Thought for the week
The cup of iniquity is fast filling, and when it is full, God's Son, as the lion, will return to take away the sin of the world. And when he comes he will have to remove sinners. Our God is a consuming fire. Just listen to the serious word of prophecy in II Peter 3:10, "But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up!"

ABRAHAM'S PRACTICE OF BROTHERHOOD

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 13:1-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee . . . for we be brethren.—Genesis 13:8.

As we study the contrasting selfishness of Lot, we see the true generosity of Abram and the brotherly love which prompted it in bold relief. In a world where men reckon even their friendships as something which must yield some financial return, it is good to stress the fact that kindness and sacrifice are recognized and rewarded by God.

Abram, after dwelling for a time in Canaan, had gone down into Egypt because of a famine in his own land. After many trying experiences, he returned to his promised land and there he prospered mightily under the good hand of God. Unlike many who forget God when they become rich, we find Abram

I. Meeting Prosperity With Godliness (vv. 1-4).

Abram "was very rich." That would be almost enough to constitute a spiritual obituary notice for many a man's spiritual life.

But Abram did not let his riches come between him and God. He sought out the altar which he had first built at Bethel, and there he called upon the name of the Lord once again.

Note then, that riches in themselves need not destroy a man's character or spirituality if they are held as a gift from God, and for His glory. Meet growing prosperity with increased godliness and all will be well.

II. Meeting Problems With Kindness (vv. 5-9).

Abram's riches, and those of Lot, were largely in flocks and herds. For them there had to be great areas of grazing land, and in the rocky section where they found themselves, grass was scarce. Result? A fight between the herdsmen.

Lot, the younger, should have taken the lead in meeting that situation, but his selfish heart was too small for that. But Abram, eager for peace and brotherly love, indicated at once his willingness to do anything necessary to preserve peace.

One could not ask a finer indication of true bigness in a man. "Big men use their prestige to serve great ideals. Abram used his tremendous advantage to do a beautifully generous thing to eliminate strife. Not many men are big enough to follow this course" (W. R. White).

Only God can make a man that big, but God can do it for any one of us. If Christian people would listen to the words of Abram, "we are brethren" (v. 8), and put them into practice, there would be an immediate end to all the foolish strife which divides God's people.

There is no call for compromise with untruth, nor any occasion for softhearted generosity which will only spoil its recipients. We are talking about the honest and intelligent use of kindness and tact between brethren. When kindness meets problems, the problems disappear. Why not try it?

III. Meeting Selfishness With Love (vv. 10-12).

Lot made the typical choice of the worldly-minded man, the one which would give him the best returns in dollars and cents. It seemed like a shrewd thing to do, but it resulted in disaster, for it meant pitching his tents over toward the wickedness of Sodom.

Abram had to rescue Lot again and again from the results of his decision; but thus in love he met the arrogant selfishness of his foolish nephew.

God rewarded Abram by a renewal of His covenant with him (Gen. 13:14-18). God understands and values the kind and thoughtful act, even though the world may ignore it or sneer at it.

Lot probably did not intend to go all the way into wicked Sodom to live, but having once started that way, it was easy to go on and on. Even so Christians in our day may not intend to slip off into worldliness, but if they continue to pitch their tents toward Sodom, they will find themselves there one sad day.

This may be done by seeking wealth or worldly advantage at the expense of association with unbelievers, or by some manipulations or maneuvers which will involve compromise. It may come about by reason of indulgence in worldly amusements which dull spiritual perceptions and kill an appetite for the Word of God and prayer.

Abram is a character who "wears" well. We see him meeting one situation after another, and making the right choice. Oh, he was not perfect! His mistakes are noted in Scripture, and he suffered for them, too. But because his heart was fundamentally right, and he had a constant desire to do the will of God, he found his way through, and justified the name which God gave him—"The friend of God" (see James 2:23; Isa. 41:8).

Gen. Bradley's New Job

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, who commanded the Twelfth Army Group, composed of Hodges' First, Patton's Third and Simpson's Ninth Armies, in Europe, the largest field command in U. S. history, will shortly become the head of the Veterans Administration, which will ultimately have to deal with 15 million or more former service men and women.

His will be the biggest personnel job in the nation, and one which is growing rapidly as to make it the most difficult. For the Veterans Administration must handle all claim for veteran benefits—including pensions, insurance, hospitalization, education, loans and many others—provided by former laws and the C. I. Bill of Rights enacted during the present war.

General Bradley will succeed Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, who has been administrator of veterans' affairs since 1923. About a million veterans and their dependents are now receiving benefits through the Veterans Administration, which does not handle the cases of personnel still in active service. But thousands of men are being released by the Army and Navy daily who will be eligible for various benefits, making the office of administration one of rapidly increasing importance.

Born in Clark, Mo., on Lincoln's birthday, Feb. 12, 1893, Omar Nelson Bradley was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1915, in the class with Dwight D. Eisenhower, with whom he has been closely associated in the present war. As a lieutenant general, Bradley commanded the Second Corps in the Tunisian campaign in 1943, and as a full general he became Eisenhower's ranking American field commander in 1944.

General Eisenhower gave Bradley credit for planning the strategy so brilliantly executed by Patton, Hodges and Simpson, and once told a group of war correspondents that they were giving Gen. Bradley too little publicity, saying, "He is the brains; you ought to watch him more often."

President Truman evidently has been watching his fellow-Missourian with marked approval, and his selection of General Bradley for one of the most difficult and responsible posts under the government has been universally acclaimed.

Sidelights

Something new has been added—and after the war's end you need never buy a 'pig in a poke' as far as canned goods are concerned. Cans will have "show windows" in them in order to give the purchaser a glimpse of the inviting contents.

The meat shortage has brought about many innovations but none in our opinion, tops the system used by the ladies of a certain Decatur (Ga.) bridge club. The ladies showed up at a neighborhood butcher shop with cards and scorepads, then calmly sat down at a table for their regular session in the midst of a crowd of shoppers, while the butcher awaited his weekly meat shipment. A pleasant morning was spent by all.

Senator William Langer has started a one-man crusade that will have the support of millions—including nearly every man in the Navy. The Senator wants to give the sailor a break and get him out of those "Bell Bottom Trousers," now the subject of a popular song. Senator Langer calls attention to the fact that the uniform is a hand-me-down from the British and the black neckerchief is still being worn in mourning for Lord Nelson. It's time for a change and the sooner the better.

We note that Roy Green of Plum Point, Md., has sold two of his home-cured hams for a net $200 without violating OPA ceiling prices. No doubt they were choice hams or someone would not have gone to the trouble of stealing them the other night. Green entered his smokehouse the next morning and discovered his apparent loss, got so angry and disgusted that he took off his hat and threw it on the ground—almost hitting a wallet that had been dropped by the thief. A search of the wallet revealed $200 in cold cash.

A moderately-fat man should not worry about his figure so long as he can swing himself around neatly. Most people would rather talk to a comfortable-looking and well-poised fat man than to some types of thin men. In Asia a fat man is admired because he looks well-fed and thus prosperous. There is all the difference in the world between a fat man and a fat woman, so far as public opinion goes. There is reason for a fat woman to diet, but not a fat man. Now if we can just learn to swing ourselves around neatly and appear well-poised, we need not have any further worry.

The War Between The States finally came to an end in Vicksburg, Miss., on the 4th of July. For 82 years this proud old Gibraltar of the Confederacy has remembered the siege of Vicksburg and the heartaches and hardships that resulted and so Independence Day was a day for the Yankees to celebrate. And so the Fourth of July has been ignored all these years, but this year sectional bitterness was laid aside and 30,000 residents celebrated for the first time since 1863. The city's return to the Union was marked by the playing of patriotic airs to band accompaniment and Old Glory was seen to fly from every building. Residents gathered along magnolia and crepe myrtle-bordered streets to usher in a new day and patriotic speeches touched on the sacrifices now being made in another war in which all are united.

LEAD AND SILVER

Discovery of gold attracted the Nation's attention to Idaho in 1860 but the surrounding "worthless rock" that gold hunters spurned 25 years later became the foundation of an enterprise that brought the state into first place in the production of lead and silver. Elimination of waste, big-scale operations and new scientific processes of milling, smelting and refining have enabled the industry to provide livelihood for 50,000 people. It has added to the Nation's wealth that will be enjoyed by holders of War Bonds.

Household Hints

If a rubber ring around the top of a jar of preserves is inferior and causes a leak, pour melted paraffin wax around the top.

Since fiber door mats are hard to replace, keep the old ones in good repair by cutting off frayed edges, rebinding, or overcasting worn places.

Square containers in the refrigerator save space, but round containers permit better circulation of air than do square dishes set close together.

Sugar stretchers which can be used in lemonade are corn syrup and honey, both of which give lemonade a delicate flavor, slightly different from sugar but good.

Bitter chocolate that has been saved for some time and has turned gray around the edges is still good to use. The change in color is caused by storing in a warm place.

Small cuts, cracks or scratches in the surface of linoleum may be partly healed by rubbing with boiled linseed oil. Have the surface clean and dry before rubbing in the oil. Wipe off any excess oil. Allow area to dry 48 hours before washing again.

Worms in tomatoes can be controlled by dusting plants once a week with calcium arsenate or with a poisoned bait. The bait is made by mixing one part calcium arsenate with nine parts corn meal. Sprinkle this bait by hand on the fruit clusters. Start dusting as soon as first tomatoes are set. Three to four applications should be made.

The train for Washington had just pulled out of Norfolk and the passengers settled back for the journey. A tall, dignified man entered the club car, and addressing the passengers, asked, "Is theah a gentleman from Shelby County, Tennessee, present?"

One man stood up, and stated that he was a native of that county. "Fine!" beamed the first man. "I wondah if I might borrow youah co'skrew fo' a minute?"

Unsocial Cuss

A sauntering rookie from Alabama encountered a brisk second lieutenant. "Mawnin'," drawled the rookie pleasantly.

"Lawdamighty," said the rookie, "If I'da knowed you was gonna' carry on like that, I wouldn't of spoke to you a-tall."

Children the world over have been the greatest sufferers from the World War—and yet the future of the world and the future of the peace depend largely upon what happens to the children now left in the world. Dr. Leslie B. Moss, of the Church Committee on Relief and Reconstruction, points out. Among the tragedies of the war he enumerates: the undernourishment of millions of mothers, mothers-to-be, and school children in occupied Europe (900 instead of 2900 calories of food per child in Belgium); the massacre and imprisonment of university and high school students and teachers in Czechoslovakia; many thousands of Polish children reported dying from starvation and systematic draining of their blood "for military purposes"; the necessity to send selected Dutch children to England for dietary rehabilitation; the death rate of French children eight times that of the German; the death rate of perhaps a million children in the war-produced famine in Bengal Province, India; the death, through starvation, of other millions of Chinese children, mostly refugees. "The children are the living and fragile foundations upon which the future world will be built. Can we do better than to recognize how critical for all plans for a world order is our attitude and purpose toward the child?"

Danny Shows Up

By JOHN RAFTERY
McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Features.

MAIDA sighed as she saw Dan come up the path just as if he had been shopping, instead of after an absence of six years.

Fay jumped up and ran out crying "Uncle Dan! Uncle Dan!" He lifted the child and carried her into the house perched on his shoulder.

He grinned at his sister, put down Fay and said, "Both my girls are growing up, especially my big little sister Maida."

Maida asked, "Where's your luggage?" and tried to look like a welcoming committee, but did not succeed.

"At the station. I had to find out if you could put me up for a while."

"Of course. Of course. You know you're always welcome, Dan. Henry loves to have you here. You can take the guest room."

Dan sat drinking coffee in the kitchen, telling Maida where he had been, as he called it, ad interim.

"Well, most of the time I was in Australia. I wanted to get back here so that I could cross to see Ellen in Ireland, but it's quite hard to travel by sea these days. I came quarter-master Sydney to Papeete, able seaman Papeete to Hilo, and bosun to San Francisco."

"Couldn't you have written?" Maida asked. "Don't you know we worry about you, you worthless scamp?"

Fay was exercising all her eleven-year-old restraint, but it finally burst its bounds. "Did you see any Japs? Did you meet any submarines? Did you sleep in a bunk or in a hammock? Was it hot or cold where you were? Were there any palm trees?"

"Wait a minute, baby. One at a time. Suppose I go over the thing in detail tonight?" A little later he said, "Guess I'll go down and get my bags at the station." Fay begged to go with him and Maida nodded.

When they were on their way she called Henry at the office. "Oh, dear, dear, Henry, Danny showed up again this morning."

"Swell. We'll have a lot of fun with the old boy. How's he look?"

"I wish you had him in the kitchen making coffee, fooling in the refrigerator, ruining my discipline of Fay, leaving your books open, face down, all over the house!"

"Aw, don't mind that. I'll bring him in to the shop a couple of days. He and the kid will both have the time of their lives."

They came up the path, Danny carrying two heavy English-looking bags plastered with labels all colors of the rainbow. Fay was prancing around him, needing two steps for each one of his. To herself Maida said, "Broke again. No taxicab."

Afterward Dan dressed up in a suit of battered but jaunty tweeds and came out to the kitchen.

"Maida," he said, "could you lend me a bit of change? Say a quarter for a packet of fags and maybe one of those cone things for the wee one?"

Henry solved the money problem next morning. He slid five dollars in the door of Dan's room.

Maida resolved to do her duty. "Danny," she said, "how about getting you a job until you find some way to get to Londonberry?" Fay looked as if the heavens were about to open and take her favorite playmate away forever.

Dan pursed his lips, thought for an extended interval and said, "You know it's a point of pride with me to get along without working, Maida dear."

When Maida was at her wit's end one day the phone rang. She lifted the receiver. "This is the Department of State calling. Is there a man with you named Daniel Porter?"

"Yes . . . Yes . . . What is it?"

"Have him stay in half an hour. The Australian ministry will call him." This, she knew, was it. Although Dan had never been in trouble before, there was always a first time.

She fluttered around the telephone until the call came through. Dan answered. "Yes . . . Yes . . . This is he . . . Yes, out in the bush. Of course they can have it. Two thousand pounds . . . ? I'd be glad to give it to the government. Tungsten on it . . . ? How ripping! I'll send you the papers. Cheerio!"

To Maida he said, "Bit of all right. They want a piece of land 1 pound! Old girl, where's that mortgage you've always got the wind up about?"

University Lab Studies Effect Of Tropic Diet

Four Volunteers at U. of Ill. Live in 100-Degree Temperature.

For a year and a half University of Illinois scientists studied the effect of diet on four human volunteers who lived under tropic or desert conditions in an air-conditioned room in a campus laboratory. Alternate tests were run with the "climate" in the test room desert-dry or tropic-moist—but always at temperatures up around 100 degrees.

Object of the study was to learn about losses of chemicals through the skin in hot climates. The men sometimes sweat off as much as 20 pounds a day. It was found that not only salt, but also other minerals, and vitamins, were lost. The results were applied to a study of diet essentials.

The project was conducted by the animal nutrition staff of the College of Agriculture, headed by Prof. H. H. Mitchell and Prof. T. S. Hamilton. For years they have studied problems of animal nutrition. Their laboratory has produced some of the most basic and important answers to the nation's animal feeding problems.

For years the laboratory has studied feed requirements of domestic animals, and how available feeds can be formulated into rations which will satisfy the animal's requirements. Its findings are known around the world.

Scientists from many nations have come to the University of Illinois to learn about animal feeding and nutrition and to consult the laboratory's specialized library, which is perhaps the most complete of its kind in the world. The file contains 190,000 cards and is growing rapidly with a staff of 11 stenographers and clerks constantly at work recording and summarizing articles.

The tests with human subjects were far from the University's first involving use of controlled environment through air conditioning. Steers have for some time been kept in a completely air-conditioned room—the only one of its kind for such work—so that everything involved in their lives, including surroundings, might be completely controlled and analyzed. Other equipment of the laboratory includes air-conditioned rooms for rats, metabolism crates, and one of the nation's three respiration chambers for steers.

The Illinois scientists have published a widely-known book "The Biochemistry of the Amino Acids," and more than 200 scientific articles reporting their work, many based on months or years of intensive study and research.

Law Creating Military Furlough Motor Licenses

Springfield, Ill., July 17—The law creating Military Furlough Motor Licenses became effective today.

Enacted through the efforts of Secretary of State Edward J. Barrett, a veteran of both wars, the new law provides that all Illinois members of the armed forces who are home on sick leave or military furlough, may for a fee of fifty cents, obtain a windshield sticker which will act as a temporary permit in those cases where regular automobile plates have become obsolete. The permit is good for thirty consecutive days and they will be issued until the termination of the war with Japan.

GI automobile owners of the State who temporarily are using their automobiles are entitled to the bargain rates in "appreciation of the service they are rendering Illinois and the Nation," according to Secretary Barrett, who was the sponsor of the bill.

Another section of the same law permits discharged veterans upon presentation of proper credentials, to purchase automobile license plates for their vehicles for the period of July 1st until the end of the year, for one dollar.

Right Turn

Plain people in America are tired of regimentation. The figures show it. Late in April big-city newspapers were publishing tables of figures that grew out of a survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion, popularly called a "Gallup Poll." An article by George Gallup himself accompanied the figures I examined and they were both interesting and encouraging.

Nothing but victory in war could make bigger news. Nothing short of unconditional surrender by all of America's national enemies could be more gratifying than this: Suddenly there has come a popular yearning for the days when Mr. Customer was boss, when people got paid according to what their work was worth, when they had a right to anything their money would buy.

Back to Earth

Dr. Gallup says, "there are indications today that the largest group of the American people are not now particularly interested in seeing many changes or reforms in this country after the war. In fact, a survey just completed across the nation by the Institute reveals that the majority of Americans want things to remain pretty much as they were before the war."

The head of the Institute told a few hopeful details about individual answers to his questions. He says a good share of the minority who wish for post-war changes want to change back, back to conditions we knew years before the war. He didn't say so, but indicated clearly that the people are longing for the days of self-reliance, before the WPA, the CCC and the NYA.

Pompous Protests

People are beginning to walk around the idea of dictated social change to look at the back side of it. The gold point is beginning to rub off those cheap theories about all citizens doing a similar amount of work and drawing about the same pay, government guaranteed jobs for everybody, politically run banks and stores, regimented farmers, standardized houses, clothes and food. The sawdust is showing through.

The famous surveyor of public opinion grouped into three classes everybody his scouts questioned. The break-down was by educational attainment, (1) college, (2) high school and (3) grade school people. Now who, do you suppose, wants the social changes? The college class—58% of them. More than half the other two groups disagree but most of the cap-and-gown folk want America made over.

Fake High-Brows

Revolutionists, critics of representative government, malcontents and promoters of European theories have done an amazing job in American colleges. The mystery is—How! They smoke-screened the unique prosperity of this world's most favored people and, protected by academic indifference, spotlighted the flaws of popular government and fumed about unfair competition.

Selfishness is a trait of mortal man, not a special feature of private enterprise. This fact has been proved to a lot of honest people under war-time regimentation, needless restraints, questionable rationing and discourteous petty officials. It is losing favor. We have heard a lot about post-war demobilization of the Army and Navy. Evidently the public wants to hear about the demobilization of bureaucracy.

Distress Signal

The haughty Senior girl sniffed disdainfully as the tiny Freshman cut in. "And just why did you have to cut in when I was dancing?" she inquired testily.

The Freshman hung his head. "I'm sorry, ma'am, he said, but I'm working my way through college and your partner was waving a five-dollar bill at me."

In the November, 1944, general election, 24,492 servicemen voted in Florida.

Logical Result

Don't you think women change their minds oftener than men do? asked Uncle Bigger.

Yes, I do, declared Grandmother Trotter, they think faster.

A Detroit dog has been willed a $20,000 Florida winter home at Sebring by its mistress who died at the age of 72.

One-fourth of the farm production of 1944 went to the armed forces.
