Betty Lou, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dyar of Longview, and Max Brandon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Velasco Brandon of Adrian, were united in marriage at 4 p. m. Thursday, August 1, with Rev. Kenneth Hanley of Colusa, uncle of the bride, and Rev. W. M. Robinson, pastor of the U. B. Church, reading the double ring ceremony.

Phyllis Jean Hanley, cousin of the bride, played bridal airs during the ceremony, and preceding the ceremony Joe Penrod of Manchester, Ind., close friend of the bridegroom, sang "Always," and "I Love You Truly," accompanied by Doris Ann Davis, cousin of the bride. The bride entered the church on the arm of her father. Marianna Parteneimer was bridesmaid, and Willis Hobart of Burnside, was best man. Jerry Lee Dyar of Urbana, and Morris Davis, cousins of the bride, were ushers and wore boutonnières of white carnations in their lapels.

The bride wore a white silk marquisette floor length gown and a fingertip veil, and carried a handkerchief of white linen and lace made by her great-aunt, the late Mrs. Irene George Hiler. She wore a corsage of white gladioli and pink carnations. Miss Parteneimer wore pink net with touches of black and white accessories, and carried white and salmon colored gladioli.

The bride's mother was attired in flowered Jersey with black accessories, and wore a corsage of white and salmon gladioli. The groom's mother wore a powder blue crepe dress, with black accessories, and her corsage was also of white and salmon gladioli.

For her going away costume, the bride wore a powder blue crepe dress with white accessories, and carnations from her bridal bouquet.

A reception for the bridal party, immediate families and some friends was held on the lawn at the home of the bride's parents, with about 70 present. The tables were decorated with garden flowers and a three-tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. Ice cream and fruit punch were served.

"Dock" Leedy Injured When Truck Hits Cafe

The condition of Elvin (Dock) Leedy of Ogden, a patient of Burnham hospital, Champaign, is reported as good, following injuries sustained Monday evening of last week, when a large semi-trailer truck driven by George Boise, of St. Joseph, crashed through the wall of his lunch room.

A broken hip was the most serious injury sustained by Mr. Leedy as the truck, said to be loaded with cans of oil, pinned him beneath the wreckage. Motorists passing by assisted in extricating him from the wreckage and he was rushed by ambulance to the hospital. At the time of the accident, Mr. Leedy was mixing hamburger for the evening trade.

The truck, traveling west, left the curve and careened through the front of the building, tearing off the gasoline pumps, wrecking the soda fountain, and going through the kitchen on into an adjoining side room used as an office. Most of the truck was inside the lunch room before it stopped. The interior of the place was a shambles.

Little damage to the truck was discernible, and Mr. Boise escaped injury.

Mr. Leedy, who is 71 years old declared from his hospital bed that he intended to reconstruct his lunch room and take whatever further steps would be necessary to protect it.

Mr. and Mrs. Leedy make their home in an apartment connected with the building but Mrs. Leedy was visiting in the home of their daughter, Mrs. W. H. Thompson, in Champaign.

Fairland, Aug. 6—John Wesley Carrier, one of Illinois' oldest residents, was making plans Tuesday to start all over again with one birthday candle when he observes his 101st birthday Thursday, August 15, at his home here.

Mr. Carrier and his daughter, Mrs. Edith Barrick, have issued invitations to an informal open house scheduled for the anniversary day. Topping off the celebration will be a birthday dinner at 1 p. m. Sunday, August 18, in his home.

Born August 15, 1845, in West Virginia's Shenandoah valley, Mr. Carrier came to Illinois at the age of 10 with his parents. They settled in Vermilion county in the vicinity of Ridgefarm.

Mr. Carrier was married Dec. 31, 1871, to Loretta Burton, who died in 1941. Of their 10 children, six are living.

Mr. and Mrs. Carrier, who lived on a farm north of Newman in early married life, ventured out of Illinois only once. In 1897 they purchased a farm at Iola, Kan., but the water well was too oily for their cattle. In two years they sold the farm at a loss and returned to this state, despite the warning of neighbors that there were extensive oil deposits underneath their land. There were.

Back in Douglas county, Mr. and Mrs. Carrier settled in Fairland, a village which has held its population at a modest 90 all through its history. Mr. Carrier intended to retire in 1908, but he continued to farm an acre at his home and help other farmers in spare time. Twelve years ago he really retired at the age of 89. Mr. Carrier broke his hip when he was 94, but recovered well enough to continue his activities around his home. His only serious handicap as he nears 101 is his eyesight, which grows dimmer every year.

Like every other oldster, he has a formula for success in the battle for life. He has never chewed, smoked, touched any form of liquor or eaten excessively.

He always hoped to reach 100. Now he has his heart set on 110.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for August 11

JESUS AND HOME RELATIONSHIPS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:12; Mark 7:13; Luke 2:51, 52; Ephesians 6:1-4.
MEMORY SELECTION—Honor thy father and thy mother; that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.—Exodus 20:12.

Home—that place so dear to the heart of each one of us—is even more precious in the sight of God. He is concerned about our homes and those who live in them.

Right relationship between children and parents have much to do with the peace and prosperity of a community and a nation. Experience has demonstrated that to be true, but even more basic is the fact that it is in accord with the promise of God.

One of the sad breakdowns in modern life is that of proper honor and obedience to parents by children. In all too many homes God's order has been reversed and instead of honoring and obeying their parents, children (both young and old) have taken the place of "boss," and mother and father must obey if they want peace and rest.

The problem of juvenile delinquency, or perhaps we should say more correctly, parental delinquency, is right on our doorsteps now. That means that the need for our lesson is both great and acute. The future happiness of hundreds of thousands of children and the present welfare of thousands of neglected and boss-ridden parents will depend on the intelligence and faithfulness with which this lesson is taught in our churches, and the honesty of heart with which we all receive its truth.

I. The Responsibility Stated (Exod. 20:12).

"Honor thy father and thy mother"—how good, and substantial, and right those words sound.

We are told by Paul that this is the "first commandment with promise" (Eph. 6:1-3). The Lord was not making a bargain with man, or seeking to draw out obedience by a prize, but there is obviously a great reward in the observing of this commandment.

Then too as the children of God (if we are such) through Jesus Christ, the first and most important consideration to come before us is, What is the mind and will of the Maker of us all regarding this matter of the relationship between parents and children? His words are plain: we are to "honor" our fathers and our mothers.

The word "honor" carries with it a great many things, but perhaps the three outstanding elements are respect, obedience and affection.

But men do not wish to follow God's direction, so we see next

II. The Responsibility Evaded (Mark 7:9-13).

Such an important commandment naturally held a high place in the thinking of the community. To violate it involved a measure of shame which men sought to avoid. So the Jews of Christ's day devised a scheme which made it possible for a man to appear to be very religious even as he deprived his parents of the honor and help to which they were entitled by the law of God.

The man who did not wish to support his aged and needy parents could entirely evade that God-given responsibility by declaring that his property was "Corban"; that is, dedicated by a vow to God. Thereafter no matter how great was the need of his parents they could receive nothing, and yet he could keep it and use it for himself.

Thus do men make "the word of God of none effect" (v. 13) through their traditions. The method differs but the spirit persists even in our day.

Jesus made short work of such trickery and evasion. He declared their man-made creeds and traditions to be simply a means of making the command of God of none effect. Once more he condemns that formal religious observance which serves as a cloak for sin and selfishness.

III. The Responsibility Fulfilled (Luke 2:51-52; Eph. 6:1-4).

The manner in which children should be obedient to their parents and honor them in the home is beautifully exemplified in the life of our Lord, living as a boy in Nazareth.

In the home the growing youth finds the best place for normal, well-rounded development (v. 52). There is no substitute for the home.

The words of the Holy Spirit through Paul in Ephesians 6:1-4 stress the same truth and enlarge upon it.

This matter of honoring and obeying parents "is right," says Paul. It is the Lord's way, but it is also that which commends itself to every right-thinking person.

There is tremendously important truth on the other side of the picture. Parents are not to provoke their children to anger, to disrespect or disobedience.

May God help us who are parents that we may take to heart this part of our lesson. Our children are our most valuable possession.

The War Scandals

It was inevitable, perhaps that in handling war contracts involving many billions of dollars some crookedness would be brot to light by the Senate War Investigating Committee, of which Senator Mead of New York is now chairman, and which was headed by Mr. Truman before he became President.

But the astounding revelations made concerning the operations of Henry and Murray Garsson and their associates, who with shady reputations behind them and little else, obtained $82,000,000 of war contracts, has not only involved these contractors, but also several members of Congress, Army generals and other high officials.

The story of the scandal which has been unearthed has been told in countless columns of news dispatches and in many radio broadcasts, and the end is not yet in sight. Evidence already obtained by the Mead committee has disclosed an almost incredible series of manipulations, which began when the Garssons were given their first $5,000,000 munitions contract and a cash advance of $1,000,000 before they even had a corporation organized.

Other names brought into the Garsson investigation were those of Congressman Sabath, chairman of the House Rules Committee; Judge Samuel Dickstein of the New York Supreme Court and former congressman; Generals Waitt and English of the Army Chemical Warfare Service.

One member of the investigating committee said: "We have only had a peep under the tent."

Sidelights

Yes, sir, if some women's hindsight were as good as their foresight they wouldn't wear slacks.

We put little credence in the report that a worker up at Oak Ridge ate some uranium the other day and got atomic ache.

The housing shortage is really bad and getting worse if we are to take a tip from an ad that appeared in the New York Times a few days ago: "For Sale—A cave with three large rooms, undeveloped and unexplored, three miles north of Harrisburg, Va., on U. S. Route No. 11."

If farmers are still having trouble with the boll weevil, flea-hopper and other insects, it is suggested that they try using hexachlorocyclohexane (you pronounce it), the new 21-letter word product that is said to be ten times as deadly as DDT as far as bugs are concerned. For convenience the insecticide is known as 666.

Of no value are the millions of zinc war emergency pennies and 25 tons are to be dumped in the sea at San Francisco when final permission is received from Washington, Mint Superintendent Neil Callaghan announced. The pennies were offered to scrap metal dealers but were turned down. The principal reason for their refusal of purchase was the stringent federal regulations regarding their disposal. But there is no need of deep-sea divers to make plans to retrieve these great piles of pennies as each and everyone is blank.

Although we are reliably informed that men will not have to fashion their fall suits from the latest thing in barrel staves, still the news reaches us that none should become alarmed if he sees the women of the community appear in apparel that will give rise to the thought that the mattress at home has no cover. Yes, bed ticking will be much in demand this fall as dress-makers make use of this emergency material. It is reported by the Christian Science Monitor that the bed-tick suits have already made their appearance and when worn by a sweet young thing do not offend the eye. The Monitor quips: "Perhaps the greatest advantage is that its very appearance suggests relaxation. So obviously, it wouldn't do for office wear."

Women IN THE CHURCH
by Mary Fowler

Building family life upon an enduring basis should be one of our chief objectives in the post-war world, says Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, of the U. S. Children's Bureau. The impact of the war on families and children resulted in increased tensions and strains and deprived many children of normal home life. Sound employment policies, good housing, social security, and the efforts of churches and community agencies to strengthen the cultural and spiritual foundations of family life are essential if the home is to play its part in a free society.

It was a daughter of the State of Virginia, residing in New York City in 1898, and appalled at the lack of religious teaching available for the City's children, who began the movement now known as "the Daily Vacation Bible School." In 1871, Mrs. Virginia Sinclair Hawes moved from Charlottesville, Va., to New York with her doctor husband. She joined the Epiphany Baptist Church, and later gathered the children of East 71st street and vicinity for a summer Bible school; she raised the funds and hired the faculty. The first meeting place was in a beer garden back of a 71st street saloon. Years later, when the enterprise had grown to national proportions, Mrs. Hawes returned to Charlottesville, and died there in 1915. Two daughters now live in Richmond.

Interesting Notes

Your child will grow up some day, go out into the world, and be surprised to learn that you were right about a few things.

This will be recalled as an era when you could rent a tumble-down shack for as much as the thing was worth.

The Boston cream pie isn't a pie, Boston says it isn't from Boston, and if it's all the same we'll take apple.

Speaking of antiques, a woman wouldn't pay 10 cents for a 10-year-old hat, but she would give $200 for a 100-year-old bed-spread.

The mock turkey, mentioned in a home recipe, might be thoroughly satisfying, we fancy, at this time of year to a mock appetite.

An American soldier expressed surprise that there were no skyscrapers in London, and added that he never had seen a sky that had them more.

A University of Southern California scientist tells us that margarine is fully as nutritious as butter. Furthermore, the grocer will say, "No" just as emphatically when you ask for some.

Yes, women are different. Long before the silly man finishes his stammering proposal of marriage, she has mentally furnished every room in the apartment they're going to have.

Remember the good old days when almost everybody thought the Government was going to go broke distributing free garden seeds and messing around with Muscle Shoals?

Household Hints

Brooms washed in medium soapy water, and thoroughly dried, will keep in good condition and the wire will not rust.

For quick and easy dusting, try dampening a pair of men's old socks with furniture polish, and slip one on each hand.

Home canners are reminded that for best results fruits and vegetables should be canned as quickly as possible after their removal from the trees and gardens.

When dark weather is here, your house probably looks dim and gloomy. A little extra polishing of light centers—lamp bulbs and shades, mirrors and windows will prove worthwhile.

Sometimes "doubles" in the kitchen make for efficiency. Two measuring cups, one for dry and one for liquid ingredients, are needed for rapid work. Twin sets of salt and pepper shakers—one at the stove and one at the mixing center—save steps.

Some things which may be done for greater safety around the home are: Survey home and farm for accident hazards; clean up litter and recognized hazards; light all work areas and treacherous corners with lanterns or electric lights; repair broken steps and floors; provide suitable step ladders; label all medicines and poisons and keep them out of reach of children and livestock.

White sauces and cheese sauce pep up vegetable dishes. Eggs now in abundance may be used in these sauces to spare part of the flour. Make a thin sauce, then add a small quantity of the hot sauce to beaten eggs, stir the mixture into the rest of the sauce. Heat a few minutes in a double boiler before serving. Whenever eggs are added, the richness as well as mineral and protein value of the food is increased.

Escape to Home

By MIRIAM GILBERT

McClure Syndicate, WNU Features.

HE CROSSED to the other side of Vine street so that the light from the lamp post wouldn't shine on his face. He glanced around furtively, his head low. The walk from the train depot to the center of town hadn't been bad, but now he had to cross Main street in order to get home.

Someone passed him and Tommy pulled up his coat collar. He wondered how he could slip past the theater. He decided to stroll casually. A sudden shout startled him. "Tommy, Tommy Mitchell," the blond cashier called.

Panic-stricken, Tommy started to run. Couldn't they leave him in peace? This wasn't the way he wanted to come home. But they had invited trouble. They shouldn't have left him alone when they changed trains at Chicago. They had told him to hide in the shadows to avoid the crowd. It was easy then to jump back on the westbound train as it pulled out. They would be after him pretty soon, but in the meantime—

He swung open the front door. What would Ma say when she saw him? He tiptoed in and stood quietly in the kitchen doorway. Ma had her back to him and was stirring a cake batter. Alice's baby was sitting on a cushion on the floor. The baby looked up and spied Tommy. "Ganna, Ganna," he prattled. She turned around still mixing. "Tommy, my Tommy!"

He rushed forward as the bowl slipped from her hands. She clung to him, her hands running up and down his sleeve. "Why didn't you let us know somehow that you were coming home?"

He decided to stroll casually.

"I don't know how long I can stay, Ma, you see—"

"Here, take off your things. Alice is upstairs."

"Skipper's sure gotten big." Tommy swung the baby up in his arms.

"He was just a handful of pink flesh and blue eyes when I last saw him."

"Baby looks like Rick, doesn't he?" Ma said softly. "That's Alice's only consolation. Go up and say hello to her. I'll fix something for you to eat." Her fingers pressed deep into his arms. "You're thin as a scarecrow."

"Where's Dad?"

"Dad closed the garage, Ted was drafted and Dad can't find another mechanic to replace him. Ted's in the Pacific now," she added quietly.

"In the Pacific," Tommy ground out the words.

"I'm sorry, Tommy. Go up and see Alice."

He started up the steps, then turned back. "Ma, for tonight and maybe tomorrow, don't let any strangers in the house."

"I understand, Tommy, I'm proud of you no matter what."

He awoke with a start. His fingers touched the wall unbelievably. Rose-colored wallpaper. He was in his own room. He had spent one night at home.

Alice was sitting in the rocker. "It's after eleven. Dad waited for you to get up, then went to the garage. He wants to talk to you, Tommy—"

He looked at her, then swallowed. "They sent someone after me."

She nodded. "Tommy, for Rick's sake and mine, go downstairs. People have to know the truth. Much as you hate it, tell them everything."

"I'll be down in a few minutes."

As soon as Ma heard him coming, she ran to him. "I couldn't chase him away, Tommy. He told me all about you, more than the newspapers did."

"It's all right, Ma." He turned to the man and sighed. "Hello, MacCarthy. Did you use bloodhounds to trace me?"

"No, just common sense. I figured you were homesick. Don't you realize you're the first man who escaped from the Jap prison camp on Corregidor? Now the others on the island are free but you're still the important one. It's as if you paved the way for them." He nodded. "We should have let you come home first but the people needed to hear your story right away. That's why we booked you solid for bond rallies and lectures."

"I won't run away again, MacCarthy. I needed one smell of home to make me mad all over again at what the Japs made me and mine lose." He swung around to MacCarthy. "O. K., what's the day's schedule?"

The Last Bullet

By F. L. WHITMAN
McClure Syndicate.
WNU Features.

DARKNESS had not lessened the heat in the tin-roofed shanty. The dead, hot air hung in a smothering curtain about the two men. Hunched, arms hanging like clubs at his sides, Herman whispered to his younger companion, "Did you hear that?"

Jake reached for the iron bar, ready on the floor. Fear dried his throat. "What is it?" Motionless, they looked out the open end of the hut toward the yucca bush. "What did you hear?" Jake repeated.

Before he answered, Herman flashed a light on the ground, then the old miner shrugged. "I thought I heard a rattler."

Jake's short laugh was bitter. "I hope it wasn't the mate to the one on which you used our last bullet."

"Quit worryin' about ammunition, son. By tomorrow night those lead pills won't make any difference.

No, the younger man thought; tomorrow night they'd be in Las Vegas and the gold would be safe. He leaned on the iron bar. "Listen, Pops, I'd feel a lot better if that gold was here in the shanty."

An owl in the sage hooted twice before the old man answered. "We'd be cornered in here like rats if any-one came in—trust me. I think it's best to leave it buried under the yucca 'til morning. You catch some sleep, son, and I'll take the first watch."

Jake threshed about, hunting for the gunny sack which he'd filled with dried moss from above the pine line. "Where's that pillow got to?"

Herman tossed a jacket to him. "Here, use this. I don't want to show a light looking for it."

Jake thought with pleasure of sleeping again in a bed. Seven months since he'd worn pajamas. Seven months of back-breaking labor following the black veins with pick and shovel, but worth it if they got out with the gold; every beat and high grader in the region knew they were ready to pull stakes. And every mother's son of them would kill for less than that heavy sack buried outside.

He awakened at Herman's tight grip on his shoulder. The clouds slithered across the moon, revealing the old man's dead-white face as he stooped over him. The gold! Someone had discovered the hiding place! There was a low sound to the right of the shanty; a small clatter of disturbed gravel.

They crawled toward the open end of the cabin, stopping after each movement to listen, eyes strained toward the yucca. The intruder was on the path now. Something brushed against the water bucket with a metallic clink.

The bush was distinct in the moonlight. A figure darted straight toward it. Someone had watched them bury the sack! Jake had moved forward before Herman gripped hard on his arms. "I'm going to holler at this cuss," he said, "and when I do you flash the light full on him."

Jake nodded agreement. Herman held the empty revolver in his right hand, and for an endless minute there was no sound. Then he yelled, "Stand right where you are, stranger! I got you covered."

The light caught the prowler—and something else. "Rattler," yelped Jake.

The big snake, venomous head raised, was coiled at the roots of the yucca, not more than three feet from the intruder's rigid legs. "Don't move," Herman cautioned. Uselessly, for the man stood transfixed, staring. The old miner turned to Jake. "Keep that light on the rattler. I'm going out to get this coyote's gun. If he tries any monkey business, turn the light on him."

He aimed their empty gun at the prowler's middle. As if he knew that the snake would spring at the slightest sound, he did not speak while he removed the man's revolver from the belt. "Now git goin', mister." He turned the frightened man around with one quick thrust of his arm. The man stumbled, fell to his knees. Terror glazed his bulging eyes as he clawed the sand and started to run before he was entirely erect. Herman broke into a loud guffaw as the padded sound of his footsteps faded.

Jake's laugh echoed with Herman's but his eyes, intent on the rattler, were aware of the danger which Herman had forgotten. "Stop snickering long enough to shoot that snake."

The old man laughed harder, stepping into the circle of light at the base of the yucca. "Pops!" Jake's shouted warning came with the thought that the old man had lost his senses. Dropping the flashlight as he ran, he reached the bush just as Herman picked up the snake. Head still raised, it hung like a coiled bracelet from his fingers.

He handed the prowler's gun to Jake. "There. Now that we got a loaded gun, I guess we'll take the gold inside with us."

Jake forced words through his gaping mouth. "Why . . . why, you old fox!"

"Yep," Herman admitted. "I figured it this way: If I'd used the last bullet on that snake, the next best thing was to have the snake guard the gold. I did some taxi-dermy with the moss in that gunny sack pillow of yours while you was sleeping."
