Illinois State Capitol News

An increased excess of Illinois births over deaths for the first half of this year as compared with the first half of 1945, a lower maternal death rate, and a slightly increased rate of infant mortality are disclosed in a report just issued by the state department of public health.

There were 65,860 births and 45,932 deaths during the first six months of this year. In the corresponding period last year there were 62,335 births and 43,521 deaths. The maternal death rate, 1.7 per 1,000 live births, reported, was down from a rate of 1.9 last year.

Heart disease, cancer and accidents, in that order, were the leading causes of adult deaths both this year and last.

Are You Registered?

Do you know that, regardless of how often you may have voted in the past, you cannot vote at the election November 5, or at any subsequent election in Illinois, unless your name is on the list of registered voters for your precinct? That is the law and it will be enforced at the polls.

Among the unregistered citizens are most of the newly returned veterans and their wives, who have a particular interest in the election because of the referendum on the Illinois Veterans' Bonus, under which, if it is approved by a majority of all voters at the election, they may receive up to $900 from the State.

Longview Hi News

Several Longview faculty members attended the Illinois-Notre Dame game Saturday.

Lela Belle Partenheimer's softball team nosed out Judy Morris' players, 18 to 17, in this week's game.

Fifteen Longview high students were absent from school Monday morning to attend the wedding of Anna Mae Beatty and Gene Partenheimer.

The first year home economics group have been studying types of patterns, instruction sheets, and directions for cutting and construction. The second year home ec classes have been studying methods for cooking different types of vegetables.

Students and faculty went by bus to Schumacher's grove Monday evening where they were feted to wieners by the senior class. Despite the cold snap and scarcity of meat, the seniors managed to gather together all the materials necessary to make their annual all-school wiener roast a success.

Suffering its second defeat in two weeks, Longview's football team went down 49-0 before the Uni High squad Sept. 26. In a game lasting three and a fraction quarters, Uni High players proved themselves superior in every department of play with their tall, heavy line constantly outchargin' and outplaying the slightly smaller Longview boys.

After losing decisively to the strong, rough, and experienced Tolono team the week before, Longview's first-year footballers were a push-over for Uni High's orange-and-blues who scored at will.

It takes more yards of cloth to dress a Burmese woman than any other woman of the Orient. And one of the casualties of the war in Burma was cloth—it could not be imported, and what there was fell into the hands of the Japanese. Many women have been reduced to clothing themselves in loincloths made of gunny sacks, and in whole communities it has been necessary for women to stay indoors all day. The Burma Christian Council, the Red Cross, and the Welfare Department of the government have been working to secure cloth for the rural villages. The church's service in this field has been in charge of the Rev. C. E. Olmstead of Genoa, Ill. He has secured many bales of cloth from India, and thousands of parachutes from the government, and personally taken these to hundreds of villages for distribution to Christians, Buddhists and spirit-worshipping Karens. Each parachute will make shirts or blouses for 16 women.

IMPROVED
UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL
SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for October 6

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

PAUL'S BACKGROUND AND EARLY LIFE

LESSON TEXT: Acts 21:39; 22:3, 27, 28; 26:4, 5; Philippians 3:5, 6.

MEMORY SELECTION: Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth.—Ecclesiastes 12:1.

God works through men. When we study his work we study the lives of men—all types of men—but all yielded to him, and used by him.

Paul stands out as one of the most influential characters in all history. His life and letters, which we are to study the next three months, have had a tremendous effect on the human race. Especially is this true of his position and influence in the Christian church.

Under God he was the one who carried the gospel to the Gentile world, and then began the great missionary program of the church, which goes on to this very day. His writings are the steady and extensive foundation of much of our study and teaching of Christian doctrine.

I. Birthplace (Acts 21:39).

The place of a man's birth has a definite influence on his personality and usefulness. Tarsus, where Paul was born, was one of the most cosmopolitan cities in the world of that day. It was a Roman province, where men proudly held their citizenship in the great empire. Greek, the language of world culture, was spoken there.

Tarsus was a great educational and university center. It was in a rich and fertile area. It was at the head of navigation on the river Cydnus and on a great Roman highway. It was the capital of the province.

II. Education (Acts 22:3).

After his early training in the home and under rabbis in Tarsus, he went to Jerusalem to study in what was probably the best-equipped Hebrew college of that day, under one of the greatest teachers, Gamaliel.

Somewhere in his rearing he was taught a trade, for every Jewish boy learned to support himself with his own hands (see Acts 18:3).

He was instructed in the Word of God, and had a consuming zeal for religious things. Until he was converted, it counted against Christianity, but afterward it became a flaming fire to spread the truth in all the world.

His combined zeal and knowledge made him a man of truly broad mind and tolerant spirit (Acts 5:35-39).

III. Citizenship (Acts 22:27, 28).

The mighty power and prestige of Rome stood behind every Roman citizen. Paul used his citizenship for protection. It helped him in his service for the Lord. His prestige was used for God's glory.

It is a good sign when a man is proud of his national background, and it speaks well for the nation to which he belongs. But Paul came (as every Christian does) to know and appreciate a higher citizenship.

IV. Religion (Acts 26:4, 5).

Though a free-born Roman citizen, Paul was a Jew, and loyal to the religion of his people. He was a member of the strictest sect, the Pharisees, in which his family had held membership for generations.

He lived consistently in the observance of the laws and customs of his religious faith, and none could point to any flaw in his doctrine or failure in his life.

When he became a follower of Christ, there was no ground on which anyone could dismiss his conversion and his witness as the outbreak of a new viewpoint on the part of a renegade Jew.

It is to a man's credit that he faithfully lives up to the beliefs of the religion he professes. The result of such sincerity will be conversion, if he, like Paul, meets Christ and honestly faces the question of loyalty to him.

V. Race (Phil. 3:5, 6).

Paul counted it to be an honor to be known as a Hebrew and gloried in the fact that he was born, trained and lived within that racial as well as religious circle.

No one need ever be ashamed of his race, although he may be ashamed of things which members of his race have done. But there are even more things of which to be proud, and a man may add to the standing of his race by living his own life in cleanness of character and nobility of purpose. It is never a commendable thing to be ashamed of the race of one's fathers.

We must remember, however, that all the things in which Paul gloried, he found to be but refuse when he compared them with Christ (see Phil. 3:7, 8).

Everything worthwhile in a man's life God can glorify and use. But none of them, no matter how precious they may seem to be, compares with fellowship with and service for the Lord.

Are You Registered?

Do you know that, regardless of how often you may have voted in the past, you cannot vote at the election November 5, or at any subsequent election in Illinois, unless your name is on the list of registered voters for your precinct? That is the law and it will be enforced at the polls.

A survey shows that approximately one out of every three men and women in downstate Illinois, who otherwise would be eligible to vote, has not registered. This is not true in Cook County, where the permanent registration law has been in effect for many years.

Among the unregistered citizens are most of the newly returned veterans and their wives, who have a particular interest in the election because of the referendum on the Illinois Veterans' Bonus, under which, if it is approved by a majority of all voters at the election, they may receive up to $900 from the State.

HOW TO REGISTER

Go to the County Clerk's office in Urbana, any time during business hours, any day up to and including Monday, Oct. 7. Give your name, your address, your date and place of birth, when naturalized if not born in the United States, and state how long you have lived in Illinois, in Champaign county, and in your precinct. You do not have to state your membership in any political party. Your name will be listed as a voter in your precinct and will remain on the list permanently. You will not need to register again unless you move.

Or go to your regular precinct polling place any time on Tuesday, Oct. 8, between the hours of 6:00 a. m. and 9:00 p. m. and proceed as indicated above.

Protect your sacred birthright of American suffrage.

Pershing's Advice

On his 86th birthday recently, General John J. Pershing commander of the A. E. F. in World War I, gave a patriotic message of admonition to the nation with respect to preparedness, as he has done on many other occasions during his long life of devotion to his country. He said:

"In this postwar period of international differences, it is incumbent upon our country to enforce our diplomacy with continued strength. 'The World War I would have insured peace had we dictated our terms in Berlin and brought home the suffering of occupation to the German people, and, at the same time had maintained a respectable posture of defense on land and sea and in the air. Instead, we and our Allies after a short occupation on the fringe of Germany, withdrew, and permitted the German government, especially under Hitler, to violate the terms of the Versailles Treaty, and while so doing, we invited aggression by reducing our defense to the point of weakness.

'Pearl Harbor was a consequence, as was our participation in World War II. Allied victory was painfully achieved, but only after America had attained her full strength.

'Once again, we have learned that preparedness is the guardian of peace, and particularly is this so in the age of the atomic bomb and guided missiles upon which we are entering. Let us not forget this important lesson, but observe it with national unity, so that our future shall be secure in peace, and our influence effective in stopping aggressors from daring to impose their will upon humanity.'

Sidelights

The $64 question in hundreds of homes—"What are we going to have for dinner?"

An 89-year-old Washington, D. C. resident attributes his longevity to a weekly alcohol bath—but failed to state whether it was internal or external.

It was impossible—it just could not happen! Anyway, a Miami police desk sergeant wouldn't believe the story of a woman who reported that an automobile had collided with a submarine. But she insisted it was true and Officer D. D. Carver went to investigate. His report revealed that a car had jumped a retaining wall and crashed into a World War I sub moored in the Miami river.

A friend tells us that recently he was in conversation with a young G. I. who was having a hard time making both ends meet. Although he was receiving a fair wage, still things were not going so good. He explained that now he was budgeting his income in an effort to get things straightened out. "And how, asked our friend, are you budgeting your pay check?" "Well, I allot 40 per cent for food, 30 per cent for rent, 30 per cent for clothing, and 20 per cent for amusement and incidentals," explained the G. I. Now wait a minute, that adds up to 120 per cent! corrected our friend. "Don't I know it!" was the G. I.'s parting reply.

Wars have been fought, nations have been ripped asunder and blood in great quantities has been spilled throughout the years as patriots fought for the right to cast their vote for those by whom they wished to be governed. And yet, we in America must be urged and begged, pleaded with and even threatened before many of us will go to the polls to mark our ballots. It doesn't make sense and yet it is true. We fight for something we want, but when we get it, we lose all interest in it. Of course, we must agree that we have had too much politics and too many elections this year and many have gotten tired of listening to the plea of the office-seeker, however, that is a part of the democratic process and is why this country is great.

The envy created among a group of youngsters when one of their playmates shows up with a new bicycle is nothing as compared with the envy of other Philadelphia firemen for members of Engine Company No. 68. The smoke eaters of Company 68 have answered the call of a lifetime—fire in a Turkish bath on ladies' day. While all the steam-rooms were operating at capacity, Mrs. Besse Esack, a regular customer, arrived for her weekly par-boiling and was the first to notice the fire. First turning in the alarm, she then rushed into the building calling out: 'Girls, don't get excited, but there's a fire here.' Off they came from the massage tables and out of the steam boxes, just as the firemen arrived on the scene. From the building rushed the ladies in Turkish sarongs, carrying dresses, stockings and sundry unmentionables. It is reported that not less than 1000 persons had gathered on the sidewalks for the show... or to watch the firemen fight the $100,000 blaze.

U. I. Students
Show Interest
In Church Ties

A definite increase in religious interest among students at the University of Illinois is shown by statistics showing their religious preferences over the years. On the Urbana-Champaign campus in the second semester of 1945-46, when enrollment was at the all-time high of 12,788, more than 92 per cent of the students indicated a preference. The previous peak enrollment was 12,631 in 1938, and then only 85 per cent indicated a religious preference. In 1933 only 77 per cent gave such an indication.

In the history of student religious activity, the University of Illinois has a unique place. As a state institution, it is non-sectarian. But it is at the Illinois campus that the student church foundation movement was born and has grown greatly.

In 1906 the first church expressly for college students was established there. It was the University Presbyterian church, which now also operates McKinley foundation at the campus.

In 1913 the world's first church foundation, "A church home away from home" was established at Illinois, the Wesley foundation of the Methodist church. This church foundation idea has now extended throughout the world, and at the Illinois campus there are nine such foundations in addition to the YMCA and YWCA, which are the two oldest student organizations at the University.

Emergency Knife

When a flyer is hurt during combat operations, his wounds must be treated quickly. Removing his heavy flying clothing takes valuable time and might subject him to weather and shock. Besides, it would be hard to dress him again. An answer to the problem has been found in an emergency knife with a two-inch blade of stainless steel which can speedily rip through several layers of clothing. After the wound is treated, the ripped section can easily be bound together. The knife has a wooden handle and the rust-resistant stainless steel blade is perforated, so that the knife will be light enough to float if the plane must be abandoned. It is attached to a leather sheath by a cord.

Amazingly Yours

By VERN GODKIN

LOOKING at her husband as though it were his fault, Amelia Ames complained, "this chow mein is too crisp."

George Ames grinned good-naturedly and winked at his daughter and son-in-law. They started to smile, sobered as Mrs. Ames spoke again. "Judy, eat your egg fonyung. It's good for you, and you need it. I think I'll have to come and spend another week with you and get you built up."

Judy opened her mouth to say something, then started eating. Ted frowned. "She weighs as much as she ever did," he said.

"Well, she wouldn't if I didn't watch over her. Look what happened when you moved to Albany. Poor Judy was worn out just from the packing up. If I hadn't gone right along with her and helped her get settled she'd have been in bed for a month . . . and also I had to come up there every other week to see that she took care of herself. That's why I insisted that you move back here again near us so that I could keep a closer eye on her. Even now I hate to go off on this trip with George for fear she'll do something foolish."

George gave up. But it was time to do something about it. He lay awake long that night as an idea formed.

At the office the next morning he stopped in the middle of preparations for a month's business trip through the West to phone Ted to lunch with him. It was going to take some careful planning to get around Amelia, they agree.

Amelia Ames . . . her crisp manner was just a cover up for a soft heart.

Things went along fairly smoothly for three weeks. New towns and new faces always appealed to Amelia. Then, on the day before they were to start their return trip, George came back to the hotel room to find her feverishly packing.

"We're leaving in an hour," she announced. "I got plane reservations by telling them that Judy was in a serious situation."

"Judy! What's happened?"

"She . . . she . . . Oh, read the letter. It's there on the dresser."

George smothered a grin. "I don't see anything here to get excited about. It just says they've bought a ranch."

"Not only a ranch, but a cattle ranch," she almost shrieked.

"Well, why not? That's what Ted studied for at college." Amelia ignored him. "Imagine, taking poor Judy out on a place like that . . . twenty miles from the nearest town . . . and they've already moved. That letter's over a week old . . . Oh, my poor lamb! . . . all alone in a deserted ranch house."

George managed to send a telegram to Ted. "Get out the Welcome mat and make it big."

Ted tried his best. He even had neighboring cowhands on horseback meet them at the ranch gate to escort their taxi the last half mile.

Amelia was impressed, but not fooled. She was looking for Judy. They found her at the ranch house, dressed in jeans, riding boots, and an orange silk shirt open at the throat.

Amelia gulped in disbelief. "Why, I was never so amazed in my life," she declared to George as they got into bed a few hours later. "My Judy, dressed like a movie cowgirl . . . and proud of it . . . and the house, all in perfect order . . . and she wouldn't let me do a thing!"

"That dinner wasn't bad either," George added.

"Bad! It was perfect. I couldn't have done better myself. It's amazing," she repeated, almost regretfully.

George chuckled. "Well, isn't she your daughter?"

He would liked to have seen Ted about now and said "I told you so," as he recalled their lunch a month ago.

"Judy's really all that you could want her to be, Ted," he'd said. "Just give her a chance to break the apron strings and get going by herself and you'll see."

Ted hadn't looked too convinced then, but he had the proof now. In fact when he had said goodnight, he had whispered, "She's a regular chip off the old block," and winked and nodded at Amelia.

The easier the gal on the eyes the harder on the pocketbook!

A man is never so weak as when a woman tells him how strong he is!

June brides get the showers and the grooms catch the thunder.

I understand she married a struggling young man.

Yes, he struggled, but he could not get away.

The mule was trying the old farmer's patience. Repeatedly, the long-eared animal would start cautiously, take a few steps, and then stop.

A passerby paused to watch the slow process.

Looks to me, he said, as if that mule is balky.

The farmer shook his head.

No, he's a fust-class mule, he replied. But he's so 'fraid I'll say, 'Whoa' an' he won't hear me, that he stops every now and then to listen.

Oldsters' Diets

From the diet standpoint, elderly people can be divided into two groups—those hale and hearty but less active than formerly, and those whose bodies are disabled, sick or infirm. Men and women in both groups are likely to need fewer calories than in their more active years. The best way to reduce calories is to go light on fats, sweets and starches, but remember some fat is necessary and a moderate amount of sweets makes food more palatable. Needs for vitamins and minerals continue about the same in old age, so meals should include fruits, vegetables, milk, eggs and other foods required at every age. Older persons generally need to have food prepared so it is easy to chew and digest. Fruit juices and tomato juice are suitable, and stewed and baked fruits are usually better than raw whole fruits. Good proteins are ground or diced meats, flaked fish, eggs, cottage cheese, cheddar cheese toasted or ground.

Root Crop Storage

Roots such as rutabagas, beets, carrots and turnips can be stored in a cool storage where the air is not too dry. They should not be harvested until the soil has cooled off. Low temperature tends to fill the plant cells with sugar and starchy materials, thus reducing the water content of the root and increasing the keeping quality. Very often these root crops are stored in the garden in the original rows if the plot is well drained. When the weather becomes cold, the tops of the plants are cut off to within 1 to 1/2 inches of the root and row covered with 4 to 6 inches of soil. The roots are dug as they are needed. Another method of storage is to harvest the roots in early winter, remove the tops and store in a cellar or bank. The preferred storage condition for root crops of this nature is a cool, moist storage, but not for sweet potatoes, which require a dry warm storage.

The best way to check up on TB is by chest X-ray. The best time to check up on TB is before outward signs or symptoms appear. Even apparently healthy people now have a chest X ray

Anesthetic Studies
Anesthetics are entirely essential in surgical operations, but they are not without some detrimental effects. Recent experiments with animals have shown that males receiving large doses of chloroform experience greater kidney damage than females—69 per cent in the former and 20 in the latter. Different types of cells have been found in the kidney tissues of the two sexes. Experiments made at the National Cancer Institute, Bethesda, Md., by Allan B. Eschenbrenner and Eliza Miller indicate that a sex hormone factor is involved in this difference in the sexes. In experiments with mice, a 20 per cent destruction of the kidney cells was observed in normal females. In castrated males the damage was only slightly larger, 31 per cent. In normal males the cell damage amounted to 69 per cent. When a second group of castrated males was given the male hormone to offset the effect of castration, the damage done jumped from 31 to 64 per cent.

Bert Childers and the Melon Patch

Bert Childers put an ad in the Clarion the other day. Here's what it said:

"Planted more melons than I can eat this year. Stop by and pick as many as you want. All free."

As you can guess, plenty of folks sent their kids over and plenty of the parents came too. Stripped Bert's melon patch in no time. And as they went away, Bert treated the kids to lemonade, and offered the grownups a glass of ice-cold sparkling beer.

Naturally it puzzled some folks . . . but Bert explains: "It gives me a kick to share things when I can afford to—whether it's the melons, or the lemonade, or beer. I guess I just like to indulge my whims."

From where I sit, if we had more "self-indulgent" people like Bert—who believe in share and share alike, live and let live, this tired world would be a whole lot better off!

Fatherly Perception

By MARGARET ELSOM

WE HAD been married about ten months when I said to Marie: "Darling, how much do you think we could scrape up to buy a car—just a cheap one, any kind just so long as it goes?"

Marie was washing the supper dishes at the time, and me—well I was drying them for her.

Here we are, working on a fruit farm, 50 miles away from our nearest relative, and six miles from the nearest town. Once a week we managed to get into town with Mr. Kayes (my boss). But when a man expects to become a father in two months' time he wants to make certain he has a definite way of getting to the hospital ahead of the stork.

Marie sighed a little. "Yes, things sometimes happen before schedule. I think we could manage a cheap car, say around $200."

There had been an ad running in the paper along these lines: "For sale, Model A, good running order, five good tires, motor recently overhauled. Ceiling price; Phone 264." Marie agreed it might do.

I threw the paper aside and went over to the telephone.

"Yup, this here's the place, Mister—car ain't sold as yet, she ain't, but she's likely right smart goin' to be. You don't see bargains a-carburatin' under your nose like this every day; no sir. She won't be settin' here long, no she won't, so you want to grab her right quick."

"How much?" I asked.

"Two and a half as she stands—right ready to exhilarate down the home stretch—yes sir," he said.

We are working on a fruit farm ... Gee, but I love her!

It happened that the owner of the car was a very old gentleman who thought that his rheumatism wouldn't let his leg move fast enough to "break" her when she needed it. He was slightly stubborn over the $50, but I won out. In half an hour I was riding down the front street, proud as any expectant father. I felt I had obeyed my "premonition" to get a conveyance—and my heart sang. So excited was I that I pulled her over to the curb and went into the corner drug store to phone Marie.

"Darling," I said, "we are the owner of a $200 automobile—and it runs." She sounded excited. "What's the matter—you're all right, are you?" I asked breathlessly.

"Oh, yes, dear," she said, "but hurry home—it's happened."

My heart ceased to beat and the booth went all black for just a moment, but, pulling myself together, as an expectant father should, I told her to get right into bed. I would be home immediately. It had happened—and her all alone, and—and at the telephone! Why it was impossible. But she said it had happened. Oh, the poor darling.

I jumped into the car and raced around to Dr. Gillets. He was just changing a tire in his garage. I streaked across the lawn and pulled him toward my humble car, explaining what had happened. "I'll take you out, doctor—I'll take you out—never mind your flat tire—I'll run you out to Marie right away."

"But—but my dear man," he said, "let me at least get my bag."

He rushed to the house, coming out again in two seconds flat. Jumping in the car, he asked, "Did you say she answered the phone?"

"Yes, doctor, yes—yes and I told her to get right back into bed, I'd be right out."

"Incredible," he mumbled, "incredible."

"Will that hurt her?" I pleaded.

"Will what hurt her?"

"Incredible?" I said. And still don't know why the doctor grinned. Well, the old car snorted up the hills, and back-fired down them. Leaning heavy round the bends she ticked off the six miles quick. A cow got in the way once. I pressed the horn button, and it went "Br-r-r-pp" and unthinkingly I said "Excuse me."

Looking back, on that evening, I sure feel like the fool that I was. As long as I live, I'll never forget the scene when we opened the door.

There was Marie on her hands and knees, over a cardboard carton which held Donald and five newly born kittens!

I had to wait six more weeks before I became a father!

U. I. Policies Make History In Education

Four-Point Program Compared To Land Grant Act In Importance.

History-making educational policies setting goals for higher education in Illinois for years to come have been adopted by the University of Illinois Board of Trustees.

The four-point program is considered equivalent in state importance to the original Federal Land Grant Act, signed by Abraham Lincoln, which provided for the establishment of the University of Illinois and other land grant colleges.

Authorities term it "great courage" for the University now to step out in front with a program to set future standards for all of the state, and point out that the University is the first institution to take official action at a time of unusual educational crisis.

The four-point program provides:

1. Training for 15,000 students on the Urbana campus in September.
2. Legislation for an expanded system of junior colleges.
3. Major expansion of post-graduate work in the high schools of the state, where first-year credits acceptable to the University and other colleges may be earned.
4. A branch of the University in Chicago to provide the first two years of University work.

The impact of this program on the state is two-fold. The immediate effect is to solve the most urgent educational problem the state has ever faced, the problem of providing education for returning veterans and young people graduating from high schools; its permanent effect will be to assure the position of leadership which Illinois now holds as one of the richest areas on the earth.

All factions agree that Illinois, which has many raw materials and is the center of the whole Mississippi Valley, needs more "trained personnel in larger numbers than we now provide to develop the state, and consequently the whole Mississippi area."

Allergy Specialists Train at Univ. of Ill.

A comprehensive program to train specialists in allergy, the first of its kind in the country, was started this year at the University of Illinois College of Medicine. With less than 400 allergists in the whole country, half the people of the United States suffer from allergy of some sort, medical authorities say. As one of the first steps in the program, the University set up an allergy unit. Research is a major phase of the unit's activity, with few sufferers getting their share of attention and the rarer allergies caused by lipstick, wood smoke, animal fur, and other materials coming in for consideration.

The training and research program is correlated with the allergy clinic, which has been in operation more than 17 years. The clinic has been enlarged to treat nearly 100 patients a day. Gaining practical experience in the clinic as well as in the field of research, the first class of graduate doctors, made up largely of army and navy veterans, enrolled in the first one-year course starting in January.

Jobs for Teachers Show All-Time High; Supply Low—U. of I.

Although the demand for teachers has reached an all-time high, the supply is no greater than a year ago, reports L. W. Williams, secretary for the University of Illinois committee on appointment of teachers.

Many public school men who went to war are returning to their former positions, but Williams reports that at the same time women are leaving the teaching profession "en masse" to become housewives.

The situation is particularly bad at the elementary school level, but the walkout of women is also affecting the high schools where there is a critical shortage of instructors in home economics, art, physical education for girls, and in the special fields such as speech correction and remedial reading.

Other shortages of high school teachers are in the subjects of commerce and science—especially physics and chemistry. Veterans have brought "some relief," however, in the supply of agriculture teachers, instructors in physical education for boys, and in the coaching field, where the shortage was serious a year ago.
