Illinois State Capitol News

Gov. Dwight H. Green in a proclamation has designated the period beginning March 11 as American Legion Week in Illinois and urged its appropriate observance.

Gov. Dwight H. Green has announced the appointment of Col. Elmer H. Droste of Mt. Olive as deputy director of the state veterans' bonus administration in charge of the downstate office which will be located in Springfield. Office space in the former Central high school building in Springfield has been secured and the work of setting up the downstate office will be carried on as fast as possible. It is hoped that the first bonus payments can be made by July 1.

Old age pensions made a new record in Illinois in January, 1947 when the average payment was $40.07. Allotments were made to 126,870 persons and the total cost was $5,083,578. The average grant was thirty-five cents higher than in December, 1946.

A new record was also made in the aid to the dependent children program when monthly allowances of $34.01 per child and $83.59 per family were made. There were 56,016 dependent children in 22,788 families on the rolls for the month. Total payments were $1,904,848.

Gov. Dwight H. Green has called attention to the observance of Friday, Feb. 21, as a World Day of Prayer and commended it to Illinois citizens. The statement says in part:

"It has well been said that 'more is wrought by prayer than this world dreams of.' In these troubled times, when all nations and all peoples, in varying measure, are reaping the sorry aftermath of the world's greatest war faithful hearts in many lands turn instinctively to God for comfort and for guidance.

"This present plan for a World Day of Prayer is well-conceived and timely. I commend the undertaking and the occasion to the reverent consideration of the people of Illinois."

THE GOOD SHEPHERD

LESSON TEXT—John 10:7-18.
MEMORY SELECTION—I am the good shepherd; the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep.—John 10:11.

An open door! How inviting! Jesus had just been talking to the man once blind (John 9) who had seen the temple door closed against him. It shut him out from all the sacred traditions of his people, but it turned him to Jesus, who presents himself in our lesson as "the door of the sheep."

I. The Door of the Sheep (vv. 7-10).

The preceding verses of chapter 10 are important, for they identify Jesus as the true Shepherd. He speaks of his people as his sheep.

Flocks were sometimes kept in the field at night, as was the case on the night when Jesus was born in Bethlehem. But ordinarily they were brought into a sheepfold, where many flocks gathered for protection. A shepherd was on guard at the door. Thieves would climb the wall to steal sheep, but the true shepherds, when they came in the morning to lead forth their flocks, entered by the door. They called out their own flock by name.

It is said that only sick sheep will follow a stranger, which may explain why so many false isms of our day appeal to the sick and lead them away from the Good Shepherd.

Do you know his blessed voice? Have you responded to his call? Will you follow him? Decide now.

Consider the beautiful figure of the shepherd as the door of the sheepfold. When the sheep enter the fold to rest, he is the door. When they are ready to go out to feed in green pastures again, he is the door.

Note that they go in and out. Belonging to Christ is not bondage. If any man enter in by Christ, the Door, he is free to go in and out, to find pasture, to live for and to serve him.

"The Door"—what a striking figure! It is a means of entry, the only way in. Every door has two sides and the side we are on determines whether we are inside or outside—saved or lost. Children often sing:

"One Door and only one,
And yet its sides are two—
Inside and outside;
On which side are you?"

Then repeating the two first lines comes the direct testimony and question.

"I am on the inside;
On which side are you?"

II. The Keeper of the Sheep (vv. 11-13).

We think of sheep as peacefully grazing on the hillside—an idyllic picture in the summer sunshine. But there were dangers to meet. It is so with Christ's sheep too, and then he is there to keep them. The wolves come out as the shadows gather. They come to kill and to scatter. Where then is the shepherd? If he is only a hireling, serving for what may "be in it" for him, he will flee.

How perfectly this pictures religious leaders, who, in spite of their swelling words and ingratiating manners, desert the flock in the hour of adversity. Fair-weather friends are they, who disappear when darkness and danger appear.

In the darkest hour Jesus is nearest at hand. He never fails. He has no fear, for has he not tasted the bitter death of Cavalry's tree for you and me? He is the Good Shepherd. He gave his life for the sheep. Those who have put their trust in him shall never be put to shame.

III. The Saviour of the Sheep (vv. 14-18).

He laid down his life for the sheep. Ah, yes, it is all too true that evil men laid wicked hands on him and crucified him. Their guilt is awful. But it is clear from Scripture that until the hour had come for Jesus to be made sin for the redemption of man, they could not touch him (see Luke 4:29, 30; John 8:59).

When the time came, Christ laid down his life in accord with "the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God" (Acts 2:23). He died for us, not as a martyr to a cause, or the victim of an accident or miscarriage of justice, but willingly, and for the glory of God.

Yes, he died for us, but he also died for every lost soul who will hear his voice. There are "other sheep" about whom the Lord is deeply concerned. Are we?

He "must bring" them—but remember, God works through yielded believers—through men and women. We ought to be eager instruments in his hands to reach these other sheep, whatever their race, creed, or condition.

Do not miss the note of unity in verse 16. "There shall be one fold." Sometimes one wonders as Christians fight one another how they will ever be brought into the unity of one fold. Only the Lord can do it—the "must bring" us together—but let us not contribute one iota to the confusion and division which must so grieve his Father-heart.

The Unknown Scout

February 8 marked the 37th anniversary of the incorporation of the Boy Scouts of America under the laws of the District of Columbia in Washington in 1910. From that time the movement has spread to every section of the country, and the organization now numbers approximately 2,000,000 members.

How many American boys have received the beneficial training and the fine influence of Scouting cannot be estimated, but there are many millions of them, and they include thousands who have attained prominence in the life of the nation.

The story of an incident which resulted in the introduction of Scouting in this country is interesting, and may be told briefly as follows:

About 40 years ago, William D. Boyce, a Chicago publisher, on a European trip, lost his way in a London fog. A young English lad, observing the stranger's embarrassment, approached him, and briskly saluting said: "May I be of service to you?"

Mr. Boyce inquired the way to his hotel, and the lad accompanied him there, whereupon the publisher offered his young guide a coin for his service, but the boy said: "I am a Scout and Scouts do not accept tips for courtesies."

Mr. Boyce was interested and impressed. He asked about the Scouts. His young friend took him to the office of Sir Robert Baden-Powell, founder of the movement, and as a result when Mr. Boyce later sailed for home he brought a trunk full of literature pertaining to scouting. He then started the Boy Scout movement in America, with the aid of others who recognized the value of the training it affords.

A medal awarded to "The Unknown Scout," who befriended Mr. Boyce and thus caused the spread of scouting to America was presented to the International Scout Bureau in London, where it will be kept as a permanent memorial. It is inscribed as follows:

"To the Unknown Scout, whose faithfulness in the performance of the daily good turn brought the Scout movement to the United States of America."

Perhaps never has a simple act of kindness brought forth greater or more beneficial results than that performed by this unknown London Boy Scout.

Death of Adm. Mitscher

In the death of Admiral Marc A. Mitscher, which occurred recently at the Norfolk Naval Hospital, the United States Navy and the nation lost one of the most daring commanders of World War II. He was stricken with a heart attack on January 26, his 60th birthday, and passed away quietly in his sleep.

Admiral Mitscher was commander in chief of the Atlantic Fleet at the time of his death, and will be succeeded in that post by Admiral W. H. P. Blandy.

As commander of the famed Task Force 53, Mitscher scourged the Japanese fleet, air forces and shore bases throughout wide expanses of the Pacific during the latter part of the war, and contributed as much as any other single commander to the final defeat of the enemy. He was one of the Navy's first aviators, and a pioneer in developing the airplane carrier force as a formidable weapon of offensive warfare. Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, chief of Naval Operations, under whom Mitscher served in the Pacific, said of him: "The nation has lost a great leader. I always had a sense of security and comfort when Admiral Mitscher was the leader of Task Force 58 against the Japanese. I knew that what had to be done would be done in full measure. He needed no detailed instructions. All he needed was opportunity, and he made the most of every opportunity."

Secretary of the Navy Forrestal, in expressing his regret at the Pacific hero's death, said in part:

"The place he occupies in the hearts of those who served under him, officers and men, are a firmer basis of tribute than any that words could frame. The United States Navy, with sorrow and pride, sends its deep sympathy to Mrs. Marc A. Mitscher."

Sidelights

We are told of an ad that was seen recently in a Lonely Hearts column that brought splendid results—it stated: "I'm fit, fat, 40 and forsaken—but I'm lots of fun."

A long-time citizen of Columbia, S. C., has apparently become reconciled to the fact that the Civil war is at an end and he is willing to recognize those from north of the Mason and Dixon Line as not objectionable visitors in his home. In advertising a room for rent in his home, he states: "Nice room, nice bath, no objection to Yankees."

The docile husband stood before the police judge following his arrest on charges filed by his wife. The judge, looking down at the prisoner asked: "What induced you to hit your wife?" With a shrug of his shoulders, the man answered: "Well, she had her back to me, she was bent over, the frying pan was handy, and the back door was open. So—I just took a chance." "Case dismissed."

A farm journal carried the following essay on the cow as written by a 10-year-old boy in the community: "It has six sides, left, right, upper, lower, back and front. Its horns are to butt with and its mouth is to moo with. When it is hungry it moos and when it says nothing, all its insides are full of grass. It does not eat much, but it eats twice over so that it gets enough. The cow has a fine sense of smell. You can smell it far away. This is the reason for the fresh air in the country."

We have gotten so used to talking of billions that we seldom realize just how much that figure represents. We learn that a propeller on a pursuit plane traveling at 300 miles per hour would turn a billion times if the plane could cruise continuously for a year. That a billion dollar bills laid end to end would encircle the earth four times. And if you made 10 trips from New York to Miami, you would cover a distance of nearly a billion inches. Although it takes very little time to say "one billion," if you could go back one billion minutes you'd be living in the year 43 A. D.

Women IN THE CHURCH
by Mary Fowler

Miss Charlotte T. Holman, 84, a former Methodist missionary to India, founder of Holman Institute for homeless children at Agra, India, and winner of the British Government's Kisar-I Hind Medal for service to India's children, died recently at Alhambra, Calif. A Canadian-born school teacher, she went to India in 1900—the year of the great famine—and served in orphanages in Ajmere and Rajputana. She helped care for thousands of waifs and orphans, and later secured a sister to help her in the work. The Institute she founded became a coeducational school majoring in industrial arts training for famine and outcaste children. Some of the most beautiful rugs in India are made in its workshops.

Where Cissy Spent Her Honeymoon

Most of the young newlyweds in our town spend their honeymoon at Roundstone Lake or Jackson Falls; why the Martins even went as far as New York City.

But when Cissy Copper married the young Carter boy, they allowed as how they were going to spend their honeymoon right here.

"There's no place better than our town," Cissy says. "And I'd like to start married life at home, with things Bud and I are used to."

Makes sense, come to think of it. Folks naturally left them alone; and except for occasional visits to the Garden Tavern for a glass of beer, they stayed at home, getting used to married bliss.

My missus prefers traveling—and that's her right. But from where I sit, there's no place better for a honeymoon—or second honeymoon—than right at home—with your own possessions, good home cooking, and a friendly glass of beer or two—with the best companion in the world.

Smile Awhile

A girl's promise to be on time carries a lot of wait.

The reason a lot of fellows are bachelors is because they fail to embrace their opportunities.

He asked for burning kisses
And she said in accents cruel,
I may be a red-hot mama,
But I ain't nobody's fuel.

It has been said that chivalry is a male instinct which prompts a man to protect a woman from every man except himself.

Yessir, I'll be 95 next month, and I can truthfully say that I ain't got an enemy in this world. Splendid! And how did you manage that?

Simple enough. I just outlived 'em all, by cracky!

The retiring old usher was instructing his youthful successor in the details of his office. "And always remember, my boy, that we have nothing but good, kind Christians in this church, until you try to put someone else in their pew."

You seem to have had a serious accident.

Yes, said the bandaged person, I tried to climb a tree in my motor car.

What did you do that for?

Just to oblige a lady who was driving another car. She wanted to use the road.

The following essay on cats was turned in by a grade school pupil:

"Cats and people are funny animals. Cats have four paws and only one paw. People have forefathers and only one mother.

When a cat smells a rat he gets excited, so do people.

Cats carry tails and a lot of people carry tales, too.

All cats have fur coats. Some people have fur coats and the ones who don't have fur coats say catty things about the ones who have them."

Household Hints

If wax paper sticks together put it in the refrigerator for a few minutes and it will loosen.

Throw an old potato sack or two in the car trunk. Excellent to place under the rear wheels when stuck on an icy spot.

To prevent a cork from sticking in a glue bottle, dip it in oil. It will then slip out with no effort.

Potatoes boiled in their jackets hold twice as much vitamin C and three times as much vitamin B1 as baked potatoes contain.

Grease the inside of the pan in which you are boiling rice, noodles or spaghetti, and the water won't boil over.

When wiping windows, use vertical strokes on the inside and horizontal strokes on the outside. This enables you to see at a glance which side must be wiped again.

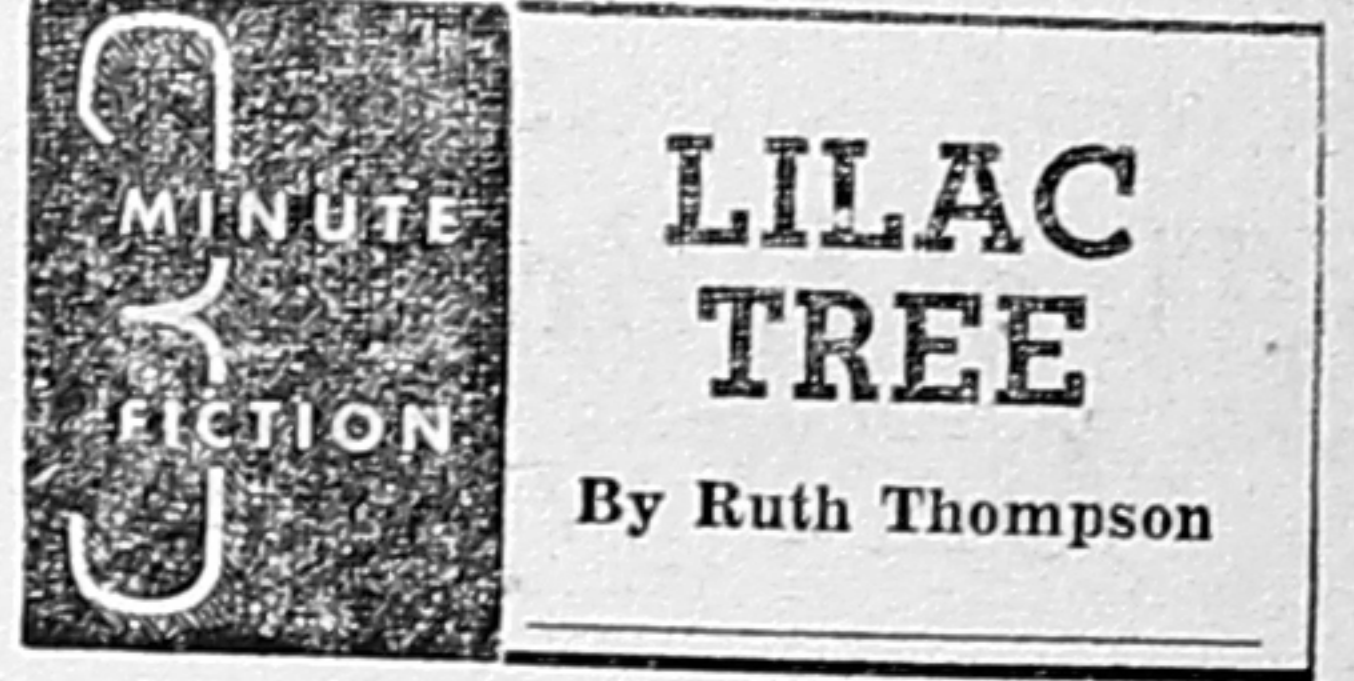

Fair Collective Bargaining Asked

Management wants equality with labor around the bargaining table rather than an end to collective bargaining, explains President William K. Jackson, of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Asserting the principle of collective bargaining has been accepted by American industry, Mr. Jackson said: "What representative business leadership wants is fair bargaining."

"The National Labor Relations Act as it now stands does not promote fair bargaining. Under this jaundiced act, the procedure is loaded against management in favor of unions."

"Even such elemental rights as free speech, the right of both sides to present the matters in dispute, are curtailed to tie the hands of management while the unions load the gun to enforce their demands."

LILAC TREE

By Ruth Thompson

WNU Features.

VIC strode ahead into the depot with his suitcase and Mary's grey tweed bag. Last night this had seemed such a perfect idea. Vic and she were dancing when he suggested it.

"We can be married right away over the line—no waiting around. Don't fuss about a lot of clothes," he had said. "Just wait. I'll dress you like a doll."

The first time he said that, Mary felt tingly from head to toe. She hated her job in the noisy restaurant. Every day the trays seemed heavier and clumsier to manage. Vic's cheery flirting at the counter had been a welcome diversion.

Vic set the bags down beside a long empty bench and she watched him hurry to the ticket-window. How queer, she thought, just two years ago, when she left Pine Creek—it was April then, too—she had entered the city through this same station. Then Mom had tucked a spray of purple lilac in the strap of the suitcase—"So you'll not be forgetting the lilac tree."

Mary smiled. She was remembering how she had called even the tiniest shrub a lilac tree. Someone came and sat close to her. Vic, it was, with the tickets in his hand. "What are you grinning about?" he asked. "Oh, nothing," she answered.

He let it go at that. He laid his arm across her shoulders, drew her close, while his pudgy fingers kept squeezing her arm. His lips almost touched hers.

Mary turned her face away, trying to ignore him. She noticed a woman who had entered the depot.

Vic's cheery flirting at the counter had been a welcome diversion.

The woman carried an armful of hauntingly sweet lilacs. She brushed past Mary. One spray fell near her.

"Vic," she said, touching his coat sleeve. "Pick up that lilac for me, won't you?"

"You're crazy. That weed! Why would you want that?" he asked. "Just you wait. I'll get you roses, a roomful of red roses."

MARY did not answer. She was seeing lilac trees, purple and white, all in bloom back home. She could almost smell their sweetness. Vic swore under his breath. Startled, Mary turned to him. A swarthy man, with hat pulled low, was approaching them. His face was vaguely familiar.

"Who is he, Vic?" Mary whispered, as she tried to recollect where or if she had met him. Vic paid no attention to her. Instead he spoke sharply to the man.

"What's the big idea, following me here? Didn't I tell everyone to lay low? I meant it. Mary and me are going away to—going away to be hitched."

Mary noticed uneasily how he hesitated as he spoke. The stranger's eyes shifted to Mary. She caught a glimpse of a scar high on one cheek, of shifty, dark eyes.

Something clicked. That picture in last night's paper. The column about another hold-up. Mary shivered—like when someone dropped a lump of snow down her back when she was a kid.

Then—"It's like this, boss—" He was whispering something in Vic's ear. "Boss." Startled, Mary tried to listen closer.

Vic swore again. His voice was harsh. "No!" he shouted.

Mary shivered. She looked around, hoping no one heard him.

"Listen, Baby," he said, turning to her. "I've got some business, some mighty important business to tend to. You wait here. I'll be back, pronto."

MARY watched them step into a large flashy car. At first she was frightened. Then there was no feeling in her body but a queer numbness. Only her brain stirred. It was clearing, like a mist rising after sun-rise.

Suddenly she grabbed up her grey tweed bag and almost ran to the ticket window. There were only two ahead of her. Breathlessly she asked the agent about the train to Pine Creek.

"Yes, Ma'am! In three minutes, better hurry," he said as he stamped her ticket.

Clutching the bit of paper in her fingers when he handed it to her, all of a sudden she felt as if she had been running through a dark, dense forest and had that minute stepped out into the warm clean sunlight.

4,000-Student U. of I. Branch On Navy Pier

124 Freshman, Sophomore Courses in Arts, Commerce, Engineering.

Chicago's Navy Pier, a city amusement center which was turned over to the Navy during the wartime emergency, now has been transformed into an Undergraduate Division of the University of Illinois.

This branch of the University accommodates approximately 4,000 Chicago-area students, mostly veterans, who otherwise would not have been able to continue their education.

Full courses on the freshman and sophomore levels are offered in liberal arts, commerce, and engineering, including architecture. One hundred and twenty-four courses are being given, with classroom work each week estimated at nearly 4,000 clock hours. A faculty of 219 qualified instructors has been recruited from the Chicago area.

The establishment of the new branch of the University in Chicago is a part of the University's expansion program to care for the State of Illinois' share of the national emergency in higher education.

Navy Pier is a well-known Chicago landmark. It has been remodeled to provide classrooms, four large lecture halls, 22 laboratories, a library with 10,000 volumes and a huge reading room, as well as cafeteria and lounge facilities for 4,000 students. The University has leased 373,000 square feet—nearly half of the Pier. The remainder is to be used for normal peacetime uses—shipping and convention accommodations.

The transformation of Navy Pier into a college required 350,000 man hours of labor in construction and remodeling.

The student cafeteria and a separate faculty dining room serves over 3,500 lunches each day. In addition the University operates three light lunch counters at convenient points on the pier.

Located near Chicago's Loop, the Navy Pier branch is easily accessible by all modes of transportation.

50 New Kinds Of Rubber Made At U. of Illinois

Fifty new kinds of synthetic rubber were made at the University of Illinois in a research laboratory established as a part of the government's wartime synthetic rubber program. This laboratory is the nation's largest university group working on improvement of synthetic rubber, and is a focal point for development of new experimental rubber.

Prof. Carl S. Marvel, who heads the work, said that in addition to developing 50 new synthetic rubbers the laboratory has carried out numerous other projects of lasting value, including: the establishment of the effect and importance of purity of materials going into synthetic rubber; improvement of the soap used in the rubber making process; and devising analytical methods for controlling production of rubber and thereby its quality during manufacture.

The laboratory at the University is devoted entirely to research on improvements in rubber manufacturing and new types of rubber, and involves no work in compounding, vulcanizing, or tire building. It operates in close co-operation with the rubber companies and with other university and industrial laboratories.

Whether any of the 50 new synthetic rubbers developed there will ever be adopted for tires remains to be learned. Some of the new rubbers show advantages for specialized uses other than tires.

State Pays One-Half Vet's Costs at U. of I.

Less than half the cost of educating veterans attending the University of Illinois is paid by the federal government; the balance is provided by the State of Illinois through its appropriations to the University.

The federal government is paying $9.65 per credit hour for instruction of veterans under the G.I. bill at Illinois. The actual cash cost of instruction at the University is $17.09 per credit hour, not counting cost of building and equipment. Counting depreciation on buildings and other capital assets, the state is contributing more than half the cost of the G.I.'s training.

Ill. Library's Collections Greatest of Any State U.

The University of Illinois Library has more than 2,500,000 items in its collections; is larger than that of any other state university; is third in size among American university libraries; and is growing at a greater rate than any other. It is exceeded in size only by the collections of Harvard and Yale.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY GEORGE S. BENSON
President—Harding College

Land of Vikings

Norway is one of the delightful little countries of Europe. About the size of two of our average states, her population is only three million—half that of New York City. A parliament is elected by direct vote of the people every four years, and it constitutes the real authority of the nation. They have a King, who reigns but does not rule. Next to the King, the speaker of the parliament is the highest official in the country. The fairhaired Norwegians are a strong, sturdy people, whose chief quality is individualism.

Communism invaded Norway at the end of World War I. A "labor" party was created by the Communists, but eventually most of its members went over to the "Socialist Democrats," now the leading party controlling more than half the 150 seats in parliament. The extent to which Marxian philosophies have been made into harmful practice is evident when one examines the present state of Norwegian industry. It is apparent that the early Communist influence did not just disappear in an assimilation into the leading labor party, but remains like a hungry dog, strayed from Russia, and is now eyeing the prosperous merchant fleet of Norway.

Equalization
The greatest private industry Norway has ever developed is her merchant marine that sails the seven seas, all out of proportion to the size of the country. This shipping industry has been the chief source of revenue for balancing the national budget and for obtaining essential foreign credit. It remains the backbone of Norwegian finance.

Present policies of the Socialist government, in an attempt to equalize everything for everybody, are seriously threatening this important industry. This is the pattern: It took 4,600,000 government dollars to subsidize the distribution of milk last year, therefore to meet the cost of this subsidy a 4,600,000 dollar tax was placed on the shipping industry because it had experienced a good year and appeared able to pay.

Killing the Goose
A reliable Norwegian informant told this story. The merchant marine lost many ships during the war, and although they were insured by Lloyd's of London it was impossible to transfer the money to Norway while the country was in the grip of the Germans. Accordingly, the funds were held as credit in London.

The present Socialist government now looks anxiously over the books of the shipping companies. If they conclude that a lost ship had quite paid for itself, they tax the company 85% of the face of the insurance policy. This extremely high tax on the shipping industry, plus virtual confiscation of insurance premiums on lost ships, threatens to reduce the industry to the detriment of the entire nation.

This is a fine example of killing the goose to get more eggs immediately, but the production of golden eggs in the future is definitely threatened. I cannot help feeling that the source of this sort of thing in Norway was the stray dog influence of Communism. I found it the distinct opinion of those who have done most to create the wealth of Norway that the greatest present threat to progress now is monopoly and regimentation.

Best Drugs Are No Cure for Malaria

In a discussion of quinine and atabrine in the Naval Medical Bulletin, Cmdr. Ellis H. Hudson, USNR, says the two drugs are the best we have for the treatment of malaria but that neither cures anything. To him malaria "is like a hardy perennial, always ready to grow up from its roots in liver, spleen and marrow no matter how briskly and successfully quinine and atabrine lop off the apparent phase in the blood. Of the two drugs Commander Hudson finds atabrine the better. He thinks it unfortunate that atabrine was first introduced as a substitute for quinine, as if it were a second string to the anti-malarial bow, to be used when quinine was unprocurable. The surgeon general of the navy holds that atabrine when properly used is "as effective as quinine and in many respects to be preferred."

Commander Hudson is rather pessimistic about finding a real cure for malaria. Reptiles, birds, monkeys contract the disease. Malaria parasites have been found in 130 species of birds, but the parasites that infect them "will not grow in man (with one exception); neither do they behave consistently in respect to each other." Commander Hudson says that "it is impossible to predict whether results gained in research on bird and monkey malarials will apply to each other or to human malaria." Further, no experimental animal will "take" human malaria, and no human malaria has ever been successfully cultured. Man must be his own experimental animal and test tube.
