Almost roughly he grabbed her arms. "Listen, you little idiot! I get so sick of seeing you women carrying chips on your shoulders, daring anyone to suggest that you aren't really doing men's jobs. Why does a uniform have to go to a woman's head? You could punch that typewriter in some office just as well without it." She started to answer him but, instead, struggled from his grasp and disappeared in the crowded ballroom.

David fell asleep that night dreaming that he was falling through space. But an angel swooped down on silver wings to catch him before he crashed. When he arrived at the airport in the morning the dispatcher approached him. "Your plane has already been warmed up for your ferrying mission, Captain. Lieutenant Winters is ready to take off whenever you say so, Sir."

"Thank you. I'm all set. Let's go." David was anxious to get into the air, where he was at home, where he could think. His mind was still filled with thoughts of that girl.

So preoccupied was he that he ran straight into the storm before he realized it. A blinding streak of lightning zigzagged across the sky just in front of the nose of his ship! With senses newly alert, he glanced hurriedly at the instrument panel. The compass indicator was spinning crazily. That bolt had knocked out its delicate mechanism. David knew it was useless to turn back. He would be just as hopelessly lost as he was now. Drat that girl! If he'd had his mind on his business instead of on her, he'd have paid more attention to the weather report.

He pulled back on the stick and pushed the throttle forward, attempting to rise. Almost immediately ice began to form on the wings and propeller; his rate of climb decreased rapidly. He shuddered as he envisaged the jagged peaks below. Then he remembered the other plane. He craned his neck and peered back, not daring to hope. There it was, doggedly following, just a few hundred feet behind! Hastily he flipped the transmitter switch. "Flight leader to fight! Flight leader to fight! Can you hear me? Come in, flight!"

A familiar feminine voice came clearly. "Flight to flight leader! I can hear you. Go ahead, Sir!"

David thought he was dreaming again. "Wh-who are you?"

Again that cool voice. "I'm Lieutenant Winters, Sir. The girl punching a typewriter in some office. Or don't you remember?"

"Why didn't you tell me you were a Ferry Pilot?" he demanded.

"You didn't give me a chance. You probably wouldn't have believed it, anyway. Women aren't supposed to be capable of doing such things, are they?"

After a moment of silence David said meekly, "Will you take command of the flight, Lieutenant? My compass is knocked out. I'm completely lost."

"Yes, Sir." Crisply she ordered, "let me pass." David marveled at the ease with which she outmaneuvered the storm. In a matter of minutes they emerged into the glorious sunshine.

David slowly eased up alongside. As they flew wing tip to wing tip he could almost reach out and touch her. "Lieutenant Winters?" he asked.

"Yes, Sir?"

"I . . . well, I . . . there's something I'd like to say to you tonight, Lieutenant. Do you think you'd care to listen?"

There was no mistaking the emphasis she placed on her answering, "Yes, Sir!"

A local farmer recently walked into the local hardware store, where he spied a Crescent wrench. "Why, there's just what I've been looking for; I looked all over Danville for one today, but couldn't find it," he remarked. Moral: Try the home merchant first and save money.

Smile Awhile

Interviewer—Have you had any experience in defense work?
Girl applicant—Oh, yes. I used to go with a sailor.

Doctor—You have acute appendicitis.
WAC—I came here to be examined, sir, not admired.

Her father—My boy, you'll never be able to support my daughter. Why, I can hardly manage it myself.
Her suitor—Tell you what, sir, let's go fifty-fifty.

"Mother," asked little Mable, "do missionaries go to heaven?"
"Why, of course, Dear," her mother replied.
"Do cannibals?"
"I'm afraid not."
"But mother," the little girl insisted, "if a cannibal eats a missionary, he'll have to go, won't he?"

Also Proud
A small group of army brides were bragging about their husbands. The first remarked that at last hers had attained his majority. Bill has just got notice of his captaincy! thrilled the second. The third hinted that her man was hoping for his first lieutenantcy that month.

In a brief pause the fourth burst out bravely, Well, Johnny still has his privacy, anyway!

The Best, However

The master of the household, exasperated by the new cook's attempts at cooking a meal, asked her to come to the breakfast table.

After a long tirade he pointed at his plate.

"Look at that piece of bacon I've served my wife, he said. Absolutely uneatable! And this piece I've taken for myself isn't much better."
