Broadlands will go on daylight saving time Sunday, June 9, at 6:00 p. m. The village adopted the fast time Wednesday night, following a vote of the residents of the Broadlands community. The result of the balloting showed a vote of 92 to 36 for the change in time.

Cooley Rites Held Sunday At Charleston

Longview—Funeral services were held at the Christian church in Charleston at 2:30 p. m., Sunday for Mrs. Hubert Cooley, 45, former Longview resident, who died of a heart ailment at 3:30 p. m. Friday of last week. Burial was in Roselawn cemetery at Charleston.

Mrs. Cooley, the former Minnie Ringo, was born in Longview in March, 1901, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ringo. She moved to Charleston in 1920.

Surviving are her husband, a daughter, Mrs. Ethel Cobble, Charleston; five sons, LaVerne, Mattoon; Hubert, jr., Charleston; Gene, with the AAF at Memphis, Tenn.; and Bobby and Ronald, at home; three grandchildren; and two brothers, W. E. Ringo, Longview, and Frank Ringo, Alton.

Friends Hunt Four Hours For 8-year-old Homer Boy

Ray Pruitt, eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Pruitt of Homer, was the subject of an intensive search of the community Saturday by the parents and a group of friends. E. C. Harvey and Ray Tate finally located the youngster in a bread box at the Freeman tavern, Ogden, about 11:30 p. m.

The child intimated to playmates Saturday afternoon that he intended to go swimming in Salt Fork river, and when he did not return home for the evening meal, it was believed for a time that he might have drowned.—Homer Enterprise.

Car-Truck Collision

Oliver Boyd and Glen Miller, traveling south in the Boyd coupe, and a Murdock man, traveling east in a truck, had a collision about noon Monday at the intersection near the local depot. Boyd and Miller escaped with a scratch or two as did the Murdock man. Miller leaped from the coupe before it crashed into the truck. Both the coupe and the truck were badly damaged. They were towed to the Brewer Chevrolet garage.

Oliver P. Dickson, Homer Postmaster, Dies

(Homer Enterprise)

Oliver P. Dickson, 66-year-old Homer postmaster, died at 8 p. m. Wednesday, May 26, at his home in the northwest part of Homer. In poor health for the last few months, he became suddenly ill about 6 p. m. and death came two hours later.

Funeral services were held at 3 p. m. Friday in Homer Presbyterian church, Reverend Lee H. Smith officiating. Masonic burial rites were in G. A. R. cemetery.

Dr. Dickson was well known in East Central Illinois as a veterinarian before his appointment to the Homer post office by the late President Roosevelt. He was born June 13, 1879.

Survivors in the immediate family are the widow, Mrs. Maude Dickson; a daughter, Mrs. D. M. Madigan, Penfield; two sons, Ralph, Gary, Ind., and Ronald, Peoria; and four grandchildren.

A 32d degree Mason, Dr. Dickson also was affiliated with the Homer Masonic lodge, and I. O. O. F. and Woodman lodges. He was a member of Homer Presbyterian church and was active in its affairs.

Finds Teeth Lost For Three Years in Field

Sidney, June 1—Max Miller, 45-year-old farmer residing on the Stamey farm, one-half mile south of Sidney, is again enjoying his upper set of false teeth, after doing without them three years, while they were lost in a field on the farm.

A few days ago, while discing the same field, Mr. Miller noticed something shining on the ground and stopped his tractor to discover his missing molars, as good as new, but needing a good cleaning.

At the time Miller lost his teeth, he was carrying them in his pocket, to rest his mouth. He had been burning corn stalks and plowing the field, and it is presumed that he plowed them under, and this year they were again brought to the surface. He had always been sure they would be found and did not purchase another set. Each time he worked in that field, he was constantly on the lookout for his teeth, and was not surprised when they eventually were recovered.

Burglars Enter Place Home Near Muncie

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Place, near Muncie, was robbed Saturday evening while the Places were attending a show at Fithian. Burglars took loot estimated at $600, including watches, clothing and other valuables. Entrance was made by prying open a window.

Mr. and Mrs. Place are former Homer residents.—Homer Enterprise.

Special Masonic Meeting

Worshipful Master Harry Archer has announced that Broadlands Lodge, A. F. & A. M., will meet on Wednesday, June 12 at 8 p. m. (DST) for the purpose of conferring the third degree. Junior Warden Lloyd Davis will serve refreshments.

The date originally set for this meeting was Friday, June 7, but due to the fact that it conflicted with Masonic meetings elsewhere, it has been postponed to Wednesday, June 12.

The Masons Elect Howard Clem Master

Harry Archer Is the Retiring Master; Installation Ceremonies June 17.

Howard Clem became the new worshipful master of Broadlands Lodge, A. F. & A. M., at the annual election Monday evening in the Masonic temple.

Other officers elected for the coming year were Harry Nohren, senior warden; James Wilson, junior warden; George Cook, treasurer; Harry Archer, secretary.

Mr. Dicks, who has been secretary for 17 years, requested that he be relieved of his position. Accordingly, a new secretary was elected. And Junior Warden Lloyd Davis withdrew to enter the ministry.

Harry Archer is the retiring worshipful master.

The newly-elected worshipful master will name the appointive officers and installation ceremonies will be held on Monday evening, June 17.

Mrs. Helen Dalzell Is Hostess to Wesleyan Guild

The Wesleyan Guild class of the Methodist church met at the home of Mrs. Helen Dalzell on Monday evening, with Mrs. Neva Monroe assistant hostess.

Mrs. Dalzell led the devotions which consisted of scripture reading from the 133d Psalm; the Lord's prayer repeated in unison; and a song, "Blest Be the Tie."

Mrs. Betty Dicks had charge of the business meeting, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Gladys Walker.

Several contests were enjoyed, Mrs. Isabel Dicks and Mrs. Bertha Cook receiving prizes.

The hostesses served sandwiches, gingerbread with whipped cream, and coffee.

Those present were Mesdames Ida Messman, Betty Dicks, Bertha Cook, Isabel Dicks, Gladys Walker, Valeria Loyd, Ella Miller, Harriett Smith, Emma Darnall, Neva Monroe and Helen Dalzell.

Homer Fire Department Is Called Wednesday

(Homer Enterprise)

Homer fire department was called at 12:15 a. m. Wednesday to the Francis Porterfield farm eight miles south of here to extinguish a tractor fire. Porterfield had the fire under control, however, when the department arrived.

He had just come in from the field after plowing by electric light, and had filled the machine with gasoline for the next day's run. He noticed the blaze from his house as he was preparing to retire.

After telephoning the fire department, Porterfield covered the blaze with wet sand which he keeps in a tub near the gasoline pump. The tractor was badly damaged but not beyond repair.

TRAINING FOR SERVICE

LESSON TEXT — Mark 6:7-13; Luke 10:1, 2, 14:25-27.
MEMORY SELECTION — And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me.—Matthew 10:38.

Workers for God, and with God! Such is the high privilege of the men and women who respond to his call and who go out to witness for him.

On the one side, we have a world desperately in need of the gospel, perhaps more so than any generation in history. On the other hand, we have the gospel of the saving grace of God in Christ Jesus, the only solution to the problems of mankind, the perfect answer to man's need.

How shall these two be brought together? By sending out witnesses to tell the glad tidings of redemption and peace. Where shall we find these witnesses? In the church, for only the believer in Christ is qualified to tell others of his saving grace.

Our lesson, in telling of the Lord's calling and sending forth laborers into his harvest field, gives us much helpful instruction regarding service for the Lord. We learn that

I. God Provides for His Workers (Mark 6:7-10).

Jesus sent out his twelve disciples two by two, thus providing every worker with fellowship and help in hours of discouragement and trial. This also served to keep a man in balance so that he would not become self-willed and proud of his own achievements.

It was a wise provision. Perhaps the church should have observed it with more care, and thus have saved some good workers from going astray.

They were not to be cumbered with extra equipment, nor be concerned about their daily sustenance. The Lord would provide through the hospitality and generosity of his people.

Note that the expected hospitality was not to be allowed to hinder their work (cf. v. 10 with Luke 10:7). Many a preacher or evangelist has ruined a series of meetings by letting social life hinder prayer, soul-winning, or preparation for preaching.

II. God Gives Power to His Workers (Mark 6:7, 11-13).

He gave them authority over evil spirits, so that they could drive them out. He gave them power to heal; he gave them power to preach effectively.

The man who goes forth to speak for the Lord does not have to muster up his own puny powers or depend on the weak arm of some human helper. His resources are infinite and omnipotent. He speaks for the Almighty God. He has a message with saving power.

All too often the servants of the Lord are apologetic and hesitant in their ministry. They mistake weakness for meekness, and in their desire not to assert themselves, they fail to speak a ringing "Thus saith the Lord."

We need a revival of authoritative preaching, of that holy boldness which was not afraid to rebuke sin and any unwillingness to do the Lord's will (v. 11). We need a new emphasis on repentance (v. 12).

III. God Calls Helpers for His Workers (Luke 10: 1, 2).

After the twelve were sent out, he called and commissioned the seventy. That blessed process has gone on ever since. How blessed it is that even in our day of unbelief and sin, hundreds of young men and women are going out to all the mission fields of the world to work with older and experienced missionaries.

Perhaps these words will be read by some young man or woman who has felt the promptings of the Spirit of God to go into his service. Step out by faith just now, and begin to prepare yourself for God's service. If the writer of these notes can be of help to you, do not hesitate to write to him. God is looking for more workers.

Do not overlook the important admonition in verse 2. The Lord is waiting for his people to pray for laborers for fields which stand white and ready for harvest.

IV. God Requires Self-Denial of His Workers (Luke 14:25-27).

The mighty works and the powerful words of Jesus made it impossible for people to ignore him. Multitudes followed him, but he, knowing the fickleness of the human heart, faced them with the real demands of discipleship.

The Lord was never concerned with mere numbers. He wanted followers whose hearts were right. The church has broken down its testimony in the world by its frantic desire for more members, great crowds, large church buildings, at the expense of compromise of testimony.

The requirement of the Lord is unmistakable. A man or woman who is to serve him must put him first. No worldly ambition or earthly friendship, no, not even the tender love of family, can come between the Lord and his servant. He is either Lord of all, or he is not Lord at all.

Report By Mr. Byrnes

In his radio address to the nation recently, Secretary of State James F. Byrnes gave a concise report on the Paris conference of foreign ministers of the United States, Britain, France and Russia. Although he expressed a certain degree of optimism concerning future peace negotiations, there was little in his report that was reassuring.

Mr. Byrnes admitted that the results of the conference were disappointing, but mentioned one or two minor "concessions" made by Foreign Commissar Molotov of Russia. These concessions were merely slight modifications of Russian demands which were altogether brazen and presumptuous in the first place—such as her claim to $300,000,000 in reparations from Italy and the demand for control of extensive territory in North Africa.

The fact is that Russia has not shown the slightest inclination to make a fair settlement of any important matter concerning which grave differences have arisen since V-J Day. This is true of questions which have come before the United Nations as well as those discussed by the council of foreign ministers.

Russia simply won't play ball unless she is permitted to make the rules, which must be entirely in her favor. It is all a sorry mess, and there seems that her former Allies are unable to do anything about it.

Favor To A Senator

A few days ago, Senator C. Wayland Brooks of Illinois, asked a favor of his fellow members which was quite important to him, and the Senate graciously granted his request by unanimous consent. The Congressional Record contains the following account of the incident:

"Mr. Brooks: I realize full well the importance of the pending legislation, and I shall be present to vote on it; but I ask unanimous consent that after that vote is taken I may be absent from the chamber of the Senate for the remainder of the afternoon.

"The Presiding Officer: Without objection, the request of the Senator from Illinois is granted.

"Mr. Brooks: My bride-to-be and I are fully conscious of the importance of the legislation and the problems confronting the nation at this moment. We are, therefore, not leaving the city, but I am happy to have obtained unanimous consent to be absent for the remainder of this afternoon, so that I may attend my own wedding."

So, Senator Brooks, 49, a veteran of World War I, who was wounded seven times in action, and was promoted from corporal to lieutenant for gallantry, and Mrs. Arthur J. Peavey, 39, were duly married.

Even if he had not obtained consent of the Senate, Senator Brooks would hardly have been penalized if he had played hooky under such circumstances.

Sidelights

According to the Cleveland Plain Dealer, the Russian Attitude in the Iran case seems to be: "To the victor belong the oils."

Broadcasts to floor-pacing fathers from hospital delivery rooms have been advocated by some hospital officials. We presume that the idea would follow along the lines of a sports announcer giving the details of a prize fight with the cry of the youngster, as he first views the world, comparable to that all important moment when the winner in the scrap takes over the microphone and says: "We won, Pop, will be home soon."

We are told that one of the prize stories related by a sugar rationing board concerns the man who came before one of the sessions and attested: "My wife has no sugar at all in the house, not an ounce of it." The chairman of the board heard his plea and said, "Remember now, you are on oath. You must tell the truth or you'll go to jail." The man thought a moment, glanced around to see if he might be overheard, and quietly whispered: "In that case I'll tell you the truth. We ain't married."

After a diligent search, Sheriff Tom Jordan, of Muskogee, Okla., finally gave up his hunt for a mysterious defendant in a gambling complaint. A warrant was issued for See Below along with others charged with gambling and when no such person could be located it was found that the county attorney's office, in preparation of the complaint, wrote "see below" on the form and listed the defendants at the bottom of the page. It appeared that See Below was one of the boys wanted.

It has been said that if printer's ink once gets in his blood a newspaperman is never happy away from his typewriter and the daily grind. But there are always exceptions—at least there is one columnist in the nation who has ended his writing career at the same desk with no regrets. This one, in fact, arrived at "30" with this farewell: "It is with the greatest of pleasure that we bid goodbye to our readers," and he meant it. He was leaving his job as sports editor of a magazine published at the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary where he had been associated with his readers for some time.

A man walked into a Milwaukee branch post office recently, took off his coat and handed it to the man at the window, and said: "Weigh this." The clerk placed the coat on the scales as the man jerked off his hat and said: "Weigh this, too." By this time the man had one of his shoes off and was removing the other. He added the shoes to the pile of clothing, bringing the weight to 12½ pounds. The clerk was wondering how far this "strip tease" was going when the man explained that he was of Greek extraction, that he had an extra coat, hat and pair of shoes at home, and that he wanted to know if he could send them all to Greek relief in the same package. The clerk explained that there is an 11-pound limit on packages sent overseas, but suggested that the shoes be placed in a second bundle.

How did you happen to choose that name?

Well, we just called him Ben until he had kittens.

Not a chance, lady, answered the father. He bites.

A recruit passed a captain without saluting. The captain stopped him.

"Take a look at me," he said. "Do you attach any special significance to this uniform?"

The new soldier looked him over, then grinned.

"Why, you lucky dog!" he exclaimed, "You've got one that fits!"

Women IN THE CHURCH
by Mary Fowler

"Christian women all over the world must bind themselves together for the common task—that of working in Christian love to bring about international peace," says Mrs. A. A. Perez, director of the Bureau of Public Welfare of the Philippine Islands and a leading member of the Methodist Church. "Through individual efforts, let them preach the highest meaning of life. God's teachings must permeate the social and economic life of all nations. No other factors can bring peace into the world... Christ is the fulfillment and the realization of all that is best in every one of us, regardless of color or race. Christ is the only cure for the present chaotic condition in the world; his social teaching is sufficient to bring understanding among those who have and those who have not; his law of love can solve international problems where international conferences might fail."

The Wolf

By JIM KJELGAARD
McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

FERGUSON shifted the frozen beaver from his left hand to his right and ruffled snow curled in tiny cascades over the tips of his snowshoes as he broke into a trot. He came out of the spruces into the clearing where his cabin squatted. Blue smoke curled out of the chimney. But his wife's snowshoes no longer hung on their pegs over the door. She was away on her trap line.

Ferguson swung a little faster down the trail he had made when he left the cabin that morning. He grinned whimsically. It took ten years' experience successfully to run a trap line. But Ann had insisted on having her own and occasionally she brought in a pelt.

He reached the cabin and stopped short. Sharp and clear in the new snow the imprints of his wife's snowshoes led straight away from the cabin, down the trail she took through the spruces. Just as sharp and clear, and just as fresh, another line of snowshoe tracks swerved out of the spruces to join them.

After a moment Ferguson was shocked into sluggishness. Five months before, a week after he had brought Ann here, he came out of the forest toward the cabin late one night and heard her scream. He started to run and burst into the lighted hut without stopping to see what danger threatened. Ann was there, a trickle of blood running down her cheek and her clothes half ripped from her back. With her was a renegade half-breed named Anatik.

Charging in with bull-like rage, Ferguson had beaten Anatik with his fists, knocked him down again and again, smashed his face to a pulp, and would have killed him if Ann hadn't interfered.

He should have known that Anatik would never forget or forgive. For a moment he stared as if hypnotized at the double line of tracks.

Then he dropped the beaver in the snow. Not stopping to remove his own snowshoes he ran into the cabin, snatched his deer rifle and, as fast as he could, ran down the plainly marked trail.

But even as he ran he looked carefully both at the trail ahead and at the tracks he followed. The two snowshoe trails intermingled, and earlier that morning a big timber wolf had also run down the trail. The wolf, with characteristic cunning, had run at the side where traps were least likely to be.

Ferguson reached up with his left hand to brush his hat from his head. Without breaking stride, transferring his rifle from his right hand to his left, he slipped his arms out of his coat sleeves.

Just ahead, at the top of a little rise and to one side of the trail, a bushy spruce showed sharply green against the white background. Ferguson raced up the slope and stopped suddenly to swing his rifle around.

He stood with his legs braced, his chest heaving mightily as he strove to get his breath. Anatik lay stretched out at the foot of the evergreen, trying to shrink into the snow, his fear-filled eyes staring at Ferguson. Ferguson cocked his rifle, raised it and brought it down again.

"I reckon not," he said slowly. "I ought to blast you where you lie. But for her sake I'll let you live."

He read the signs etched plainly in the snow. Anatik, indeed, had not forgotten who had beaten him. He had known that Ferguson would follow the double trail, had planned that he would run to his death in so doing. There was a deep depression on the trail where he had stayed a long time in ambush. Then, seeking better concealment, he had crawled under the spruce. But the big timber wolf had also walked beneath the tree.

Ferguson smiled tenderly. A trapper, wanting to take that wolf, would plan to shoot or trap it on a ridge or in some thicket a wolf might go. Only an inexperienced woman, seeing wolf tracks under the spruce, would expect it to be in the same place the next day.

Ferguson smiled again at seeing the heavy wolf traps clamped on each of Anatik's wrists.

Are Your Tomato Vines at Stake?

Raising a crop of tomatoes in your garden is something like bringing up a family. Children and tomato vines can both be allowed to go their own sweet way, following their natural inclinations; or, you can keep them from having all the freedom they'd like and wield a firm hand in the direction you want them to head. Both ways of thinking have enthusiastic followers.

Take tomatoes. If you have plenty of space and the ground under the vines is not likely to be wet causing the fruit to rot, you can often get a splendid crop with less work by just letting the vines sprawl. On the other hand there are a number of advantages to training tomato vines.

In a small garden there is real economy of space by staking because the plants can be set closer together and many more grown in the same area. Getting the vines off the ground allows them more sunshine and often prevents the tangled mass of leaves and stems from shading the fruits and delaying ripening. When the vines are off the ground, the fruits usually ripen more evenly and are easier to gather without breaking or pulling up the vines.

There are several suitable ways of staking tomato vines. One of the customary methods is to use poles about six feet long by one inch square, driving them a foot into the ground, one beside each plant. Some like to nail two or three short crosspieces to each pole to form a trellis. Tomato plants set along a fence will sometimes form an ornamental as well as useful border, and the fence posts, if slender, will serve as supports to which the vines can be tied.

There's a simple effective way of staking called the "tepee" method. Four poles about five feet in length are set beside four tomato plants equally distant from each other. The stakes need not be driven into the ground but are tied firmly together at the top (see illustration). Each plant is fastened to and supported by its pole.

Whatever method of staking is used, all the side shoots except the trunk and two main branches should usually be nipped off before the plants are tied to their supports. This encourages stronger growth and better fruits. For tying the plants be sure to use soft string or strips of rag. Hard twine may cut or break the branches, especially when the wind blows.

Saddles

Casper, Wyo., boasts a saddle maker who has been at the business for forty years in that city. He knows his trade, a fact not hard to prove. You see there are a great many people in his state who know a good saddle when they see one and a saddle maker has to be good to stay in business long in Wyoming. Not many days ago I dropped into his shop and got introduced.

I was a prospective customer. We need a couple of good saddles at the Harding College stable and had shopped close to home with no success. To my astonishment the Casper saddler was no better able to supply our needs than those in Memphis or Little Rock. He was able, however, to give me some facts I had not learned before from any of the saddle stores visited earlier.

Saddletrees Scarce.

A good saddle is built on a wooden frame called a tree, much as a shoe is built on a wooden last, except that the tree is built into the saddle and becomes a permanent part of it. Saddletrees are made by men of a highly specialized craft. Trees have to be shaped right, no bulkier and no heavier than strength and design require. Men able to do such things with wood are by no means common.

During the war Uncle Sam needed skillful saddletree men in the construction of gliders. "The government employed most of them at about $160 a week," the saddler declared. Good saddles not being made any more, might have skyrocketed in price but the Office of Price Administration fixed a ceiling to stop it. Stocks of new saddles soon were bought up by users at ceiling prices.

But the War Is Over

Now the glider business is slack. Wonders have been done with gliders and they are not being forgotten, but fewer are being built. Unemployed saddletree men would like to start building saddletrees again—there's quite a demand. Living costs have built up, however, and they think they ought to have $120 a week. That's $6,000 a year and 25% under their defense-plant scale of pay.

Saddle manufacturers, like the one in Casper, want trees because—no trees, no saddles. They are willing to pay tree builders $120 a week and wouldn't kick a bit if saddles might be sold at prices they would easily bring. I guess there are thousands of customers besides me who are ready to pay more for a saddle than it would have cost in the months immediately before the war.

Ceiling Lingers On

"If today I engaged a good tree builder," said the Wyoming saddler, "paid him $120 a week in return for his best services and most competent work, and then sold the total product at ceiling prices, it would pay about three-fourths of the wages of the man who made the tree." Obviously it is out of balance. Craftsmen, manufacturers, dealers and users are all waiting for ceilings to lift.

The saddle business is not large when you contrast it to automobiles and railroads, but it is no isolated case. Many small business men are smothering for sales that are tied up by O.P.A. Small plants, employing less than 1,000 men, provide jobs for 78% of industrial workers. Carried too far, this price policy can bring panic and poverty. Liquidating some war-year bureaus would help balance the national budget and help clear the way for new and much needed production.

Sugar Substitutes

According to food specialists, in most recipes one sugar may be substituted for another, measure for measure. This is true for making puddings, pie fillings and baked custards. With brown sugar the flavor will be delicately caramel and the color somewhat darker. Since brown sugar custards tend to curdle, it is especially important that baking temperature be kept low.

Brown or confectioner's sugar may be substituted for granulated in cookie recipes; but with cakes you'd better use the kind the recipe calls for. Remember that the kind of sugar greatly affects texture of cakes and substitutions may cause failure.

Ice cream—either plain or fruit-flavored—can be satisfactorily sweetened with confectioner's sugar. Brown sugar is good in chocolate, mocha or butterscotch ice cream.

Prevent Scurvy

Vitamin C from pine needles helped to keep the Russian army free from scurvy during the war, says "Industrial and Engineering Chemistry." Investigated and used also was the unripe fruit of the walnut. Pine needles are widespread and accessible during the winter months, explains the journal. The vitamin C content is not high, but it is said to exceed five times that of lemons. The meat of unripe walnuts contains about 2 per cent vitamin C. To obtain the anti-scorbutic material, the pine needles were covered with water containing about 0.5 to 1 per cent of liquid bread yeast, and this mixture was kept for two or three days at 86 or 90 degrees F. Use of "vitapine," it was said, prevented an outbreak of scurvy in the Russian forces, in which there were 200,000 cases during the First World War.

Safety First

A woman was driving along a country road when she saw a couple of repair men climbing up telephone poles.

"Look at those fools!" she exclaimed. "They think I never drove a car before!"
