Rev. Claude Temple Guest Speaker at Tuscola Church

(Tuscola Review)

Wednesday evening a happy congregation greeted Reverend Claude Temple at the Tuscola Methodist Church. This was the home coming of Reverend Temple, who is now the pastor of the Methodist Church at Charleston.

Reverend J. W. Armstrong introduced the speaker and told of pleasant associations with him. Reverend Temple gave a good sermon from one of the Beatitudes. He expressed his great pleasure in coming back to the old home church where as a boy of ten years, he was baptized and got the inspiration to be a preacher. His father, Charles Temple moved here from Garrett where he conducted a store. On the first Sunday, the father, mother and five children joined the Methodist church.

He was educated in Tuscola schools, attended college and in 1927 began his work of a preacher at Broadlands. He has held several good churches including Blue Mound and Bushnell and is now at Charleston, one of the best churches in the district.

Reverend Temple was accompanied here by his wife and they received a very fine welcome. An informal reception was held at the close of the service. He is an able preacher and his success is a great satisfaction to the congregation from which he was called to preach.

JESUS SUMS UP HIS CLAIMS

LESSON TEXT—John 12:12-16, 20-32.
MEMORY SELECTION—And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me.—John 12:32.

The last week of our Lord's ministry on earth comes before us today as we consider two events—one of which occurred on Sunday and the other on Tuesday. One sees here the attitude of men toward Christ, of God toward men, of the Father toward the Son, and the majestic drawing power of the Saviour.

I. Believing Men Honor Christ (vv. 12-16).

God says, "Him that offereth praise glorifieth me" (Ps. 50:23), and the believer recognizes that "praise is comely for the upright" (Ps. 33:1). Jesus is entirely worthy of the praise of every heart and voice.

Presenting himself as their Messiah, Jesus received the enthusiastic acclaim of his disciples and friends, who were probably joined by others drawn by the excitement.

The Pharisees did not join in (see Luke 19:39, 40), nor did the city, not even knowing who he was (Matt. 21:10, 11). So it is today; some love and praise him, some hate him, others just ignore him. Of which class are you?

He gave Jerusalem and the nation a final opportunity to receive him. It was not yet too late, but it was their last chance. Such a time comes in the life of every one of us. They rejected him. Do we?

But even though some did reject, let us not forget that there were those who shouted, "Hosanna"; who cast their garments down before him and waved palms of victory and joy. Thank God for their holy enthusiasm. Pray God that we may have a little more of it.

II. God Honors Men Who Serve Christ (vv. 20-26).

It is good to note that whatever prompted the coming of the Greeks, they wanted to see Jesus.

A man has progressed far on the road to blessing when he makes known his desire to see Jesus. Coming to him means coming to the One who has the words of eternal life.

Note that the disciples were wise enough to bring the men to Jesus. The true function of every Christian worker is to bring men to him.

The reply of our Lord to the Greeks, and to the disciples who brought them to him, seems a bit singular at first glance. Did he not wish to receive them? They had probably come to see the great religious leader, the King of the Jews—why did he talk about death?

The words of our Lord are clear. Men do not need an example, a leader, a teacher; they need a Saviour. It is as a sacrifice for sin that Christ will draw all men unto himself.

III. The Father Glorifies the Son (vv. 27-30).

The awful blackness of the burden of the world's sins which he was to bear pressed down upon our Lord in an agony of soul beyond our ability to understand. But even his troubled soul did not turn from the hour of death for us.

The question of verse 27 is essentially this: "Should I ask the Father to deliver me from this hour? No, I came to be man's Saviour." He did not look away, nor wish to turn back. He knew why he had come, and he was faithful even to death (Phil. 2:8; Heb. 2:9).

He had only one desire—that the name of God the Father should be glorified (v. 28). Do we who bear his holy name follow in his footsteps? Do we have an eye single to his glory—or do we seek our own?

Then came the voice from heaven; the Father had glorified his own name in the Son, and would do it again—yes, again and again.

Jesus knew the Father would do it, he did not need any assurance (v. 30), but for the sake of the people the witness was given. Notice the reaction of the listeners—some recognized that a heavenly message had been given; others had only heard some thunder.

May God give us grace to hear his voice when he speaks, and not consider it merely the rolling of some deep voice of thunder!

IV. The Son Draws All Men to Himself (vv. 31, 32).

Because Christ was lifted up on the cross and died, there is victory over sin and death, declared by his resurrection and ascension to the Father.

Satan is still at liberty in the world, but he is defeated (John 16:11). Death still comes, but the sting is gone for the Christian (I Cor. 15:55-57). The world is still fighting our Lord, but he is drawing men to himself here and there throughout the world.

One day he will come as King of kings and Lord of lords, to declare in its finality the victory which has already been won.

We should be reminded anew that it is Christ the Saviour who will draw men if we will only exalt him in our preaching and teaching. Let us do it!

Edison Centenary

February marks the 100th anniversary of the birth of Thomas A. Edison, the world's greatest inventor, who was born at Milan, Ohio, on Feb. 11, 1847, and died on October, 18, 1931, at the age of 84. He patented during his long life more than 1,000 inventions, many of them epoch-making in importance.

Aside from some instruction from his mother, he was virtually self-taught, and began earning his living as a newsboy on the Grand Trunk railway at the age of 12. He learned telegraphy and worked as a telegraph operator at various places in the United States and Canada. His first inventions were in the field of telegraphic communications, but he soon extended his inventive genius into many fields.

Among his most notable inventions were the phonograph, the incandescent lamp and lighting systems, motion pictures, a system of wireless telegraphy to operate between moving trains, the alkaline storage battery, and hundreds of others which ushered in the electrical age.

He received many decorations and medals for his achievements and in 1928 he was awarded a special gold medal by Congress "for development and application of inventions that have revolutionized civilization in the last century."

Dr. Charles F. Kettering, himself one of America's greatest inventors and researchers, recently said of Mr. Edison:

"As truly as though each of us had been named in his last will and testament—every industry, business, profession and home using electricity is a beneficiary of the labors of this great man."

No Disarmament Now

A definite and binding settlement of the atomic bomb question will be insisted upon by the United States before this country will agree to any disarmament proposal that would weaken our international position. Furthermore the Russian plan to agree on disarmament first and consider the bomb problem later will be firmly opposed.

Warren R. Austin, United States delegate to the Security Council, made it plain last week that any disarmament commission must not encroach on the American atomic energy commission. He also demanded that the scope of the United Nations disarmament commission be determined "now once and for all."

It is evident that the Russian proposal that all nations make public all information regarding their armed forces and armaments is designed to force the United States to reveal its secrets regarding its atomic weapons.

We insist, on the other hand, that these secrets shall not be disclosed until a system of international inspections satisfactory to us has been agreed upon and actually put into operation. Obviously any other course would be folly on our part.

In asserting that we will make no further concessions on this point, Mr. Austin is doubtless expressing the view of the vast majority of the American people.

Missouri is the leading manufacturing state west of the Mississippi river. Its most important manufacturing consists of meat packing, flour and grist mill products, tobacco and cigars, malt liquors, lumber, foundry and machine products.

Sidelights

With the month of June not too far off, maybe we should tell you of the June bride of 1946 who was just thrilled to death with the surprise she had for her husband. Yes, she had baked her first turkey and proudly placed the steaming bird on the dinner table. The young husband was all smiles and his mouth began to water in anticipation of the swell feed that was to be his. As he seated himself, he asked: "And what did you stuff the turkey with?" "Stuff it with!" exclaimed the bride. "Why, honey, this one wasn't hollow."

A used car dealer says that he recently spent one entire morning selling a returned G. I. car he thought dependable. Flushed with money he could not spend in Tokyo, the young fellow wanted a good car and shortly before noon the trade was made and he paid off in cold cash. A few hours later a friend dropped by and told the dealer that he saw his recent customer out on the highway having trouble. The ex-G. I. was not in a very happy frame of mind when at about four o'clock, he drove into the dealer's place and said: "Say, mister, how about giving me all over again that sales talk you gave me this morning—I'm becoming discouraged."

A recently returned supply sergeant, with a swell all-wool army blanket and an insatiable desire for butter, wondered whether he could exchange the former for a reasonable supply of the latter. "Who wants an army blanket, Joe?" his wife asked. "Let's unravel the blanket and I'll knit some socks; maybe you'll be able to make a deal." After a month of unraveling and knitting, Joe took a pair of socks to his favorite market and traded them for a pound of butter. This went on for weeks. Finally, the end of the blanket was in sight, only enough yarn was left for one sock. Joe went to the grocer with the one sock and said: "I know this is silly but what'll you give me for only one sock?" The grocer beamed, "For that sock, I'll give you three pounds of butter—that's all my wife needs to complete a blanket she's knitting!"

According to Mrs. Henry Sloane Coffin, Protestant church leader now traveling in the Orient, atabrine sent to Siam by Church World Service, representing all American Protestant churches, saved the lives and health of many thousands of farmers and enabled them to plant and harvest one of the largest rice crops of recent years. They were so depleted by malaria, she reports, that they could not work without atabrine, and the black market price of one tablet was more than a farmer could earn in a month—and he needed fifteen for a cure. Church World Service sent enough tablets for 150,000 farmers, and to relieve them of the temptation to sell the precious medication each tablet was broken in two. The result was many lives saved, a bumper rice crop, atabrine tablets down to one cent each. Another 150,000 Siamese have been treated for dysentery and tropical diseases.

TEACHER'S PROBLEM

By Chris Matthews

WNU Features.

THE only way to do anything is to go ahead and do it, my daddy used to say. And my daddy is a wonderful guy, Miss Evans. He's the best daddy in the world, and I know. That's the reason I'm writing this letter to you—because of my daddy. I'm writing to you because I don't want to hurt him. And I know you can help me, if you want to.

You will, won't you, Miss Evans? You've given me a good scolding many a time, but I remember the last one mostly, because it was only yesterday, just before arithmetic class.

I had forgotten to do my arithmetic lesson. I was glancing through the problems and saw that if I started on them now I wouldn't get three problems solved before class would begin. So I slipped a note to Mary Jane behind me, asking her if she'd let me take her copy. Mary Jane is the smartest girl in the class, and we're pretty good friends, so she let me take it.

I started copying her work, and believe me, Miss Evans, I really felt guilty doing it. I felt like a traitor. I was sure I could have done the problems myself if I had the time, because arithmetic is one of my easiest subjects.

But I copied the assignment anyway, and when I started to slip the papers back to Mary Jane, that's when you looked up. Your eyes met mine first thing, then moved to the papers in my hand.

I didn't know what to do with myself, then. I was so scared. 'Shamed, too, I suppose. I didn't know whether to drop the papers on Mary Jane's desk, or whether to put them back on mine. I guess you know how I felt.

Well, I hurried, and I caught the bus despite the deep snow.

"Well, you know what I did, because you told me to do it.

"Dickie," you said, "please bring those papers here to me." I hesitated a second. I felt everybody's eyes on me, and I must've gotten awful red, because that's how my face felt. I got up slowly, and walked up and handed the papers to you.

You looked at the first page, and you said, "So—you're copying Mary Jane's arithmetic assignment. Is that the kind of work you make a habit of doing, Dickie?"

"Oh, no, sir," I said. I know I should have said "No, ma'am," but I didn't think of it then. "I've never copied anybody's work before," I said. And that's the truth.

"All right. But you must learn never to copy someone else's work, Dickie. I'm sorry, but you are going to stay in school tonight, and do your arithmetic lesson."

YOU knew what that meant as well as I did. It meant that I would miss my bus—and we live three miles from school. That's a long walk when it's winter and snowing.

I was hardly through with my second problem when you said "Dickie?"

I looked up. "Dickie," you said, and you were smiling a little, "get your work together and take it home with you. You're leaving."

My heart started to pound in my chest. "You mean it?" I asked.

"I mean it," you said, and you were still smiling. "You better hurry, if you want to catch the bus."

I never told daddy about that, either. I almost told him a couple of times while he was helping me on my model plane after supper, but I didn't. Finally, he said:

"It's your bed-time, son. You want to get up fresh and ready for school, don't you?" And I said "sure, daddy," and went to my room.

I guess I was half asleep when I heard voices downstairs. It got me wide awake. I crawled quietly out of bed and put my ear close to the floor to listen. And that was when I heard you saying to daddy:

"I'm sure that Dickie and I can get along swell together, Dick. I have a feeling that he likes me, and I like him. I like him very much. Matter of fact, probably as much as I love his father."

You laughed then, and daddy said, "I thought I'd better not tell him about us right away, but I suppose now it'll be all right. I'm sure you'll be a wonderful mother to him, Ann, and he a good son to you. He's a good boy. But who should know better than you? You're his teacher. You're with him more than I am."

You see? Please don't tell my daddy, will you, Miss Evans?

Smile Awhile

Your failures won't harm you until you begin blaming them on the other fellow.

The victory of success is half won when one gains the habit of work.

Papa, what do you call a man who drives a car?

Well, son, that depends on how close he comes to me.

Chorus girl to boy friend about to leave on a trip: "Let me hear from you once in awhile, even if it's only a check."

What is the best method to prevent the disease caused by biting insects?

Just don't bite the insects—that's all.

The crystal gazer was addressing one of his clients: "You will be poor and unhappy until you are forty."

And after that? You'll get used to it.

What's that piece of string tied round your finger for?

That's a knot. Forget-me-not is a flower. With flour you make bread, and with bread you have cheese. This is to remind me to buy some pickled onions.

Two sourpuss farmers liked to grumble at each other.

Never did I see hay grow so short as mine did this summer, sighed one.

You think yours is short, answered the other. I had to lather mine to mow it.

Another farmer is bringing suit against our road on account of his cows, said the railway clerk. Did we kill some more of them?

No! This time he complains, replied the general manager, that our trains go so slow the passengers reach out of car windows and milk his cows as they go by.

A rather queenly young woman boarded a crowded city bus. A tired little man got up and gave her his seat. There was a moment of silence.

I beg your pardon? said the tired little man.

I didn't say anything, rejoined the young woman.

I'm sorry, said the little man. I thought you said 'thank you.'

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Bert Solves the Labor Problem

You hear a lot about capital and labor nowadays, as if the two could never get together. But look at Bert Childers—who has 320 acres of producing land, a fair-sized herd of cattle, and two farm hands working for him.

If you called Bert a "capitalist" he wouldn't know what you meant, and neither would Spike and Sandy, the hired men. Bert works side by side with both of them; and in the evenings they sit around the fire together—sharing a friendly glass of beer or two.

If anybody has a beef—whether it's about wages or hours or equipment—they talk it over at those friendly evening sessions.

I don't say all labor problems are as simple as Bert's. But from where I sit, the basic principle applies to any farm or factory or business: A principle of confidence and mutual respect, of daily talks together in a friendly and congenial atmosphere.

New Addition To U. I. Hospitals Will Be Built

Research, Teaching, Medical Service Will Benefit; Cost $6,300,000.

Ground will be broken early in March for a 13-floor addition wing to the University of Illinois Research and Educational Hospitals in Chicago. Total cost of the addition will be $6,300,000.

"Medical service to Illinois residents and the teaching and research facilities of the University's Chicago Professional Colleges (medicine, dentistry, pharmacy) will be greatly augmented by the addition," Dr. A. C. Ivy, University vice-president, said.

Dr. Ivy, head of the professional colleges and hospitals in Chicago, pointed out that $2,200,000 of the total cost is available from current University appropriations. The remainder is included in the budget request for the 1947-49 biennium.

Bed capacity of the hospitals will be increased from 503 to 723 by the addition. At present there are 227 beds in the general hospital, 120 in the Illinois Surgical Institute for Children (University orthopaedic department), and 156 in the Illinois Neuropsychiatric Institute, which is owned and maintained by the department of public welfare but staffed and operated by the University.

Despite the necessary emphasis on teaching and research, welfare of the patients was uppermost in designing the addition, Dr. Ivy emphasized.

Besides its hospital facilities, the University serves an average of 350 out-patients daily in its clinics. Except for minor fees computed on a cost basis, these services are without charge to the patients.

To be admitted to the hospitals, patients must be referred by their own physicians or through clinics conducted by the University's division of services for crippled children.

Education Held Way to Solve Labor Unrest

"The job of improving labor-management relations is not hopeless. It is the greatest challenge of our domestic life.

"As education of the masses, America's great contribution to human welfare, provided the base for our labor union movement, so can it help solve our present discontents in labor-management relations."

Such are the opinions of Director Phillips Bradley of the new Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations at the University of Illinois.

He says that American workingmen and women want two things from their jobs:

1—Stable employment and a fair economic security.

2—Satisfactory and cooperative on-the-job relations.

"These demands are the result of the public school and the public library, which have given the people opportunity to consider their own positions," according to Director Bradley.

"Now the problems of labor are getting the attention of education," he says. "Within the last two years the state universities in Illinois, New York, California, and Washington have organized units specializing in labor and industrial relations, and at least a dozen others have made some steps in this direction."

"The university labor and industrial relations institutes engage in research, extension programs, and on-campus instruction. They can be very important in educating those in positions of power. Education, by breeding insight of problems, holds the key to good practice versus bad."

Graduate Course in Children's Dentistry Established at U. of I.

More and better dental attention for the kiddies is the objective of a pioneer step taken this year by the University of Illinois College of Dentistry.

A complete graduate course in pedodontics (dentistry for children) was established under the supervision of Dr. Maury Massler.

The course is expected to contribute materially to the number of practitioners in this highly specialized and increasingly important field.

Further, Dr. Massler notes, it will help train additional teachers, supply public health specialists who can further a much-needed program of preventive care for children, and stimulate research work which results inevitably in a decrease in disease.

The University's course is the first in any university to extend beyond six weeks and the first to lead to a master's degree.

Cleanliness 'Must' in Making Baby's Formula

IMMACULATE cleanliness is necessary when preparing baby's formula, for such care is important in keeping baby healthy, writes Georgia Lefingwell in an article in nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer.

"For efficiency and cleanliness, the utensils used in preparing baby's bottle should be kept together," she advises mothers. "They should not be used for any other purpose."

Utensils needed are: 8 to 10 eight-ounce bottles with rounded edges; bottle covers that can be sterilized; a dozen nipples; a funnel and a strainer; a bottle brush; teaspoon or forceps for picking up utensils; a sterilizer or kettle large enough to boil bottles, nipples and utensils; a 32-ounce measuring container for measuring formula; 2 wide-mouthed glass jars, one that can be sterilized for storing boiled nipples and covers and one for used nipples.

"Wash hands thoroughly before beginning formula preparation," the article cautions. "The whole 24 hours supply should be made up at one time, poured directly into the sterile bottles and tightly capped."

All bottles, nipples and utensils should be washed inside and out with a clean bottle brush, using hot, soapy water. Place equipment in a sterilizer or large kettle and allow to boil at least 5 minutes. Then let them drain and cool. Fill the bottles, being careful not to touch the top edge. Cover at once with sterilized rubber caps or bottle covers. Allow to cool a few minutes before placing in the refrigerator. When putting on nipple before a feeding, take care not to touch end that goes into baby's mouth.
