Miss Mattie Seaton Is Bride of Dean Hutson

The home of the Jake Seaton, in Allerton, was the scene of a pretty afternoon wedding at one o'clock, Sunday, May 5, when their elder daughter, Miss Mattie, was united in the holy bonds of wedlock to Dean Hutson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Hutson, of St. Bernice, Ind. Rev. Morris, pastor of the Allerton Methodist church, read the single ring ceremony in the presence of the immediate families of the contracting parties. The home was beautifully decorated with spring flowers.

For her wedding the bride wore a blue street length dress, and her corsage was of white gardenias. Her sister, Miss Helen Louise, bridesmaid, wore a pink street length dress and a corsage of white gardenias.

Dale Hutson, brother of the groom, was his attendant.

The bride, a graduate of the Allerton Community high school, was employed as bookkeeper at Baldwin's garage, until recently, when she resigned her position there and accepted a position in the local beauty shop.

The groom, a graduate of the Chrisman high school, is a veteran of World War II, having recently been discharged from the service after serving for a term of six years. He is employed at Courson's in Allerton.

Following the ceremony, the happy young couple motored to Indianapolis to spend their honeymoon. They returned to Broadlands, Tuesday evening and are making their home at the Village Inn for the present.

A Third School Meeting Is Held

A third meeting for discussion of consolidating six school districts of the Broadlands area with the Broadlands Public school was held in the community building on Thursday night of last week with a good attendance.

Luther J. Black of Springfield and E. M. Harshbarger of Urbana were the speakers of the evening. Mr. Black brought out a number of interesting and informative points which had not been mentioned at the two previous meetings. He told of the large number of rural schools being closed throughout the state because of a lack of attendance. He explained that so many farmers had done away with their tenant houses, there were fewer children left to attend school. He also gave several other reasons why consolidations are being made.

In the opinion of a number of those attending the meeting, Mr. Black's talk went a long way toward convincing people that consolidation is here and it cannot be avoided by one-room schools.

The election will be held Saturday, May 18, and the proposition of consolidation will doubtless be approved by a safe majority.

LEARNING TO LIVE TOGETHER

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 18:15-17; 21: 22; Mark 10:35-45.

GOLDEN TEXT—By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.—John 13:35.

One world! Men have discovered in recent years that we do live in one world and that we must learn how to get along with one another, or we may find that we have destroyed civilization and one another. God has always taught in his Word that all men are of one origin, and that despite their differences, they are to live in unity and peace.

We have not yet learned to live together as nations. Let us set ourselves to the task of living together.

I. A Method for Dealing with Differences (Matt. 18:15-17).

This is the God-prescribed method for dealing with personal problems in the Christian church. That body in which love should reign is often rent by jealousies and personal resentments.

Such matters are to be dealt with promptly. The aggrieved one is not to wait for the sinner to make the approach, but is to go to him and place before him the evidence of his guilt.

If he proves stubborn, the next step is to bring some brethren along and talk it over again. This evidence of their concern may break the stubbornness, or their prayers may win him.

The final step is to bring the erring brother before the church. Now he may see the seriousness of his offense and repent. If not, there is one plain duty; he is to be put outside of the fellowship of the church.

II. A Measure for Determining Forgiveness (Matt. 18:21, 22).

Peter's question was a practical one. He supposed the case of one who sinned repeatedly against one who had shown a forgiving spirit.

We forgive and are ready to let it all be forgotten, when lo, the offender turns up with an even greater wrong, indignity or sin! Then there is weeping and apparent repentance, followed almost at once by another offense.

How long is this business to go on? The Jews said, "Three times, then let judgment fall." Peter, being a follower of Christ, went much farther. He would forgive seven times. Well, that's a lot of forgiveness; let us recognize that. Most of us haven't even gone as far as the Jews, and Peter is way ahead of us.

But it is not enough! Forgiveness which has any limit set on it is not forgiveness at all. The very genius of forgiveness demands that we do not stand there with a measuring line or an account book. It must be from the heart, without limit and without restraint.

III. A Means for Attaining Greatness (Mark 10:35-45).

To want to be truly great for God is certainly not a sin. In a world which was rejecting Christ and getting ready to crucify him, this mother wanted her two boys to have a place of honor in the service of Christ. So far, so good; but then came the thing which spoiled it all—selfishness.

To seek honor for oneself, or for those one loves in order that the ego might be inflated and self given a chance to show off, that is definitely unchristian.

If then it is right to seek proper greatness, how may it be done? Verses 43-45 tell us. It is by way of sacrificial service, the denial of self.

This world and its kingdoms say that the one who serves is inferior to the one who is served. In the kingdom of Jesus it is the one who serves who is greatest.

Where will such a path lead? For Christ it led to the cross, and beyond it the victory of resurrection day. It may mean death for us, for a real willingness to serve connotes a willingness to give all, even life itself, for his glory.

Army In Europe Lax

Discipline among many units of the United States Army in Europe has become so lax that General Joseph T. McNarney, commander of occupation forces in that theater, has issued orders to all the commanding officers and their subordinates, directing them to devote themselves to the reestablishment of discipline.

General McNarney attributes the low state of morale and efficiency in part to rapid demobilization and frequent changes of station by remaining troops. He says, however, that excuses previously made that effective action was impossible because of the rapid turnover of officers and men are no longer valid, and that continued tolerance of low standards of discipline will be considered as evidence of failure to command.

Specific delinquencies to which the general calls attention include the following:

Participation in black market activities and indulgence in drunkenness.

A high absent without leave rate and an excessive incidence of other military infractions.

High automobile accident rate. An excessive venereal disease rate.

General lack of smartness in appearance and conscientious observance of military courtesies.

Complaining attitude toward military authority and those duties essential to maintain high standards of soldier efficiency.

These evils, General McNarney declares, lead to a loss of respect for American authority by the enemy people and injures our reputation among our allies. But even more important is the loss of self-respect to the individual American concerned.

Save Food to Help Starving

Five hundred million people abroad are facing starvation due to war exhaustion of agriculture and drought, and homemakers are asked to save food to help these starving millions.

Fats and wheat products are the items most needed. Homemakers are asked to reduce purchases of wheat products by 40 per cent and fats by 20 per cent. In addition to this there are certain measures every homemaker can follow in her home to save these essential foods.

- 1. Prevent waste of bread.
2. Use less bread at each meal.
3. Use an extra potato in the place of bread—a serving of potatoes replaces a slice of bread.
4. Use oat cereals more often.
5. Use fruits for desserts instead of pies and pastries.
6. Serve more corn bread in the place of biscuits and loaf breads.

Every day you can save fats and oils at home this way:

- 1. Make better use of meat drippings for cooking and seasoning foods.
2. Serve fewer fried foods.
3. Save and re-use fats and oils for cooking purposes.
4. Render the excess fats on meats and save bacon grease for cooking purposes.
5. Salvage all fats that cannot be re-used and turn them in to your grocer or butcher.
6. Go easy on oils and salad dressings.

A teaspoon of fat a day saved by every man, woman and child in the U. S. will mean a total saving of at least one million pounds of fat a day.

Russia—Then And Now

One year ago, as the war in Europe drew to a close, Russia's fighting Red Army was hammering Berlin into submission and was receiving the unstinted praise of the entire Allied world. The Soviet Union had regained the esteem and respect which it had lost through its pact with Hitler in 1939 and its participation with him in the partition of Poland.

After the end of the war, relations between Russia and her Allies soon became strained, because of unexpected demands and obstructionist tactics on the part of Foreign Commissar Molotov at the Foreign Ministers' conference in London in September. The conference ended in total failure on October 2, after 22 days of wrangling.

Subsequent meetings of the United Nations Security Council and the foreign ministers have accomplished little, and American and British relations with Russia have drifted from bad to worse. A multitude of questions have arisen which seem impossible of solution, nearly all of them being due to Russia's evident determination to extend her domination far beyond the bounds of reason and justice.

In the opinion of many, our great ally of a year ago now is threatening to become a new world menace.

Women in the Church

by Mary Fowler

"From mothers to mothers,"

mothers in America to mothers in Europe—is the slogan of the American Mothers Committee of Golden Rule Foundation which is asking a million American mothers to send "a package and a friendly letter" to the distressed mothers who are victims of the war. The packages may be sent through the regular Jewish, Catholic and Protestant service depots (each church has address of nearest depot) each carton labeled "To a Mother," and in each enclosed a brief letter of cheer. The package should include articles of all kinds usable in a home.

Mrs. Harper Sibley, of Rochester, N. Y., president of the United Council of Church Women, and voted "The American Mother of 1945," has written this prayer of the mothers of the world: "Today the mothers of the world thank thee, God, that the war is over. Establish thou, O God, a new justice, so that flame and sword may never again ravage the earth. Have compassion upon the hungry, the sick, the homeless. Bind up the wounds of stricken humanity, let the shattered cities be rebuilt, let laughter return and joy, give us the fortitude that will be needed to complete thy work. O thou Father of us all, unite our hearts in reverence and in faith in one another, and help us to bring peace."

Household Hints

Clothes can be ironed more easily and quickly if sprinkled with hot water rather than cold.

Hooks, eyes, and snaps are most satisfactory and serviceable when sewed on with buttonhole stitch.

Uncooked oatmeal, if toasted to a delicate brown and used in making cookies, will have a delicious nutty flavor.

Washing eggs removes the natural protective covering and increases the tendency of the egg to absorb all flavors.

Cream of mushroom soup can be substituted occasionally for white sauce. It has a different and very pleasing flavor.

Put the small hem of the sheet at the top of the bed half of the time and wear on sheets will be evenly distributed.

In this day of food shortages, especially sugar, you may like to try crackers, cheese and jelly for a very simple but delicious dessert.

Grease spots may sometimes be removed from wallpaper by using a piece of blotting paper held against the spots with a warm iron—not hot.

Change method of folding napkins and tablecloths from time to time to avoid excessive wear on certain parts. The continued creasing in the same place weakens fabrics.

For the first time since the war began, half-pint glass jars for canning are being made. These small jars are just right for putting up home canned food for gifts. Little jars of relish, chili sauce, spiced cherries or peaches will make ideal Christmas remembrances.

ORIGIN OF CANINE TERMS EXPLAINED

Dog Authority, on Radio, Tells Meaning of Popular Expressions

Some unusually interesting facts about the origin and meaning of dog words and dog expressions were related by Harry Miller, executive secretary of the Gaines Dog Research Center, New York City, while a guest on the "What's the Good Word?" program over the Mutual network recently.

Originally, he said, the word "dog"—from the old English "dogge," the French "dogue" and the Latin "dogo"—was used to designate a certain type of fighting or hunting dog, but later came into general usage for all types of dogs. The word "dog" is believed to be a corruption of the sound "daw, daw, daw," which is the sound of the bark of a dog when heard in the distance.

The expression "dog days" comes to us from ancient times and has its origin in the fact that the sun is nearer Sirius, commonly called the Dog Star, during the hottest part of the summer. Today "dog days" are considered to continue for 40 days—20 days before and 20 days after Sirius appears; or from July 3 to August 11.

According to Mr. Miller, "mongrel" came from the word "mingle"—descriptive of a mixed or unknown pedigree; "Fido" is Latin for faithful—certainly a term well deserved by the dog, the most faithful of man's companions through the ages; and "Terrier" derives from the Latin word "terra" and the French word "terre," both meaning earth. Terriers were dogs originally employed for digging after game in the earth, as in hunting foxes and badgers.

Mr. Miller also gave quick explanations on how certain breeds of dogs got their names: "Schnauzer is derived from the German term for whiskers, for which this breed is famous.

"Chow Chow. Chow in Chinese means something that is edible, and in China the Chow Chow is favored as an all-around dog, including its use for food in an emergency.

"Whippet. The Whippet was always a running dog. It was noted that this dog had the habit of snapping at the heels of other dogs when running after game, and that the noise made by this snapping resembled the crack of a whip."

Spray or Dust — For 'Peace' In the Garden

Watch for destructive insects as soon as the first little leaves poke through the soil in your garden. They are unusually ravenous for tender young foliage, shoots, and buds, and the smart gardener will be on hand with the proper control even before the pests show up.

Two types of insect are well known nuisances—those that suck the juices or sap of the plant, as aphids or plant lice, and those that chew or bite off bits of the plant. The work of the first is seen in general droopiness and unhealthy appearance of the plant; the work of the second shows up in actual riddling of the leaves and other plant parts.

For sucking insects the spray or dust must hit and cover the insect, actually smothering it. Stomach poisons are required for destroying chewing insects. The material is dusted or sprayed thoroughly on all surfaces of the plant so as to make a deposit. When the insect starts to eat the plant, it also takes in some of the poison and is killed.

Either dusting or spraying can be effective if properly done with a good insecticide. Now that the war is over, many of the old brands and various new ones will be plentiful. You may want to adventure with some of the new ones, but always follow directions. In small gardens dusting is perhaps even easier than spraying. Here's a simple apparatus for applying insecticide dust which you yourself can easily prepare:

Take a square of cheesecloth, a strong string, and a slender stick. Spread the cheesecloth on a flat surface and pile the insecticide dust in the center. Gather the cloth by the four corners and tie the string securely around it, leaving the contents resting loosely inside.

Hold the bag with one hand directly over the plant and strike it gently on one side with the stick (see illustration). Part of an old broom handle will do nicely. The dust should cover all parts of the plant. It will stick better if put on when the plants are moist with dew, rain, or water from the hose. Do not put it on just before a shower or your work will be useless. By taking a little extra care, the dust will reach the under side of the leaves as well as the upper surfaces. It is important to choose a day when no wind is stirring.

If you spray instead of dust, see that the leaves and other parts of the plant are dry so that the solution will not be diluted as it strikes the surface. A hand spray with a glass jar attached is simple to use. The glass can be readily cleaned after using, and strong solutions cannot corrode it as they might a metal container. In using a spray, the same as with a dust, be sure to reach the underside of the foliage where insects are even more likely to be feeding than on top.

And fifty soldiers twisted necks out of joint while the laundress climbed aboard with a basket of clothes.

Once upon a time, children, there was a man who loved his neighbor as himself, aye, even better.

Sounds like a fairy tale. But it's a fact.

His neighbor was a widow with four sections of land and $80,000 worth of negotiable bonds.

Here's a good story that is being told on a local young lady. Well, she isn't as young as she was about 40 years ago. The said lady read in a newspaper an article by Dr. Somebody that everybody should do a somersault every morning before breakfast. She being a stout and buxom gal, who is always ready, willing and able to do anything that any other gal can do, made a bet with her husband that she could do it. Her husband reminded her she should remember that she wasn't as young as she once was and that she might break her fool neck. Nevertheless, she did the somersault. Then came next morning, and the Missus was so stiff and sore that she could scarcely move, see or talk; she thought she must have the mumps, measles, or something. She asked her husband to help her get out of bed. He not only refused to help her, but informed her that if she had to pay for her folly by lying in bed a day or two, it would be just too bad. Finally, the Missus managed to get out of bed, motor to a neighboring town and have a doctor straighten out her neck, for which she paid him the sum of $2. The woman's name? The News is sworn to secrecy.

Your dog trained to mind will love you the more for it.

Just forget it. Everything depends on the technique and common sense applied in the training. Remember the thousands of dogs trained for military work during World War II. You would hardly call them cowed, yet without training they would have been worthless. There is your answer.

"Praise when he has earned it goes a long way to encourage a dog with his training work. On the other hand, don't allow him to disobey without a reprimand. Quick correction at the moment of failure makes for effective training. Never spank a dog. If you have to discipline him, a slight tap on the nose will probably do the trick."

Army Finds New Tropical Skin Disease

Army doctors in the Southwest Pacific have found fewer than three cases per thousand men of a new noncontagious skin disease, which has been named atypical lichen planus and is known to the soldier as one of the varieties of "jungle rot." A typical lichen planus apparently becomes active partly because of an occasional unusual sensitivity of a few individuals to atabrine, the drug which was used so successfully in combating malaria among troops in the tropics, army medical reports indicate. However, army doctors emphasize that the vast majority of individuals who take atabrine regularly are not affected.

Medical officers soon learned to recognize atypical lichen planus in its early stages and were able to prevent its spread to other parts of the body. In all but a small percentage of cases, the disease has cleared up under treatment.

The disease usually first occurs in itchy, oozing, reddish and purplish patches on the skin. These patches may remain the same for several weeks or they may spread rapidly. Some patients develop a later stage in which raised scaly patches appear, often on the arms and legs. Following the acute stage of the disease, the inflamed patches leave purplish or brownish areas and often cause a temporary closure of sweat glands with a consequent lowered heat tolerance. In some cases patches of hair are temporarily lost.

Greedy Neighbors Spelled Doom of Phoenicia

Undisputed commercial boss of the Mediterranean for centuries, the tiny kingdom of Phoenicia waxed fat and prosperous, even when surrounded by powerful and evil neighbors. For about three centuries after 1000 B. C., Phoenicians dominated the commerce of the world.

She was a small nation, with about 200 miles of sea coast and a width of only 35 miles. Her two main cities, Sidon and Tyre, were busy and rich. Phoenicia manufactured many things the world needed—and she built and operated the most powerful fleet of merchant ships in her day. She even built ships for her land-bound neighbors.

Phoenicia, for centuries, was the shipmaster of the world. Her ships put in at English ports, in ports along the Black sea and traded in the strange harbors of India. She founded and built Carthage, lived in peace with her powerful neighbors until around 700 B. C. Then her maritime dominance began to ebb away.

The Greeks, envious, shrewd, calculating, viewed the prosperity of Phoenicia with envy, started to build more warships than she built merchant ships. Phoenicia's end was inevitable. Her shipping was chased from the seas. The Greeks, Assyrians, Persians, Egyptians, Romans and Phrygians overran the land, destroyed that which was Phoenicia.

Rotation Improves Mint

Peppermint is relatively a small crop, but according to the department of agriculture it is getting attention from research workers and is responding with bigger yields of oil on the mucklands of northern Indiana and southern Michigan, the principal mint area. The agricultural experiment stations of these states have been largely responsible for a change from a "meadowmint" method in which the crop was grown on the same ground for years, more or less like hay, to a system of rotation cropping. As a result, the mint farmers now grow their crop in cultivated rows one year, and then let it spread as it does readily into the "meadow" stage for one year. Then they grow other crops, as corn and potatoes, on the land for two years. This rotation gets the farmer a bigger tonnage that yields more oil. Another important gain is that the rotation keeps down weeds which give "off flavors" to peppermint oil.

Leaky Roof

The damage done by moisture seeping through a leaky roof can easily be many times the cost of the material and labor required to seal the openings in the roof. If the openings are small, they can be filled with roof cement and, if necessary, bonded with strips of roof repair material, and painted. The painting of the entire roof at intervals of a few years is real economy, in that the paint seals minute openings which might become larger if unprotected, and prevents the formations of other openings which otherwise might occur due to disintegration of the surface.

Fiber Removal Difficult

In the past ramie baffled man's attempt to decorticate it; that is, to remove the fiber from the stalk. In China, where the fiber had been known for several thousand years and used chiefly in luxury goods, taking the fiber from the stalk was done by hand, thus barring large-scale production. Machines injured the fiber or did not completely remove foreign substances, turning out a very brittle material as a result. In 1855, a process developed in France produced a "pure fiber in fine working condition," after ramie had made its debut on the European market in 1810.

Teach Every Dog Rudiments of Courtesy, Elias Vail Urges

Nine-tenths of the difficulties involving dogs would automatically be eliminated if each owner taught his dog a few elementary rules of canine courtesy, Elias C. Vail, managing director of the Gaines Research Kennels, Ridgefield, Conn., said in a recent talk.

Mr. Vail is one of the best known dog men in the country. In a quarter of a century of active dog work, he has bred, shown and trained some of America's foremost bench and field trial champions. The Research Kennels that he heads are a unique institution devoted to studying the facts on dog breeding, feeding, care and training, which will be of practical, helpful value to dog owners and dog breeders. Although the Kennels have been in operation less than two years, already they have become a veritable mecca for visiting dog lovers from all sections of the country.

"In handling any dog control is the key word," Mr. Vail said. "One cannot be said to really own a dog that has not been trained to obey commands. A running, jumping, yapping dog is no credit to himself or his owner and very undesirable from the standpoint of the community."

"To make your dog a real pal and have him greatly admired by friends and strangers alike, he must be taught a minimum of four things: 1. To know his name perfectly; 2. To come to you when called—and this must hold good outside as well as inside; 3. To sit down or lie down on order or signal; 4. To comply with your wishes whenever you command 'No!' This last is perhaps the most important lesson of all. Your 'No!' must be so impressive that he will immediately desist from whatever he may be doing at the moment, whether it be eating his dinner or smelling the pants leg of some stranger.

"Ten or 15 minutes once—but
