Bruce Richard Learns Retouching In Wheel Chair

(News-Gazette)

Because a rehabilitation counselor discovered him in a wheel chair near his Champaign home last spring, 38-year-old Bruce Richard, who lost both legs in an auto accident seven years ago, today is on his way toward a professional career as a photo oil painter and negative retoucher.

Richard, who lives with the family of his brother, Don, at 111½ East Clark street, had little means of support when he first met Sidney R. Eng of Champaign, district rehabilitation counselor. He had done only mat and pad weaving which he was forced to abandon during the war because materials were unobtainable.

Today, through the services of the Illinois Division of vocational rehabilitation, Richard has completed eight lessons in commercial art and portrait coloring under instruction by Loren F. Apperson, owner of an Urbana studio.

The Division is sponsoring the program for Richard and paying for all materials and instruction. The course will last 30 weeks, at the rate of two lessons per week.

Always in good spirits, Richard is absorbed in his new work and hopes to enter business on a free-lance basis after completion of the course.

Food Subsidy Lifts Huge Federal Debt

Federal subsidy of food is one reason for the accumulation of an enormous national debt.

Subsidies totaling nearly $5,000,000 have been paid from the Federal treasury in the last three years on numerous food products. This spending has contributed to the increase in the Federal debt, which now exceeds $5,000 for every family in the nation.

In the opinion of many economists, the food subsidy program has defeated its purpose. The subsidies, these economists explain, exert inflationary effect on living costs by failing to provide the incentive for increased production by farmers which would be derived from higher prices.

George Lahne, 72, Is Killed By Train

Sidney, July 15—George Lahne, 72, Sidney carpenter, was killed instantly at 6:26 a. m. on Monday when the 1929 sedan he was driving was struck by an eastbound Wabash fast freight as he crossed the tracks on a road leading into the Roscoe Pribble farm, three-fourths of a mile east of here.

Mr. Lahne, a resident of this community since 1898, was driving south over a clear crossing when the car was struck squarely by Wabash freight No. 496, traveling from Decatur to Peru, Ind. The automobile was carried about 100 feet eastward before it was tossed off to the right of the tracks with Mr. Lahne's body still in it. The car was demolished.

(Editor's Note: Through the courtesy of Mesdames Grace E. Hilger and Ella M. Watson, we herewith publish the following article regarding the golden wedding anniversary of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Lamb, of Helena, Mont.)

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Lamb of the Helena Valley, Mont., were honored Sunday evening, July 7, on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary.

About fifty friends called during the evening to extend their congratulations and best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Lamb, whose romance began in England in 1895. The following year they were married in New York City, and after a honeymoon at Niagara Falls, they went to Broadlands where the groom was engaged in farming. They resided there until the family moved to their ranch in the Helena Valley in 1918.

The bride of fifty years ago wore an afternoon dress of bemberg sheer in shades of lavender. Her corsage was of roses and stephanotis with sprigs of gypsophelia. She wore a double strand of pearls, a gift of her grandchildren.

The spacious rooms of the Lamb residence were artistically decorated throughout with floral arrangements. The dining table laid with a beautiful handmade lace cloth over a gold cloth was centered with an old-fashioned nosegay of roses, michaelmas daisies and sweet peas, on either side were golden tapers. At one end of the table the beautifully decorated three-tiered wedding cake topped with an appropriate ornament, and at the other the silver coffee service.

Many lovely gifts were received by the couple, and over fifty greetings came from friends and relatives from a distance.

The five Lamb children were all present for the joyous occasion. They are: Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Hilger (Grace); Ed Lamb, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Watson, (Ella), all of Helena; Mr. and Mrs. George Lamb of Cascade, Mont; and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Johnson (Hilda), of Vallejo, Cal.

Grandchildren present were: Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Hilger, Dan Hilger, Mrs. Dolly Hilger and daughter Sharon, who is the great-granddaughter, Annemarie and Norma Beatty, and John Charles Lamb, who celebrated his first birthday that day.

JESUS AND TRUE WORSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 8:11-14, 18-20; Isaiah 40:30, 31; Mark 12:28-34.
MEMORY SELECTION—God is a Spirit; and they that worship him must worship in spirit and truth.—John 4:24.

The one true God is worthy of the wholehearted worship of all men. The second commandment, which we studied last week, forbids all and every idolatry and thus requires exclusive worship of God. It really means something in the life of a man to worship God in sincerity and truth. It makes life worthwhile both here and hereafter.

I. Worship Balances Life (Deut. 8:11-14).
Prosperity is usually thought to be a blessing. We fear depression and poverty. The Lord through Moses warned his people that prosperity was dangerous. It still is, because material things have the power to so satisfy the natural desires of man as to make him forget his spiritual needs.

Is it not true that material prosperity usually brings with it a corresponding decrease in spirituality. Life values are weighed in gold, silver, wheat and iron instead of being viewed in the light of God's Word.

Worship of God will balance life for it will keep man from forgetting God and his laws. In the wilderness Israel had to call on God for daily bread. Now that they were to come into the promised land they would be apt to think they produced their own food.

II. Worship Protects Life (Deut. 8:15-20).
One of the most mischievous mistakes of life is the idea that man is the maker of his own money. Only God can give man the power of hand and heart, of muscle and mind, which brings forth wealth, and then he can only draw it out of God's resources in mine or field or sea.

This fallacy of man leads him astray, and he begins to worship the very powers he uses and finds pleasure in the gods of this world. That way leads only to eternal destruction, to spiritual death.

How is man to be delivered from this awful destructive force? By a right relationship to God, by worship of and devotion to the Lord. Israel had a covenant with God, and in the keeping of it they would find deliverance from all which would pull down and destroy—yes, and from the judgment of God (v. 20).

We who are believers in Christ are under the new covenant of grace. If we have been born again we have the promise of God that we have eternal life. But let us be clear that it is possible for a Christian to so forget God and his covenant with the Lord as to lose his fellowship and joy, and to be useless and fruitless.

III. Worship Strengthens Life (Isa. 40:30, 31).
The Christian life is not an easy one to live. After all, who wants it easy? There is, however, full provision by God for the power needed to live a life as victorious and exultant as that of the soaring eagle. That power is for those who "wait upon the Lord" (v. 31).

It is taken for granted that those who are old may become weary and faint, but the fact is that even the youth have this disappointing experience.

We, leaders in the church and parents, are apt to forget that youth is often a time of great struggle. The young man or woman must make the choices of purposes and ideals which will determine their future. Too often youth, left unguided and without the balance of a real faith in God, makes the wrong choices and winds up in bitter disappointment.

Only God is sufficient for the need of our young people but he is sufficient. Let us teach our boys and girls to wait on the Lord.

IV. Worship Completes Life (Mark 12:28-34).

Here was a man, who, by the testimony of Jesus was "not far from the kingdom of God." He was very near to a full devotion to God in Christ. He knew "all the answers," but he did not follow the teaching which he knew to its proper and blessed conclusion.

It is terrifying to think how close a man can come to entering into eternal life, and yet miss it altogether. It prompts the writer of these notes to ask you, the reader, very earnestly, Have you entered into eternal life through Jesus Christ? "Almost" will not avail; you can be almost saved—and eternally lost.

The true nature of worship is revealed in this lesson as a loving dependence on God at all times and in all circumstances. We recognize him as the one who can supply our every need, spiritual and temporal. We accord to him quick and full obedience. We find in him such complete satisfaction that we cannot withhold our love and his love from our fellow men. We worship him!

American Legion Spends
Millions For Child Welfare

With little fanfare and publicity, the American Legion annually spends millions of dollars in its nationwide child welfare program. Most of this money goes for food, clothing, and medical care. More than 30,000 volunteer workers carry on the program, searching out children in need, sponsoring enlightened legislation to protect their rights, combating delinquency, doing all possible to give every child a square deal in starting life.

There is an intensely human-interest story in the birth of this huge program in which the Legion, since 1925, has spent some $56,000,000 in aiding underprivileged children.

It all started back in the days of the first AEF in 1917-18-19 when orphan tots of France, Belgium, and England made friends with American soldiers and sailors. They tugged with mighty heartstrings as they sat in soldier and sailor laps, learning to pronounce American words, sing American songs, and eat American candy, for which they paid with baby hugs and kisses. The doughboys of World War I passed the hat around on payday to provide better food and clothing for the kiddies. Then companies, batteries, and regiments began adopting orphans. The first "Stars and Stripes" sponsored an orphan fund which grew to millions of francs.

Out of that love of American soldiers and sailors for these innocent victims of war grew the Legion's great child welfare program. It has proved to be one of the strongest ties uniting the veterans of World War I with the veterans of World War II.

For history repeated itself. American soldier and sailor hearts of World War II opened again to the orphans of war. American units again adopted orphans, and the "Stars and Stripes" again raised an orphan fund.

Today the veterans of World War II, now in the majority in the Legion's membership of more than 3,000,000, are finding in its child welfare program a common bond of interest. They, too, have learned that heartstrings pulled by tots have a mighty tug; that when the great Nazarene said, "Suffer little children to come unto me," He meant that their love conquers all.

Reds Lose In Germany

Elections held in the American occupation zone in Germany recently resulted in an overwhelming defeat for the Communists, who polled only about 8 per cent of the more than five million votes cast. The elections were held to choose assemblymen for "little parliaments" in Bavaria, Greater Hesse and Wurttemberg-Baden.

Final unofficial figures show these results:

Christian Social Union (right-wing party), 2,579,403 votes, giving it 184 seats.

Social Democratic Party (slightly left-wing), 1,815,535 votes, 126 seats.

Communist Party, 406,009 votes, 27 seats.

Economic Reconstruction Party (in Bavaria only), 135,128 votes, 8 seats.

In all areas of Europe in which really free elections have been held since the end of the war, the Communists have made a comparatively poor showing.

Sidelights

The death rattle of the O.P.A. made more noise than the blast of the atomic bomb.

We are told the story of a most emotional gentleman who had just lost his third wife. His deep love for his mate was known throughout the community and at the funeral his grief was so great that he fainted at the side of her grave. His friends were greatly disturbed as they gathered about the prostrate figure. Among them was a friend who had a decided lisp, or was a bit tongue-tied. He knelt beside his friend, felt the gentleman's pulse, and looking up said: "He's all wight—he'll rewrite."

The campaign of the Birmingham Junior Chamber of Commerce that men's coats be banned during the hot weather months, no doubt is receiving the full support of all GI's. Becoming accustomed to being correctly dressed during the summer when wearing no blouse (coat), the former serviceman learned of the comfort of this style and the foolish custom that makes it necessary that a man suffer in a coat as his female partner sits comfortably in a dainty, airy dress that required all of a yard and a half to make.

This is Washington. The day that Sen. Bankhead died, one afternoon paper in the nation's capital gave him a five-inch double column picture, the other a one-column picture. His death was old news by the next day and the two morning papers in that city carried about half a column each about his death—without a picture. The same day that this distinguished Senator died, a gunman killed a druggist in a hold-up and the next morning one paper carried a life-size picture of the killer, full four columns, and a page of smaller pictures. This was the same paper that carried a column about Sen. Bankhead and no picture. Only two classes make the Washington front pages, it seems—the highest officials or the most vicious criminals.

Smile Awhile

Sambo—Sugar, did that big kiss I jus' gave you make you long for another?

Liza—It sho' did—but he's out of town!

A South Pacific GI figures he is saving $200 by not having had a shave in two years, but hasn't the $200. Just another economist, it seems.

What was the name of the girl you had at the party Saturday night?

I forget. Something French—like 'Chiffonier.'

But a chiffonier's something with drawers!

I guess her name was O'Brien.

A man sauntered into a restaurant and asked for chicken soup. The waitress called the order to the kitchen. Seeing they had split pea soup on the menu, he asked the waitress to change his order. The waitress yelled to the kitchen, "Hold that chicken and make it pea."

The new bride wanted the new maid to be pleased. You'll have a very easy time of it here, she said sweetly, because we have no children to annoy you.

Oh, said the maid generously, "I'm very fond of children, so don't go restrictin' yourself on my account."

Treasury Uses Cash
For Debt Reduction

Cuts in Federal debt, the first in years, are being made from large reserves of cash built up through Treasury over-borrowing, rather than from a surplus of government income over expenditures.
The redemption of more than $10,000,000,000 in national debt this year, dropping the debt total to around $269,000,000,000, merely has drawn upon Treasury bank balances.
The Treasury made a practice of carrying extraordinarily large reserves of cash during the height of war spending and borrowing. With the ending of the war, the need for these large balances diminished, although the government continued to show a deficit on revenues.
Real progress toward the goal of debt reduction awaits a surplus of Federal revenues over spending. The Chamber of Commerce of the United States, representing business views, is urging a balanced Federal budget with a margin for debt retirement not later than the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1947.

Women
IN THE CHURCH
by Mary Fowler

Mrs. Ella Smith, who with her sons owns one of the largest cattle ranches in California, recently observed her sixtieth anniversary as superintendent of the Sunday school in the Methodist Church of Weldon, Calif. Mrs. Smith went to Weldon as a school teacher in the pioneer days and helped organize the first church school. The school now enrolls seventy, and the church is one "point" of a circuit of which the Rev. J. E. Johnson is pastor. Mrs. Smith is also a "parish visitor," calling regularly on farm and ranch families, and leaving religious leaflets and books with those who "live too far away to go to church."

With the aid of white rats, Dr. Eleanor Mason, American faculty member of the Woman's Christian College of Madras, India, has been demonstrating the inadequacy of rice as 90% of the diet of natives of South India. At the College and on tours through surrounding villages, Dr. Mason, her assistants, and her Indian students have been feeding some of the rats with a 90% rice diet; others have been fed on rice, milk, the cereal "ragge," and some local vegetables. The superior liveliness of the latter group of rats has made a deep impression upon the thousands of Indians who have seen the exhibit. Extension courses in the feeding of babies have been provided for mothers by the College; a diet of 50% rice and 50% available local foodstuffs has been demonstrated; and other experiments have been made in improving India's food supply.

Interesting Notes

Spring is the season when the sap rises, and he's a groom by June.

This also will be recalled as an era when a wage exceeded a salary.

Germs or no germs, kissing is dangerous—it has put an end to a lot of bachelors.

Too many of us waste far too much energy climbing hills before we get to them.

Does man differ from the other animals? Only in posture. The rest are bent, but he is a wild beast who walks upright.

The art of self-government consists of putting everybody on a committee and getting one guy to do all the work.

Man is the only animal that knows nothing, and can learn nothing without being taught. He can neither speak nor walk, nor eat, nor do anything at the prompting of nature, but only weep.

The Persuader

By ETHELYN M. PARKINSON
 McClure Syndicate,
 WNU Features.

UNDER ordinary circumstances everyone in the club would have expected Irene Smythe to be our delegate to the northern states annual convention. Irene was our secretary and certainly expected the appointment. And Mary Dixon, our president, stubborn and contrary as she is, is a stickler for conventions. So when most of us agreed that little Elsie Latham ought to go, we knew Mary would never see it our way.

"It's a shame," Madge Leigh declared. "Did you notice the wistful light in poor Elsie's eyes when Mary announced that the convention's to be in Detroit? All Elsie's people live there, and she hasn't been able to go back in the fifteen years she's been married. Of course she's never held a club office or asked for one, but she's been a hard worker."

"Who's going to make Mary listen to that?" I demanded.

"I am!" Anne Herrick said firmly. Anne's fairly new in town.

"You don't know Mary," Madge said with a rueful laugh.

"I know what stubborn, contrary people are like," Anne said grimly. "I've been married to one of them a good many years, and I've become quite a psychologist, if I do say so."

"But Mary will argue that Elsie's shy and retiring and a little dowdy—"

"Don't worry," Anne said briskly. "I'll persuade her, provided that you'll let me have my way. Not one of you is to say a word to Mary about it."

Madge phoned me the next day. "Anne's gone right to work on Mary. I saw them having coffee at Kaap's. Anne was doing all the talking."

"How did Mary look?" I asked skeptically.

"Stubborn and contrary as ever," Madge admitted.

Madge and I met Anne on Saturday. "Have you persuaded Mary?" we demanded.

"Not yet. But I will."

"But she makes the appointment Thursday—the convention's only two weeks off."

Thursday, I was relieved when Madge told me that Elsie Latham would not be at the meeting. "Elsie says she has a cold, but I think she just can't bear to hear Irene Smythe appointed."

At our meeting that afternoon the air was tense. Anne's expression told us nothing. Mary seemed contrarian than ever, if possible. And Irene Smythe looked very smug. Mary called the meeting to order, and we hurried through the other business. At last Mary rose to "discuss the convention."

"As you know," she said sweetly, "the delegates are appointed by the club presidents, according to past records and suitability. Now, we have a secretary who has been faithfully at her post at every meeting this year. She knows the club history, and its aims."

Madge poked me. "I'll never trust Anne Herrick and her psychology again."

Anne, in the front row, leaned forward as Mary went on. "Then we have a member whose home town is Detroit. A very faithful member who, in her quiet way, has done a great deal for us. Elsie Latham is not here and so I feel at liberty to talk freely, for I know that she won't be embarrassed."

"You'll all give me credit, I believe, for being fair-minded. You know that I like to look at both sides of a problem and that I do not make my decisions hastily."

"Or change them, once they're made!" Madge hissed.

Mary continued, with her sweetest smile. "We all love Elsie Latham, of course, and we know that Elsie is a bit on the retiring side. She would be first to admit that she can't make a speech, while our efficient secretary, Irene Smythe, has addressed many groups and can represent any club in a manner of which it can be proud."

Someone clapped. Irene smirked. Anne Herrick just listened.

Mary went on. "You'll grant that experience is — well, experience. Irene Smythe has traveled widely and is equal to any occasion. However, there are some provincial and sentimental folk who feel that it is more fitting that a member who hasn't even held office should be appointed the delegate—partly as a reward for faithfulness and partly, I suppose, to give her a trip back home."

Mary paused with a little shrug. Madge squeezed my arm. But Anne Herrick—who knows how to handle contrary people psychologically—never changed expression.

"Well, I'll confess that I'm one of those provincial and sentimental folk—and that's why I'm appointing little Elsie Latham as delegate," Mary concluded.

The moment the meeting adjourned we found out how Anne had persuaded her. Mary went straight to Anne and said sweetly, "I do hope you'll understand, Mrs. Herrick. I can't help being sentimental. But I know you're practical, dear, and I realize that you were acting conscientiously when you tried to hard to convince me that Elsie wouldn't do at all."

Dentist Makes Plastic Noses, Ears at U. I.

Nearly 100 maimed victims of accidents now have lifelike and durable plastic noses, ears, chins and fingertips as the result of a development by a University of Illinois dentistry professor.

Dr. Stanley D. Tylman, who has been working with flexible plastics for nearly five years, has restored scores of patients to a normal appearance with the use of artificial restorations. Passing on the benefits of his research to disabled war veterans, Dr. Tylman also has trained army and navy personnel to do restorative work.

The University dentist explains that artificial restorations can be used where plastic surgery is not possible or while tissues are healing before plastic surgery is performed.

He has received inquiries from nearly every state and from Canada and England. Patients selected are those best suited for technical research and clinical investigations. Since he started the work, he has restored entirely or replaced parts of 50 ears, 14 noses, 15 fingers, 2 chins and other missing facial features. All of the restorative work has been done free of charge.

Research gifts totaling nearly $20,000 in the last year have enabled Dr. Tylman to expand his work and increase his research staff. Research now centers about the development of an artificial hand which would combine the mechanical features of the ones now in use with a lifelike appearance.

In the meantime, patients visit the clinic weekly to be fitted with plastic restorations. Two Chicago sculptors have donated their services to sculpture the missing parts in clay. After the sculptured model is reproduced in plastic, a professional artist is giving her time to tint the plastic to match individual coloration.

Chemical Color Detectives From U. I. Speed Industry

Chemical "color detectives" perfected at the University of Illinois are doing a big job in industry. They simplify and speed up chemical analysis of such things as milk, metals, wine and soap, allowing industrial chemists to make analyses in 15 minutes that under old methods might take half a day. They were perfected by Prof. G. F. Smith.

These chemicals "are so efficient they are able to disclose the presence of one part of iron or certain other elements in a million parts of water." They are being used in a variety of industries from beer brewing to truck production to help manufacturers keep close tabs on the quality of their product.

U. I. Educator Forecasts Larger School Buildings

Larger buildings and smaller classes for the modern elementary school are predicted by Prof. Edwin H. Reeder of the University of Illinois College of Education.

The grade school of the future will be planned for a minimum of about 300 pupils, he believes, and elimination of the smaller buildings will make possible such facilities as auditoriums, gymnasiums, visual aids, and where practical enough space outdoors for each room to have its own experimental projects in growing plants and caring for small animals or chickens.

The 250-million volt betatron being built at the University of Illinois is planned to produce cosmic ray effects in the laboratory to open entirely new fields to scientific research.

Strike—At Whom?

Financial reports make interesting reading to people who know even a little bit about what they mean. To some, they look drab because they are printed mainly in figures; many students never have learned to enjoy studying figures. Just the same, dull old numerals tell the truth in a romantic way to those who love cold facts of struggle and adventure.

Late in May it was my good fortune to have with me an annual report of one of America's largest corporations when I had to spend three hours on a day train. In the back of my mind as I rode along, was a lurking fear that I might reach home a day (maybe a week) late because of labor troubles, just then coiling to strike. My dread threw a dread light on the figures in hand.

Division of Wealth

The company about which I was reading plays an important part in the lives of more than a quarter of a million people: 100,000 employees and 150,000 stockholders. Two out of every five of these people drew wages while three out of five received dividends. The average share owner got less than $500 a year. The average employee took home more than $2,500 a year.

Daily newspapers for days had reported threats of strikes in the plants of the firm I was studying, also on the lines of the railroad I was riding, and in many other industries. Question: If all the employees of all the companies strike for what they want and get it, who will pay the difference? How will they pay it? These questions have answers and they're not secrets.

Enter Apple Conductor

The train stopped for a few minutes under the sheds of a big town station and a railway newsboy came through with fresh afternoon papers. On page one, under Washington date-line, a wire story told how OPA would grant higher prices on automobiles. Nearby was another item about a 10% boost in shoe prices. Then I remembered that bread and milk and meat all had gone up recently.

Whether you ride or walk or only eat, the price gains catch you. Wages are inside the cost of every manufactured thing, and the consumer pays. It is too obvious to deserve proof. Not long ago officialdom was sounding off freely about how wages in Detroit could be boosted without charging higher prices for automobiles but it didn't work out that way. Why?

Strikes Are Weapons

It is because strikes are not tools. The official theory was right; wages can go up without boosting prices but production has to be increased if it happens, and strikes don't increase production. Sudden wage increases of 18% to 30% have to come from somewhere, but where? A stockholder drawing $500 a year can't offer much of a boon to a $2,500 wage earner.

Strikes can't take something from the owners of a company that the owners don't get. That leaves nobody to pay the higher wages but Mr. Consumer whose family drives the car, wears the shoes and eats the food. A large majority of consumers are themselves workers. In the absence of increased production, a strike is a boomerang. It hits the consumer who is the worker himself.

Veterans Start Many New Business Units

A new record birth rate seems to be in the making in this country.

Incorporation of new business units has increased substantially since the return of millions of men and women from the armed services and the resumption of production of many types of goods for civilian use.

Ordinarily some 500,000 new business establishments come into existence annually in the United States. This year that figure may be increased substantially by the thousands of business units started every week by veterans and others.

Most of the baby businesses are small, like grocery stores and service stations. Many soon die. But some will grow to become strong, enduring enterprises, creating thousands of new jobs.

The business birthrate is recognized by economists as one of the best gauges of the vigor of private enterprise.

U. of I. Exhibit Tells Story of Human Life From Cell to Youth

An exhibit demonstrating how humans grow and centering about a life-size plastic model of a nine-months pregnant woman is being prepared in the University of Illinois medical illustration laboratories.

The extensive exhibit on human growth and development will go on display in the Chicago Museum of Science and Industry next fall. The exhibit undertakes to interpret present day knowledge of how we grow from the original cell to adulthood.

The central figure of the exhibit, the transparent model, will show the unborn child, lighted from within to illustrate the normal position of the full-term fetus in the womb.

Six of the 12 displays in the exhibit will show stages in prenatal growth and how the baby is born. Six additional displays will show the development of the human through nursery years and childhood to adolescence.

In another part of the exhibit, the principles of heredity, always a puzzle to the layman, will be interpreted for museum visitors through a series of electric questionnaires.

Eye and hair coloring of children born of parents with unlike coloring will be shown through a system of alternately lighted panels.

All planning and designing and most of the actual work on the exhibit is being done at the University of Illinois medical illustration studios, in connection with the College of Medicine. Work has already been in progress for over a year.

The display is an extensive experiment in visual education. It is being constructed at the special request of the Museum of Science and Industry and will be a University of Illinois contribution to lay education.

He Worked His Way

Young men wondering how to get a start in life can find a tip in the life story of William K. Jackson, new president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

He worked his way through the University of Florida. Then, at 17, he became recording clerk of the Florida House of Representatives, studied stenography on the side and found a job in a Jacksonville law firm at $45 a month.

From this salary he saved enough to go to the Virginia Law School and, with more work on the side to earn money, was graduated.

Law practice eventually carried him to the post of general counsel and vice-president of the United Fruit Company.

Illinois State Capitol News

This season's Illinois farm crop acreage is the largest since the war year 1918, and current prospects point to the largest crop of corn ever raised in the state, according to the latest report of the Illinois and U. S. departments of agriculture.

Student registration for the summer term at the five Illinois state teachers colleges totals 4,703, according to Frank Thompson, chairman of the college board. The combined enrollment includes 1,776 veterans, and almost doubles last summer's enrollment of 2,559.

There are 3,548 veterans, representing military service in every portion of the globe and with every branch of the armed forces, now employed in Illinois state departments and offices under the direction of Gov. Dwight H. Green. Of the total number, 1,433 are former state employees who have resumed duties they left when they went to war, and the balance, 2,065, are veterans of World War II who are now employees.

Gov. Dwight H. Green has released $1,194,775 of post-war funds to provide additional housing for students at the University of Illinois. Temporary houses are to be set up, the ice rink and the west hall of the stadium will be used for dormitories for men, and a permanent resident hall built for women. Bonds will be sold to meet part of the cost of the women's hall. The whole program is designed to provide 2,176 single housing units and 150 family units.
