Hopes for universal driver training among high school students soared this year when the Illinois and Indiana state boards approved new plans for the 1946-47 school years.

Recognizing the inability of some school districts to provide the facilities for a course that would entail full time instructors, dual control cars and a full semester of regular classes, the schools will now have an opportunity to work out a plan of combined class-work and home training.

Full details of the proposed plan will be forwarded to all school superintendents this fall by the Chicago Motor Club. The club has offered to train the instructors, provide the work sheets for home training that will require the assistance of an adult member of the family and use of the family car, and provide text books at cost.

Ex-Broadlands Resident Dies Sunday In Indiana

Funeral services for Fredrick Wiese, who died Sunday, June 30, were held Tuesday afternoon, July 2, at the local St. John's Church, with Rev. Carl Hartwig, pastor, officiating. Mrs. Howard Mohr sang "Sweet Hour of Prayer," and "Beyond The Sunset," with Miss Edna Schumacher accompanying.

The flower girls were Misses Evelyn and Eleanor Hartwig, Marian and Frances Dohme.

August Fredrick Wiese, son of Fredrick and Wilhelmina Wiese, was born Nov. 17, 1866, on a farm south of Sidney. He was one of seven children. At the age of three years, his parents moved to the farm known as the "Wiese Home Place," in Raymond township, where he lived until he married and established a home of his own. He attended South Raymond school until he was 15 years of age, at which time he became a student at the Lutheran confirmation school at Philo, where he was confirmed on Palm Sunday, 1882. He was united in marriage to Anna Edens of Broadlands in April, 1889. Their first home was near where Block Station is now located. After three years they moved to Lohrville, Iowa, where they resided until 1896, when they returned to Illinois and located near Brocton, where they lived until the death of Mrs. Wiese in 1938. After living alone a few years his health began to fail and he went to Valparaiso, Ind., to make his home with his daughter, Mrs. Cora Ogden, where he passed away June 30, 1946, having attained the age of 79 years, 7 months and 13 days.

His home was blessed with four children, all of whom survive; they are George Wiese, Filson; Mrs. Cora Ogden, Valparaiso, Ind.; Emil Wiese, Homer; Mrs. Bessie Friend, of Danville. He is also survived by 11 grandchildren; and two brothers, Emil Wiese of Newman; and Henry Wiese, Broadlands; many other relatives and a host of friends. The mortal remains were laid to rest in St. John's cemetery.

Miss Maxine Henson Bride of Veras Turner

Miss Maxine Henson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Henson, Broadlands, and Veras D. Turner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Turner, Newman, were united in marriage at 3 p. m., Sunday, June 30, in the United Brethren Church in Broadlands, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

Reverend Frank Turner of Lincoln officiated at the double ring ceremony and Reverend W. M. Robinson, local pastor, gave the prayer.

Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. Anna Struck, organist, played a recital of bridal music and accompanied Miss Lyla Witt who sang, "I Love You Truly," "Because," and "The Lord's Prayer." The Bridal Chorus from "Lohengrin," was played as the processional and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" as the recessional. Tall white baskets of gladioli with palms and candelabra decorated the altar.

Miss Lois DeWitt of Champaign, a close friend and former roommate of the bride, served as maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Jane Anderson, of Broadlands, and Miss Gale Maxfield, of St. Louis, cousin of the bride. Lolas Turner attended his brother as best man, and the ushers were Frank Harris of Elmhurst, and Harvey Myers of Sidney.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely white gown fashioned with a white satin bodice trimmed with white lace and a full skirt of net. She wore a fingertip-length veil, which was held in place by white carnations on either side. Her bridal bouquet was white carnations centered with an orchid. Her only jewelry was a double-strand of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom.

Miss DeWitt wore a pink or-gandy gown and a shoulder length veil fashioned the same as the bride's and she wore sweet peas in her hair. She carried a bouquet of roses and baby's breath. Miss Anderson wore a yellow net gown and Miss Maxfield wore a blue net gown and they both wore little net hats. Their bouquets were also of roses and baby's breath.

Mrs. Henson, mother of the bride, wore a light blue mesh dress with white accessories and a corsage of pastel shades of roses. Mrs. Turner, mother of the bridegroom wore a dark blue sheer dress with white accessories and a corsage of roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held on the lawn at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride's table was beautifully decorated with a large wedding cake, topped with miniature figures of a sailor and his bride. Miss Evelyn Prah, Miss June Wallington and Miss Dorothy Means, all of Champaign, served at the reception.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner left later on a wedding trip to Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin and will be at home after their trip at 503 South Wright, Champaign. For going away, the bride wore a black and white linen suit with black and white accessories and the orchid from her bridal bouquet.

Mrs. Turner attended Illinois State Normal University and has been employed the past year in the bursar's office at the University of Illinois. Mr. Turner was in the Navy for 28 months. He

THE LAW IN JESUS' DAY

LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 6:4-9; Matthew 5:17-19; Mark 10:17-22.
MEMORY SELECTION—Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I come not to destroy, but to fulfill.—Matthew 5:17.

Jesus Christ is the believer's final authority. He is both our Saviour and our Lord. He is our teacher, our guide, our pattern in all things. It is therefore of the highest importance that we know his attitude toward the Old Testament laws, and that is just what we are to consider in the lessons of the next three months under the general title, "Jesus Interprets Old Testament Laws."

Our introductory lesson tells us of the origin, interpretation and application of the law, then we go in later lessons to consider the Ten Commandments in the light of the teachings of Jesus.

It is appropriate to point out that, far from being outmoded, the Ten Commandments are really the basis of all moral law. They need a diligent restudy and re-emphasis in our day of disregard of moral standards.

I. The Law—Given by God (Deut. 3:4-9).

Our God is the one true God who is to have the complete and constant devotion of all. The fact that so many men have ignored him explains the awful depth to which the world has fallen.

This one and only true God has given through his servant, Moses, the fundamental moral law for the government of man, and he is to give diligent attention to it at all times.

Religion in the household (v. 7) should include the teaching of the Word, and the easy natural discussion of spiritual things in all the varying circumstances of home life. Blessed are the parents who make it easy for children to talk about the things of God as naturally and unafectingly as they discuss the other phases of life which interest them.

The law of God should go with his people into their daily occupations (v. 8), not in any formal or stilted way but as the normal expression of their love for him. It should be evident to all who enter the home that the Lord is loved and honored (v. 9).

II. The Law Fulfilled by Jesus (Matt. 5:17-19).

The law of God is eternal, never to be abrogated, never set aside. Christ himself, although we might properly say that he was in reality the lawgiver and thus had power and authority over the law, indicated his purpose in coming to be that of giving the law its full meaning, not of destroying it.

One could wish that those who profess to be his servants might have the same measure of regard for God's law. If they did, they obviously would not be so ready to ignore it, so quick to change it or ready to accept with their Master every "jot and tittle"; that is, even the minutest detail of his Word.

It is a mark of greatness "to do and teach" the law of God (v. 19), and of pathetic smallness to break his commandments and to teach others to disobey God. Some of the supposed great men of this world are mighty small when they are measured by God's yardstick.

The one who recognizes Christ as the fulfillment of the law will go on in consistent living. In his strength and by his grace we are to obey every moral precept.

III. The Law—Applied to Man (Mark 10:17-22).

The moral law, which is God's law, is good and in its keeping man finds guidance for his life. Apart from Christ, however, he finds himself unable to keep the law.

The gospel of the grace of God in Christ Jesus takes us a step beyond the law, and it is a great step for here we meet and follow the one who is greater than the law, the giver of eternal life.

Obedience to the commandments brings a man up to the very entrance upon that life, but to enter in he must have more than the "things" of the law; he must have the person who is "the door" to eternal life.

The young man who came to Christ was rich. His mind was obsessed with things. He had made it his business to observe the law, and had done well (v. 20), but his soul was not satisfied. He thought one more "thing" that he could do would accomplish his purpose.

The general attitude of the man was commendable. He sensed his lack of the vital something which would remake his life. He came to the right one—the Lord Jesus—with his question.

His failure to go beyond the things of the law to a faith in Christ, however, showed that he loved his possessions more than he desired to follow the Lord.

Draft Extension

Congress has been wrangling for months over the extension of Selective Service, the former law for which expired on May 15, but it was extended until June 30, by an ineffective substitute which was barely sufficient to keep its machinery in operation.

This substitute or stop-gap measure contained so many exemptions that only a very limited pool of men was left available for induction. Bills passed recently by the Senate and House providing for further extension differed widely.

Some members of Congress have opposed any further drafting of men in peace-time; others have favored an extension of Selective Service for varying periods; still others would extend it, but make the law inoperative for a number of months, in the expectation that enough men might be obtained by voluntary enlistment.

The greatest controversy has centered about drafting 18 and 19-year-olds. The Senate voted to draft them, while the House bill exempted them altogether. Other proposals embodied such ideas as these (1) draft those 19, but not 18; (2) draft those 18, but not permit them to be sent overseas for a year, and so on.

The President and the Army wanted the draft extended for a full year, with no strings attached that would prevent the use of draftees, including 18 and 19 year olds, wherever they were needed. It was pointed out that this was necessary to keep the army up to the minimum strength required and at the same time permit the discharge of drafted men who have served 18 months or more and who have been promised their release. Manifestly this was the fair and proper view.

But most members of Congress particularly those in the House, all of whose terms expire next January, have something to think about besides the needs of the army. They have their eyes on the elections and know that any effective draft law might be unpopular.

The High Court Feud

There appears to be little likelihood of any action by Congress as a result of Justice Jackson's blast at Justice Hugo L. Black, and disclosures of a bitter feud among several members of the Supreme Court. In fact, it is difficult to see how anything of practical value could be done about the unfortunate situation which has been revealed.

The proposal of Senator Eastland, Mississippi Democrat, for a constitutional amendment to bar the appointment of more than three Supreme Court justices by any one President, and to make the same retroactive to unseat four of President Roosevelt's seven appointees, would have no chance of adoption by Congress or ratification by the states.

Senator Eastland is supported in his proposal by Senator Bridges, New Hampshire Republican, but it is doubtful that either of them believe such an amendment would be seriously considered. They might, however, cause hearings to be held on the amendment, and thus bring out further facts concerning the court feud, which appears to be their real purpose. It is known that personal antagonisms among members are not confined to Justices Black and Jackson.

In the Senate recently Eastland described the court as "bereft of unity, spent by dissension and torn by the bickerings of factions," and added that "it is a sad day for America that the last citadel of human freedom has thus been compromised."

Bridges declared that "there are a number of men who now sit upon the court who do not have the proper legal background, judicial temperament or the ability to decide fundamental questions upon which the very system of our government depends."

In our humble view, the greatest defect of the present court is lack of judicial temperament. Most of the members are of the crusading type, hence more concerned with furthering their own ideologies than with interpreting the true intent of the constitution and statutes, which is the court's proper function.

But they are on the high bench for life, and there isn't much that can be done about it.

Sidelights

Our most encouraging food item comes from Lawrenceburg, Tenn., where it is reported a real honest-to-goodness hamburger can be bought for 5c per copy. It is said that the bun is standard size, that you do not need a magnifying glass to find the meat and you have a choice of the trimmings that go with it. This is a free ad that we are glad to contribute to the efforts being made to buck inflation.

It appeared that rats would continue to take charge in Centralia, Ill., for when the city commission was called into session in an effort to combat the menace, neither of the commissioners would consent to become the "rat commissioner." While the discussions continued and each commissioner attempted to show that it was the duty of another to handle the matter, the situation was happily solved when two interested citizens volunteered to become co-chairmen of a "rat-riddance" committee.

In his search for a pair of pants, a G. I. wrote Rep. Gillie of Indiana: "The Army says I can't wear a uniform after I arrive home because I'll be impersonating a soldier. The stores say I can't buy a suit of clothes because they haven't my size. The police say I can't go on the streets naked because it is against the law. I would gladly stay off the streets, but I can't find a house to live in, and with the shortage of lumber I can't buy a barrel. Having been wounded, the Army won't take me back as I'm not physically fit. What now?"

The U. S. Employment Service appears to have broadened its services and apparently is prepared to open a matrimonial bureau, if the incident that took place in Mobile is a criterion. A 70-year-old man applied at the office for a wife and listed qualifications as "an 80-acre farm, a substantial income and a good-looking car." The news leaked out and now William P. Stainback, manager of the office there, is flooded with letters from women throughout the nation who express interest in the proposition.

Knowledge of what it means to do without certain foods brot pained expressions to the faces of U. S. Senators recently. For the first time in 40 years bean soup was missing from the menu of their private restaurant. It seems that at one time Senator Knute Nelson, of Minnesota, threatened to have a law passed requiring that bean soup be served in the Senate restaurant daily but that has never been necessary. But, here it was, apparently no bean soup available. When inquiry was made by the troubled Senators, their faces again lighted up with that smile of satisfaction, when they learned that a typographical error had occurred in printing the daily menu and the very delectable creamy soup was available as always—10c a cup or 15c for the large economy size.

Smile Awhile

Help your relatives a little bit and they'll never forgive you for not helping them more.

There's only one thing worse than being a bachelor, and that's being a bachelor's son.

And then there was the student who wrote, "Virgin wool comes from the sheep that runs the fastest."

His face was a striking one, even without his clothes people would have turned to look at him.

In one of the western states, some years ago, a temporary employee was required to pass an examination in order to hold his job permanently in the Customs patrol. In the examination he found this problem:

"If hay is worth $10.50 per ton and a horse eats 1,500 pounds per month, how much will it cost to feed him hay for one year?"

From the depth of his short experience he gave this answer: "This is a fool question. We don't use horses; we use Fords."

Predict Many Auto Accidents Over Weekend

Auto accidents during the four day July 4th weekend may claim more than 25 lives and injure 300 people in Illinois according to the prophecy of Chas. M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor Club.

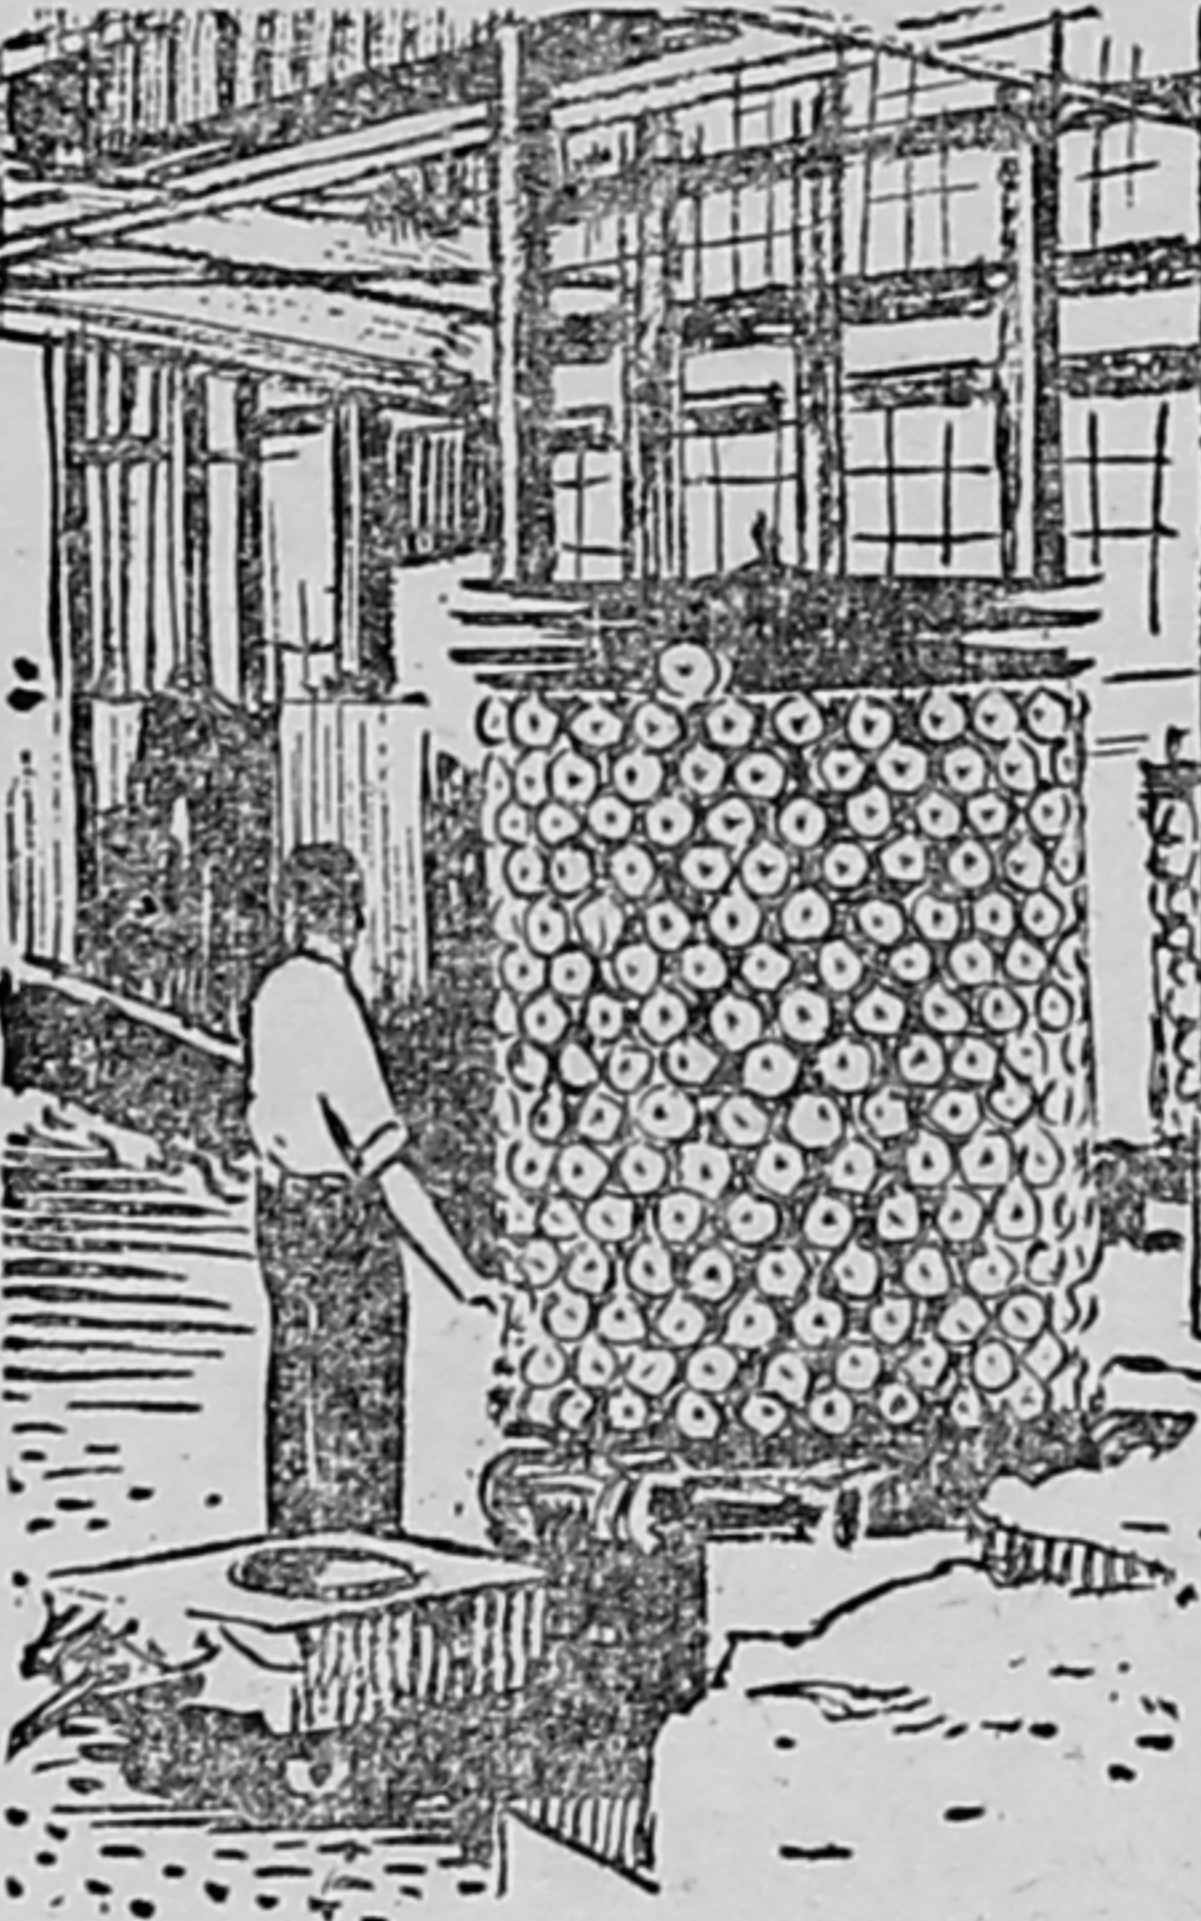

Surveys being made by police departments thruout the state and nation indicate a high percentage of cars whose safety equipment is not in order.

"This is a dismal condition" says the motor club executive, "but it can be avoided if individual motorists and pedestrians are determined to do their part."

He suggests a few common sense rules:

- 1. Increase the margin of safety. Allow plenty of space between your car and the one ahead. Reduce speed to a minimum at any location where pedestrians can be expected, etc.
2. Watch out for fatigue. This rule is particularly important at the conclusion of the holiday period when unusual physical exertion reduces a motorist's ability to react in emergencies.
3. Don't try to mix alcohol and gasoline. You owe a duty to your passengers and fellow motorists to be in the best possible condition to bring them safely through the hazards of heavy traffic.
4. Unless you have a destination that requires it stay off the main highways. You will enjoy your trip more and will help to alleviate traffic jams and resulting hazards.
5. Check equipment. Make sure tires, brakes, headlights, tail lights, stop lights, windshield wipers, etc., are in first class condition.

LOOKING AHEAD BY GEORGE S. BENSON President--Harding College Searcy, Arkansas

Strike Out

This entire nation has to look to its big industrial plants for prosperity. If the big factories keep going, workers have jobs, farmers have markets for what they raise, and the rest of us get along well enough. When the factories start shutting down (for any reason at all) thoughtful people begin to worry and they have good reason for their uneasiness.

Strikes Don't Last

Not many weeks ago, when a world-famous strike ended, I overheard a stranger say, "Strikes just can't go on forever. Finally men have to go back to work, whether they get all they struck for or not." The only trouble with this philosophy is that it's not so. The fearful truth is that somebody might some day call a "third strike" . . . one that might be called a strike out.

Many Similarities

It is safe to consider these two groups about the same size. Numerically, the country over, one crowd is about as big as the other. Individual companies differ; some have more employees than stockholders, others have more investors than workers. In 1940, the General Motors Corp. had nearly twice as many investors as employees and several other big concerns were situated the same way.

Both Independent

One point of most striking similarity between investors and employees is that they both are independent. Either crowd is free to walk right out and leave a company. Either bunch might strike a firm dead with that very weapon. Usually it is the workers who quit because they are organized. Likewise, being organized, they can arrange to return to their jobs before it is too late.

Everything seems to improve with age except the world and the family car.

Killing Frost

By ELSIE WILLIAMS

McClure Syndicate.
WNU Features.

OLLIE BURNSIDES walked up to his neighbor's when the moon rose. Wanted to find out a thing or two. Jennings Milton was a cattle-man and had ought to know about land laws. That winnie field now—if he could just hang on to it for another six months—or was it a year?

Jen was on the porch, smoking his pipe. "Evenin'," he said to Ollie. "Come on in."

Ain't no need for Jen to always be so short with me, Ollie thought. "No, I'll jus' sit here on the edge o' the porch. Tol' Myrt I wouldn't stay but jus' a minute. . . . Pretty night, ain't it?"

"Yeah."
Ollie's Adam's apple bobbed up and down before the next words would come out. "Come t' see—know anythin' 'bout law, Jen?"

"Enough t' git by. More'n you can say, I reckon."
"You're the man I want t' see, then," Ollie said. "Ain't there a law, Jen, what says does a man farm a piece o' land seven years it's his'n—man what farms it?"

"What's on your mind, Ollie? That piece you call your 'winnie field'?"

"That's right, Jen." Ollie drew one knee up against his chest and gripped it with both hands. "Hadt' it ought t' be mine by law in six months? Or is it a winnie bit more'n that? Not long's a year, is it?"

Jen laughed. His white teeth gleamed in the moonlight. "You've lost out in your squattin' on the other man's land, Ollie. I done leased all that Abner Langford section for pasture. Means you gotta take down the fence from around your dag-nabbed winnie field!"

Ollie Burnsides' jaw dropped. "But—but, looky here, man—I ain't dug my 'taters. An' I ain't cut my cane off'n that winnie field yit!"

Jen sat back in his rocker comfortably. "Well, I'd be within my rights, I reckon, t' order you t' take down the fence now. Just t' show you I got a heart I say leave it on—till you can git your stuff off."

Ollie hedged for time. "Cane ain't sweetened enough yit, Jen. An' man, them 'taters ain't noways ready t' be dug!"

Jen said, "Tol' you I had a heart, didn't I? Well, reckon you can leave them 'taters on till frost kills the vines."

Ollie rose from the porch. "Be bad news t' Myrt. She's sot her heart on that winnie field. Grubbed 'meeter roots in there, Myrt did."

Ollie owned ten acres of swampland along the creek bank. Water come up every summer and flooded his place. Then when the land was in shape to farm again the creek would drain it dry as a match stick. A man couldn't raise a crop o' stick-tights on it, let alone cane or 'taters.

Pleasant fall weather lasted into December. Jen came to see Ollie. "Ain't dug them 'taters yit?" he asked.

"No, sho' ain't. You said dig 'em when frost killed the vines. Aint' done that yit."

Jen jerked his horse's head up from nibbling the grass. "I know it—dagnab it! Mighty onusual weather. Cuttin' your cane, I see."

"That's right. Had jus' enough cold weather t' make good syrup."

"An' no killin' frost!" said Jen Milton bitterly. "Them 'taters had ought t' be dug anyway."

"Man o' your word, ain't you?" Ollie asked. "Leastways that's the name you got around here."

Frost came a few weeks later, but only a few tender leaves were nipped. Then warm weather held until all danger of another freeze was past.

Again Jen went to see Ollie. Ollie grinned at him. "Ain't no use you buckin' an' a-rearin' like that, Jen. Won't be frost now until sometime in the fall. That winnie field is mine. I got squatter's claim t' it. Went t' see ol' Judge James—"

"That scoundrel!" Jen broke in angrily.

"Well, he sent me up onct, Judge James did, but I thank him for puttin' me wise t' some state laws. O'l Abner Langford slipped up on some o' the taxes on the winnie-field piece years ago. I got them tax certificates now. The judge says was I kicked off last fall— Funny things 'bout law—and weather—eh, Jen?"

Illinois State Capitol News

The time for filing applications for the position of visitor I in downstate county departments of public assistance has been extended to July 10. More applications will be welcomed by the Illinois merit system council. Examination for this position will be given Saturday, July 20, in Champaign.

Gov. Dwight H. Green has released, effective July 1, the $5,000,000 balance of a $15,000,000 fund appropriated by the 64th General Assembly for improvement of township roads throughout the state. County superintendents of highways are being notified that the money is available for immediate allocation.

Under the plan adopted, the townships are paying for the grading and small culverts, while the state finances the surfacing of the roads and the building of big culverts. All the work is under state supervision.

There were 9.3 per cent more deaths and 3.8 per cent more births reported in Illinois during the first four months of 1946 than in the corresponding period last year, according to Dr. Roland R. Cross, state director of public health. Some of the increase in deaths is attributed to an outbreak of influenza and pneumonia which began last fall and continued into this year. A portion of the increase also comes from a rise in motor vehicle fatalities, which have caused five deaths this year for every three such deaths last year.

For the first four months of this year, the number of deaths was 31,472 against 28,771 last year. Births were 41,811, as compared with 40,270.

4-H Club News

The second regular Party A Month meeting was held Friday, June 28, at the community building. The meeting was called to order by the president, Marion Dohme, and roll call and minutes were read by the secretary, Lela Belle Partenheimer. There were 18 members, three leaders and three visitors present.

The club is going to make nut cups, place cards, favors or napkins, to show at the district meeting, July 12. The club had a discussion about the war memorial, and there were two demonstrations: "How to make tooth paste," by Charles Limp; and "How to, and how not to chew gum," by Johnny Baldwin.

Marjorie Wiese gave a reading and Marvin Struck played a piano solo.

Several games were played, after which dixie cups and eskimo pies were enjoyed for refreshments.
