Letters To The Editor

Nagoya, Japan, Feb. 16, 1947

Dear Editor—I guess it's about time I wrote you a letter thanking you for sending me the paper. It certainly helps keep up on some of the home town news. I'll tell you a little of Japan. On the average most of the people are very dirty. About everything in general, living conditions, of course, now are very bad. The chief foods are rice and fish. Some of the dried fish they eat we wouldn't feed to a dog. Practically all of the work is done by hand. There are very few horses or automobiles. Some of the carts are still pulled by oxen, and the few horses that they have. None of them are ever driven, always led.

The few cars and trucks are all run by a charcoal burner on the back.

The Japanese that work for the occupation troops are very nice and good people. We have seven Jap fellows that do our cooking. They are inspected every month by a Medical officer and are always wanting to do something special for us. The interpreter I have and two of the cooks were prisoners of war five years.

As for the Americans here, I think most all are having an easy life. I know for a fact the ones in Nagoya are. We fellows in the 3rd Military Railway Service really do have easy jobs. I myself couldn't ask for anything better. I'm Acting 1st Sgt. of the Nagoya detachment. I have charge of the mess hall, vehicles, outgoing mail and see that things keep running properly. We only have 25 men here and live right in the station. Our quarters are the best in Japan. Several people are always wondering how we can have it so nice. By the way, this station is the largest in the continent of Asia. On the average there are 90,000 people passing through each day.

For recreation we don't have much to do. We can go to movies, different clubs, and a dance once a week. We don't have enough men for a good ball team of any kind. We were entered in a basketball league for a while, but had to drop out of it. It did pretty good for the short time we played. I was leading the league in scoring with 173 points for nine games. All in all we had 10 different teams. Playing Army ball you got a chance to show what you can do, you don't have to sit around and listen to one man and sit on the bench, except for the last minute of a game. An Army coach can see a player and play him through every game. This all may sound funny, but it's true for all G. I's. There are no pets in the Army.

Well Mr. Darnall, I think I've told all I know, so here's thanking you again for the paper.

JESUS WASHES THE DISCIPLES' FEET

LESSON TEXT—John 13:3-15, 24, 35.
MEMORY SELECTION—A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.—John 13:34.

On the eve of his crucifixion our Lord gave to his followers a striking example of how true humility shows itself in service to others.

Almost in the shadow of the cross the disciples had fallen into an argument about which of them should be greatest. Christ showed them the way of true greatness by an act of menial service, giving them an example for their own lives, a pattern of love.

I. Action (vv. 3-11).
He who was about to wash his disciples feet was fully conscious who he was, whence he came, what his power was, and where he was going.

Verse 3 gives us a clear view of our Lord's knowledge of himself as divine, sent by the Father and to return to him. He was conscious that he was King of kings and Lord of lords—all things had been put into his hands.

What followed would seem to be a mistake—a misfit in the pattern of the life of a being so great as the one described in verse 3—except for the fact that it was Jesus of whom it was said.

He knew that real greatness proves itself in the ability to stoop if need be to minister to the humblest need. It was just like Jesus to take the place of the servant. It is just like him to do the loving, thoughtful, compassionate thing for us today.

Peter's impulsive refusal to be washed enabled the Lord to teach him, and us, a needed lesson. The one who had come clean and well-groomed to the feast needed only to have the dust of the road cleansed from his sandaled feet.

Just so the one who has been cleansed from his sins by the blood of Christ returns daily for the cleansing of the stains and soil of the journey through this wicked world. We must remember that this constant cleansing (I John 1:7) is necessary. It is not enough to make a decision for Christ and receive salvation; we need his daily grace for daily living.

II. Example (vv. 12-15).
When he resumed his place at the table, Jesus faced a humbled and ashamed group of men ready to have driven home to their hearts the powerful meaning of the example which had been set before them.

They called him Lord and Master, and he agreed that they were right. Now he had set them a pattern of lowly service. They had already sensed the rebuke involved, so he stressed only the positive side, the need for them to do what he had done.

It is one thing to understand what has been taught, it is another thing to put it into practice. Jesus conditioned his blessing on the doing, rather than the hearing (see vv. 16, 17).

We are told in James 1:22 that the one who is a hearer of the Word and not a doer of it is self-deceived. He is fooling himself about his supposed spiritual progress. God is not deceived by it, and usually his fellow men are not deceived by his profession of what he does not have. How sad then to go on deceiving himself and how foolish.

III. Command (vv. 34, 35).

It is really not a matter of choice for the believer whether he will live in the light of this great example—it is a commandment of God. Oh, yes, it is a commandment of love, but that makes it not less but more binding on us who believe in Christ. By act and example he set before his disciples the great and new commandment of love, expressing itself in loving service.

The measure of our love for our brethren is the love of Christ Jesus. That love, we all agree, was without limit, unbelievably great, inexpressibly tender, infinite in its purpose and power.

We cannot measure up to it. What then shall we do? Surely we must give to our very limit and beyond that limit by God's grace, of our love for one another. Nothing less will do, if we are to keep his commandment.

Such love between Christian brethren has always been the most effective kind of testimony for Christ. As men see true and sacrificial love shown between Christians, they are drawn to Christ and the church.

The opposite is also true. Divisions and strife among believers quickly become known to the world, and are always a ground for scornful rejection of the truth which the church professes to believe and is asking the world to accept. We cannot effectively apply the gospel remedy (and it is the only remedy!) to a strife-torn world while we are engaged in unlovely battles with one another. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples," said Jesus, "if ye have love one for another."

Martha Washington

The annual recurrence of Washington's birthday on February 22 is always the inspiration of many editorials and articles on the "father of his country." Occasionally some mention is made of Martha Washington, his devoted wife, but her personality is not as well known as it deserves to be.

Mrs. Washington was the daughter of Col. Dandridge, a planter of New Kent county, Virginia, and was the widow of Daniel Parke Custis at the time of her marriage to Washington on January 6, 1759, being the mother of four children by her first husband.

Two of her children died in infancy, and the others being Martha Parke Custis and Col. John Parke Custis, whose granddaughter became the wife of General Robert E. Lee, famed Confederate leader.

Mrs. Washington was short and plump, with hazel eyes and dark hair, her stature being in marked contrast with that of General Washington, who was six feet two inches in height.

She inherited considerable wealth from her first husband and this added to Gen. Washington's fortune made them one of the wealthiest couples in America at the time, their estate being valued at more than $5,000,000.

George and Martha Washington had no children. Their married life extended over a period of more than 40 years, during which in peace and war, as well as in the exacting duties of a President's wife, she was his faithful companion and helpmate.

As such she is held in affectionate remembrance by the nation.

Oil For A Thirsty World

American enterprise is developing the vast oil resources of Saudi Arabia. And the result is a new "Arabian Nights" story of great achievement in the face of great natural odds.

American oil development in Saudi Arabia began at the invitation of its king, Ibn Saud. Since 1933, some $200,000,000 has been spent—and that is only the beginning. Now production runs to more than 200,000 barrels a day from but 44 producing wells in four fields in a small fraction of the 435,000 square miles in the American concession. It is hoped that production will be upped to 500,000 barrels soon. The character of the oil deposits is illustrated by the fact that in the last year not a single unproductive well has been drilled.

Forecasts as to the total Arabian reserves run into astronomical figures. Conservative estimates put it at 5,000,000,000 barrels—while enthusiasts talk of 20,000,000,000 barrels. The latter figure, incidentally, is about equal to the present proven reserves of the United States.

The oil of Arabia hasn't come easily. But American capital, ingenuity and drive are producing it. In doing that it is bringing the miracles of our modern civilization to the people of Arabia, to their economic and social betterment. The whole world, with its insatiable thirst for oil, will share in the rewards. Here, on an enormous and colorful canvas the inspiring story of free enterprise is being told again.

Reply to Molotov

In the course of testimony before a Senate committee recently in reply to a question, Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson said: "I am quite aware of the fact that Russian foreign policy is an aggressive and expanding one."

Immediately Foreign Commissioner Molotov made a protest to our State Department, characterizing Acheson's remark as rudely slanderous and hostile to the Soviet Union.

In a prompt reply, Secretary of State George C. Marshall politely but firmly told Mr. Molotov where to head in. Marshall said in part:

"In accordance with our system an officer of the executive branch called before a committee of the legislative branch (Congress), is under a duty to answer frankly relevant questions. The conduct of the Undersecretary, therefore, in answering the question frankly and in accordance with his conscience, cannot be described as inadmissible, but rather in line of duty.

You characterize the content of his statement as a rude slander and hostile to the Soviet Union. Under our standards, a restrained comment on a matter of public policy is not a slander. Therefore, I know that on second thought you will not attribute hostility to frankness."

In referring to Mr. Acheson's comment as "restrained," Secretary Marshall intimated that a much stronger expression concerning Soviet foreign policy could be justified by the known facts.

Sidelights

The definition department of the L. & N. Magazine says: MORON: That which, in the winter-time, women wouldn't have so many colds if they put.

Many puppies we have seen appear to wag their entire bodies when showing their affection, but to be technical an ordinary dog wags its tail, a hound its stern, an otter its pole, a rabbit its scut, a fox its brush, a deer its single. Yep, all terms mean the caudal appendage.

We like the story of the G. I. who recently was reminded of the seasickness he experienced enroute to and from Europe during and after the recent unpleasantness. He was wondering if he wasn't entitled to "port-hole to port-hole pay" because he spent plenty of his time traveling from one to another.

Bachelors (and especially those who had passed a certain age) really came in for their share of embarrassment back in the days of old Sparta, we learn. It is said that then old bachelors were stigmatized and obliged to walk naked in the winter through the market place. We have no data on old maids.

Judging from the promises contained in some of the perfume ads we have been reading lately, stores will have to supply an M-1 or at least a booklet on the art of self-defense, with each ounce sold so that the sweet young things may protect themselves after placing a drop or two behind their pearly ears.

Dr. George Lawton, a pioneer in the subject of "aging," invites older women to his lectures at New York's Town Hall where he tells them to pay no attention to those who poke fun at the middle-aged women who put on "cute" little sub-deb hats and coy junior-miss manners in an effort to look young. He points out that this can be carried to an extreme, however he sees no reason why any woman should apologize for her years. In an effort to meet the situation, he shows that various cosmetics are desirable but advises that make-up should be "an energetic and ingenious repair service."

Sugar Saving Chocolate
Cake a Family Favorite

Mother will have fun watching the satisfied expressions all around the table when sugar-saving chocolate cake is the dessert, says the Country Cooking editor of nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer.

The secret of stretching short sugar supplies lies in using prepared pudding mixes in the baking job, whether it's thick-frosted cakes, hearty pies, cookies or nutbread, she tells home-maker readers of the magazine read by 1,300,000 farm families.

Chocolate Cake.

24 c. lard
1 egg, beaten
1 c. dark corn sirup
1 tsp. vanilla
1 c. milk

2 c. cake flour
3/4 c. cocoa
1 pkg. chocolate pudding mix
1 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt

Have lard at room temperature; cream thoroughly, then add egg. Stir well and add sirup, milk and vanilla; blend. Sift dry ingredients together and stir into batter. Beat for at least 2 minutes on low speed of electric mixer, or beat 300 strokes by hand. Cover bottoms of two 8-inch cake pans with waxed paper; grease lightly. Pour in batter. Bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) for 30 minutes or until done.

Chocolate Frosting.

1 sweet chocolate bar
4 tsp. cream

1 pkg. chocolate pudding mix
1/2 tsp. vanilla

Melt chocolate in double boiler over hot water. Add 2 tsp. cream and stir until smooth. Add pudding mix and stir until blended, adding remainder of cream as needed. Continue stirring over hot water until of spreading consistency, about 3 minutes. Add vanilla. Will frost one 10-inch loaf cake, or two 8-inch layers.

Cleaning the Oven

Grease "baked on" in range ovens is hard to remove, the Rural Home editor of nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer points out. Scouring, unless done with care, may damage the enamel finish. So home economists with the U. S. Department of Agriculture suggest placing a shallow bowl of household ammonia — or a wadded cloth dampened in ammonia — in the oven for several hours or overnight. Fumes help loosen greasy film; a badly soiled oven may need several treatments.

 "Well, Joe, I'm going on my vacation next week, and I want you boys to stay on your good behavior while I'm away," said Sergeant Stevens with a good natured grin. He was a large, heavy set, genial man, head of the guards at the County Prison.

"Have a good time, sarge," said Joe Walsh, a trusty with six months time standing between himself and freedom. "What are you going to do with yourself?"
 "I think I'll take a motor trip around the state," Sergeant Stevens said.

When the sergeant let himself out of the cell block, Joe sat thinking, ignoring the other prisoners. He had never thought of escaping the prison while Sergeant Stevens was in charge and responsible for the men, but now Joe began to yearn for his freedom.

Three days after the sergeant left on vacation, Joe was assigned to bean picking crew at the prison farm. That afternoon, while the guards made their rounds lazily in the hot sun, he climbed the fence and cut quickly through the woods. At the first town he passed, some quick thinking and acting rewarded him with a denim shirt, coveralls, a threadbare overcoat and a peak cap which had been hanging on the clothesline of one of the housewives. That evening he crawled into an empty coal car on a north-bound freight. As he watched the scenery flow swiftly by the open door and felt the wind in his face he sang a happy song. In a few days he would be several states away from the County Prison. While humming softly to himself, he fell asleep, lulled by the jolting rhythm of the wheels on the tracks.

"What's the matter?" Joe asked, trying to collect his senses—

"Hey you, hobo. C'mon, wake up." A voice, harsh and hard, grated in Joe's ears. A heavy foot tapping his shoulder wakened him more completely. He sat up slowly, blinked and yawned, and saw that the sun was shining brightly in the door of the freight car.

"I'm a railroad detective," the man said. "Get up. I'm going to take you down to the hoosegow. You know you're not allowed to ride the freights."

He pleaded with the detective in his most heart melting voice, begging to be given another chance, swearing he didn't know that he wasn't allowed to ride on the freight trains.

The detective tapped his gun significantly. "I hear that same story from every hobo we pick up," he said. "Now come along without any trouble."

Joe wearily stretched and stood up, while pictures of returning to the jail cell flowed through his mind. Each time he thought of the confinement, he added fresh and convincing pleas to those already submitted to the detective.

When he had given up all hope, and made up his mind that he was hopelessly headed back to County Prison, the man softened. "I guess you're having a pretty hard time of it, traveling around the country this way. I'll let you off this time, but after this stay away from the trains."

"Gosh! Thanks, mister," said Joe gratefully, almost crying with relief. "You don't know how much this means to me. I'll stick to the highway after this." He heaved a deep, heartfelt sigh, and almost ran the short distance to the highway, for fear that the detective might change his mind.

The walk made him hungry, and as he realized how long it had been since his last meal he almost wished he was back at the prison, where the boys would be eating breakfast. "Oh well!" he thought. "Pretty soon I'll be far enough away that I can stop and find some food." His thumb flipped at the passing cars, and finally a sedan slowed down and pulled to the side of the road.

Joe opened the door quickly. "Going my way," he asked and relaxed in the comfortable seat.

"Sure, always glad to have good company," said the driver in a voice that seemed familiar to Joe. "Thanks a lot," Joe said, but as he looked at the man, the smile faded suddenly from his face. He gulped and added sheepishly, "... Sarge!"

Prosperity Pattern

Switzerland is a small country without seacoast, without natural resources, without enough fields to produce her necessary food. The non-homogeneous people—one part speaking German, another French, and a third, Italian—add to her domestic difficulties.

Under these conditions, Switzerland should naturally be expected to be one of the very poorest nations in Europe. On the contrary, however, Switzerland had before the war, and has yet, the highest per capita wealth in Europe. This little country pays the best wages known in Europe and maintains the best living conditions for her workers.

A Way and A Will
 Why should a people with the least possibilities come out with the highest average wealth, highest wages, and best living conditions? Simply because Switzerland has the right formula for prosperity, plus the will to make the formula work. Switzerland is proof to the world that any nation can have prosperity. There are just three requirements.

1. Switzerland has a real republic, through which the citizens reserve to themselves real individual freedom. Nearly all laws touching the lives of the people are made locally in districts called "cantons," corresponding roughly to our states. Even the amount of income tax to be paid by the people of each canton is decided locally. Political responsibility is a reality. And real freedom of individual opportunity exists.

Ownership Pays Out
 2. Switzerland has the right type of economy. All industry is privately owned and operated. Individual ownership of property is encouraged and protected. A high percentage of people own their own homes and their farms. Thrift is encouraged by both the local and national governments.

3. Switzerland has equal responsibility placed by law upon both labor and capital. Industrial peace is encouraged, both by local and national government. Industrial co-operation prevails throughout the nation.

Switzerland is living proof that these three conditions will bring prosperity to any country, regardless of the quantity of its natural resources. The Swiss do not put the eye of aggression on their neighbors, in a search for "living room." Content with their own mountains, they have found that the resources of individual freedom, sane economy, and hard work can give them all they want. These moral resources the Swiss can call their own.

Retain the Formula
 France, adjoining, with plenty of natural resources and abundant fertile fields, should now be the most prosperous country in Europe. Instead she is one of the poorest. Her socialistic form of government, her nationalization of industry, and her industrial chaos have made prosperity impossible, despite natural resources. France hasn't the right formula.

America, for 150 years, has had the right formula. In our own land we have achieved the highest wages, and the best general living standards ever known. We have had the natural resources. But more important, we have treasured these same moral resources that have made the Swiss great. We have had freedom of opportunity. We have made the formula work. Shall we keep the formula and keep prosperity, or desert the formula and revert to mediocrity for everybody?

KEEP PET ON LEASH, AVOID RABIES SCARE

For want of a leash a "rabies epidemic" is born. Thus the Gaines Dog Research Center, New York City, sums up what is probably the least-comprehended fact about rabies. It explains it as follows:

If every dog-owner kept his pet on a leash at all times, there would be no possibility of his straying away. If he did not stray away, there would be no opportunity for him to get into trouble by fighting with other dogs or snapping at strangers who might attempt to pet or tease him. If he did not snap at strangers, the cry of "Mad Dog!" would not likely be raised, there would be no excitement or hysteria culminating in a "rabies epidemic" and the summary execution of many animals.

According to the Center, true rabies is a relatively uncommon disease. In a typical year, in the entire United States, only 7,000 dogs are affected. Rabies is no more prevalent in summer than in winter but you hear more about rabies in summer because men and animals mingle more freely outdoors in hot weather. A really rabid dog flies forward aimlessly but does not attack unless provoked or annoyed. Preventive rabies vaccines are available at veterinarians, though their effectiveness is still a matter of debate.

Smile Awhile

Old Gentleman—You're an honest lad, but it was a $10 bill, not 10 ones.

Small Boy—I know, mister, it was a $10 bill I picked up. But the last time I found one, the man who owned it didn't have any change.

Johnny had been thinking, and turning to his dad, said: "What are our ancestors, daddy?"

To which the father answered: Well, son, I'm one of your ancestors, and your grandfather's another.

But why do people brag about them, daddy! asked Johnny innocently.

A shipwrecked sailor spent five years on a desert island. One day he was overjoyed to see a ship drop anchor in the bay. A small boat came ashore and an officer handed the sailor a bunch of newspapers.

The captain suggests, he told the sailor, that you read what's going on in the world and let us know if you want to be rescued.

The small boy had just started school and after a week he said: Mummy, the teacher asked me all about you and daddy, and if I had any brothers and sisters.

I am glad to see her taking so much interest, replied the mother. What did you tell her?
 I said I was an only child.
 And what did she say to that?
 Oh, just, "Thank heaven."

Two boys were loitering on the street corner, when one said to the other: How old are you?
 I'm five, was the reply. How old are you?

I don't know, said the first.
 You don't know how old you are?
 Nope.
 Does women bother you?
 Nope.
 You're four.

This from Scotland: Little Angus was given a new 10-shilling note for his birthday. Going to the local chemist, he had the note changed into sixpences and shillings. Then he went across the street to the grocer and received a 10-shilling note for the change.

He repeated this several times. Finally his father called him to account for his strange behaviour and Angus explained:

Well, sooner or later somebody is going to make a mistake, and it's not going to be me.

The landlady glanced around the table at her 12 hungry boarders before starting to carve the rather sad-looking chicken.

In rapid succession she asked each which part of the fowl he preferred. Ten of them decided on legs.

The carver dropped her knife with a clatter on the dish. What do you imagine this is? she said, sarcastically, pointing to the chicken. A centipede, or what?

Oh, no, replied the boarder who had been served. Judging by the piece of neck I've got, I should imagine it was a giraffe.

WOULD HAVE EACH STATE ADOPT AN OFFICIAL DOG

America's dog-loving folks are urged to seek adoption of an official dog for each of the 48 states by Harry Miller, director of the Gaines Dog Research Center, New York City.

Practically every state now has its official bird or official flower, Mr. Miller said. Certainly, he thinks, the dog as mankind's closest animal companion throughout the ages, deserves every bit as much recognition.

Mr. Miller stated he anticipated the early organization of committees for an official dog in several states, and that his organization would give these groups every possible aid in achieving their objective. Adoption of an official dog in any state would have to come about either through action of the state's legislative body, by a governor's proclamation, or by popular vote of the people of the state.

3 MINUTE FICTION
Colorful Kid
By Howard Becker

WNU Features.
It is a well known fact that Marty Burns is the smartest bozo in the leather pushing racket, insofar as the managing end of the game is concerned.

That's how he happened to get his hooks onto the Walla Walla Kid, and came to make the one and only mistake of his career.

This knuckle duster came bristling into the office one winter day with a crash and a bang. He tossed six newspaper hounds off the much-scarred mahogany of Marty's desk, and then spoke his piece to the great man himself.

"I can lick anybody in the joint," he told Marty. "Including you, Burns. But I ain't gonna." Marty Burns opened his mouth and closed it again. He was mildly shocked.

"You're going to be all right, Kid," Marty told him. "And about your brains, I'll take care of that. I've got a set of signals worked out for your next fight. It'll be just as though I'm right in the ring with you. I run my hand through my hair, you cross your right. I pull my left ear, and you hold him off with your left jab. I tweak my nose and you hook him to death with the left."

In his fight with Big Boy Riley, the Kid dropped Riley for the count with a steaming right cross, while Marty is tweaking heck out of his nose, calling for a left hook. That kind of got under Marty's skin. "What's this mean, Kid?" Marty tweaked his nose for a demonstration.

"I've been holding out on you, boss. Yeah. I've two faults instead of one."

The Kid looked at him. "Your nose itch, boss," he said. No, the Kid wasn't exactly an Einstein.

After that Marty tried every known method of signaling his fighter, but the Kid kept on winning and doing the opposite to what the signal called for.

The next day they signed with Tiger Jones, who was right next to the champ. The Kid was a magnet at the gate.

Marty Burns wore himself to a shadow worrying about the Jones fight. He didn't sleep nights, trying to figure a way to get his brain into the ring with the Kid. He walked the streets. He smoked fifteen cigars a night. The Kid could never take Tiger Jones without his, Marty's, help. He was positive of that. Then two days before the fight, the Kid gave him the answer.

He was reading his press notices in the Morning Gazette. "Hey, boss, listen to this: THE WALLA WALLA KID IS PERHAPS THE MOST COLORFUL SCRAPPER TO HIT THE COUNTRY IN A DECADE."

"Colorful," Marty mused. "Colorful. That's it! Colorful, colors!" He slammed the Kid on the back. "You like colors, don't you, Kid?"

"It's jake with me, boss."

"All right. This is simple, Kid. So simple, I think even you can understand it. Now, listen close," Marty talked slowly to make sure it would penetrate the mystic thick-ness of the Kid's flaming skull. "I take three cards, of three different colors. I hold up the red card and you cross your right. Green card and you jab with the left, and blue card you hook the left."

They were hanging from the rafters at the Armory the night of the fight. Tiger Jones didn't waste any time loosening up the Kid's lower lip with a wicked wallop.

The Tiger was rushing. Marty flashed the blue card. A steaming left hook would slow the Tiger to a walk. But the Kid was backing the away jabbing with his left. The Tiger crashed through and dumped him in the corner for an eight count. That's just about the whole story. Four rounds later, the referee stepped in and pushed a badly beaten Walla Walla Kid to his corner.

Reporters circled Marty and the Kid after he had showered and dressed. "What beat him, Marty?" They shot the question at the little manager.

"His one and only fault beat him," Marty tapped the red head of the Kid. "Nothing between the ears." The Kid managed a grin through shattered lips. "I've been holding out on you, boss."

"Yeah?"

"Yeah. I forgot to tell you that I'm color blind."

U. of I. Can House Students At Galesburg

Dormitories, Classrooms, Dining Services, Recreation, All In One Unit.

One of the few educational spots in the nation not troubled by any form of housing shortage is the University of Illinois Undergraduate Division at Galesburg.

Here students live but a short distance from where they go to class—all dormitories, classrooms, and utilities readily reached by walking along pleasant, heated corridors.

Where to house overflow students—the mighty enigma at almost every college and university today—never troubles administrators at Galesburg. They have available 30 housing units with the extraordinary number of more than 300 private rooms and approximately 1,200 other accommodations of various types. For women students two complete housing units containing private rooms are in use.

All unit accommodations whether for students, faculty, or administrative staff have individual recreation lounges and study halls nearby.

One complete unit has been set aside for married veterans. Another 15 apartments, with three and four rooms and bath in each, are just about ready.

Blankets, bed linens, laundry of linens, maid and janitor service are provided by the University as part of the housing accommodations.

Rental costs for students range from $52 to $120 per semester depending upon whether they decide upon single or double rooms or live with other students in dormitory style.

There's more to going to college, however, than having a place to stay. At Galesburg, other living conditions are ideal.

The University dining hall, staffed by 38 full-time employees, offers nutritious, well-balanced "big" meals three times a day on a non-profit cost basis. Estimated cost of student meals is $1.50 per day. A second wing of the cafeteria seating more than 350 has been made available to students and faculty.

Always a center of activity is the Snack Bar which serves meals and light lunches at all hours. Students gather here between classes for a soda or "coke" and for Saturday afternoon dances.

Right next door to where students attend classes are the other facilities which complete living needs. In this central location is the campus bookstore, suppliers of all necessary study materials, magazines, novelties, and all "drug store" incidentals. In this area also are the barber shop, dry cleaning service, post office, and laundry.
