See 2,000,000 Bushel Illinois Peach Harvest

Carbondale—Prospects of at least a normal 2,000,000 bushel Illinois peach crop this year has been strengthened by cool weather through March, T. L. Davis, manager of the Illinois Fruit Growers Exchange says. The Exchange is a subsidiary of the Illinois Agricultural Association. Southern Illinois peach blossoms are expected to bloom two to three weeks later than last year when orchards were in full bloom March 16.

Late frosts and freezes a year ago damaged the tender peach shoots, and by the time hail, insects and flooding rains finished their ravages, the Illinois crop was cut to 1,200,000 bushels, somewhat more than half a crop. "This year the situation appears normal," Davis said. "The peach outlook is good with possibilities of a bumper crop. There has been practically no winter injury and the abundance of rain during the past growing season resulted in a fairly heavy bud set for this spring. Late frosts, however, can still do heavy damage."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

THE RISEN LORD AND HIS DISCIPLES

LESSON TEXT—John 20:19-23, 26-29; 21:15-17.

MEMORY SELECTION—But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept.—1 Corinthians 15:20.

Ever new and blessed in its touch upon our souls is the message of Easter. To be assured once more that the grave could not hold our blessed Lord and Saviour, and that he arose in victory over sin and death, is our delightful portion in today's lesson.

It is a very appropriate conclusion to our three month study of the Gospel of John and comes in the new quarter because of Easter Sunday.

Three helpful incidents make up our lesson.

I. A Risen Lord and Glad Disciples (20:19-23)

The appearance of our Lord to his disciples after he arose from the grave emphasizes the close relationship between the resurrection and the life and ministry of his followers.

Those who live for and serve the risen Christ have a triumphant faith, an inward peace, and an outward authority and power. Their convictions are based on the Lord's own words which came to assure the disciples as they secretly assembled for fear of the Jews.

He stood in their midst and spoke the words of peace (vv. 19-21) and authority (vv. 22, 23).

Peace of soul is absolutely essential to useful and satisfied living. Only as we are "steadfast, immovable," can we be "abounding in the work of the Lord" (1 Cor. 15:58). Steady at the center, active at the circumference.

Commissioned and sent by the Son of God, clothed with Holy Spirit power, the Church of God has his authority. While some have read too much into verse 23, others have read out of it the real authority that God has given.

Little wonder that we read (v. 20), "Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord." They had reason for real joy!

II. A Convinced Doubter and Glad Testimony (20:26-29)

Thomas made the serious error of being absent from the gathering of the disciples when the Lord Jesus stood in their midst. Let those who commonly absent themselves from the place and hour of worship take heed lest they miss a blessing, and coming later add nothing to the spiritual life of the church, but rather become troublemakers and doubters.

But God graciously turns the doubt of Thomas into a means of blessing to all of us who since then have read of his experience. Thomas was an honest doubter. God is always ready to meet such with satisfactory proof. The trouble is that there are so many in the world who use professed doubts to cover a life of sin.

Doubt may come to any man. In itself it is no sin. But to cherish it and hold it in unbelief—that is a different matter. One wise spiritual leader rightly counseled his people, "Believe your beliefs and doubt your doubts. Never make the mistake of doubting your beliefs or believing your doubts."

When doubting Thomas saw the Lord, his questions changed at once to strong convictions and assured personal testimony to his blessed Lord.

III. A Restored Disciple and Glad Service (21:15-17)

After meeting Jesus on the first Easter morning, Peter had been assured of forgiveness for his denial of the Lord and had been taken back into fellowship and service with him.

But then something seemed to have gone astray, for we find that Peter and the others had returned to their old life as fishermen. They seem to have lost their vision, or had become discouraged.

But the Lord had not forgotten them. He appeared and told them where to catch fish, and then we have the lovely scene around the fire as they breakfasted together.

There it was that the Lord met Peter, and as he had denied Christ thrice he is asked to thrice declare his devotion to him.

The man who thus declared his readiness to serve Christ to the end had many an opportunity to prove the sincerity of that profession. He met persecution and imprisonment but to every effort of man to close his mouth or to change his witness he had the simple reply of absolute obedience to the Lord.

Tradition tells us that this faithfulness finally led Peter to a martyr's death. So we see a life made over, made powerful, made glorious for God through the matchless grace of our Lord Jesus Christ. He can do it for you, too. Will you let him?

There could be no better time to meet the risen Lord face to face than on this day when we remember his resurrection. Let him come into your heart, dissolve your doubts, give your sins—and make you glad!

The Worst Winter

In most of the Northern Hemisphere, and particularly in the British Isles and Europe, this has been perhaps the most severe winter in modern times—certainly it has caused the greatest suffering, because of a scarcity of food and fuel, as well as inadequate clothing and shelter.

How many persons perished from cold and hunger, or died of disease induced by physical hardships, will never be known, but their number is doubtless very large. And in view of the fact that millions had been weakened by undernourishment over a period of years during and since the war, it is a wonder that more did not die.

G. F. Kettering, research vice-president of General Motors, recently estimated that one-fourth of the world's two billion people are habitually hungry, even in normal times. The U. N. food conference some time ago estimated that one billion of the world's population are undernourished.

Under such conditions, the misery of a winter like the present one is beyond imagination. And without the aid which has been given by the United States it would have been infinitely worse.

Truman's New Stature

Ever since the Gallup poll showed that between October and March President Truman's popularity jumped from 32 per cent to 51 per cent, political observers have been busy trying to analyze the reasons for this phenomenon.

The latest poll indicates, in other words, that whereas only 32 per cent of the people thought Mr. Truman was doing a good job as President last fall, 51 per cent now approve his course, both in domestic and foreign affairs.

Even among many who do not agree with some of his policies, it is generally admitted that the President has grown in stature as a statesman. While the Republican landslide in last November's elections seemed to positively indicate a G. O. P. Presidential victory in 1948, it now appears that Mr. Truman will be no push-over.

Perhaps the President's clear-cut victory over John L. Lewis was the greatest single accomplishment which has added to his popularity in recent months. He put Lewis in his place by showing him that he is no bigger than the government.

Mr. Truman has, on the whole, a stronger and more harmonious cabinet than he found when he took office. His firing of Ickes and Wallace had a most salutary effect in this direction. Several changes in his personal advisers and officials outside the cabinet have also contributed to better administration team-work.

In his relations with the republican majority in Congress, the President is showing a disposition toward cooperation for the national welfare. After agreeing with his cabinet on a course to be pursued with respect to Greece and Turkey, he called in leaders of both parties to discuss his plans before making his address to Congress. He will give full details, so far as possible, concerning all phases of the matter as consideration of the requested legislation proceeds.

The most violent criticism of the President's firm stand against the spread of Communism has come from Henry Wallace, Claude Pepper and other extreme left wing elements in his own party, whose utterances are being used to bolster Soviet propaganda in the Russian press, and by Communist diplomats.

On the other hand, many Republican leaders support Mr. Truman's general plan, while most of the others show a willingness to give it respectful consideration. It is unlikely that the bill will be passed without considerable debate, or in the exact form desired by the President.

But the unmistakable evidence of his improved standing with the people will be an asset in his efforts to obtain legislation for carrying out the policies outlined to Congress.

Household Hints

Monday need not necessarily be washday. If your house is in disorder from weekend festivities choose another day.

Save time by removing spots and stains from garments while they're fresh—before being set by hot water.

A light starch helps to keep shirts, wash dresses and other clothes looking fresh and crisp. Starched surfaces are also easier to wash.

Pulley lines fastened to the porch and extending out into the yard will save many steps and less carrying of the basket. If pulleys are impossible, pull the basket around in Junior's wagon or the old baby carriage.

Don't be a martyr by trying to do all the washing, ironing, scrubbing, and cleaning in one day. You'll be so exhausted it will take a week to catch up for the next week's round. Spread out the hard physical work over the week. You and the family will enjoy each other better.

Wage-Price Warning

Another round of wage increases inevitably would bring higher prices to absorb the higher production costs, the United States Chamber of Commerce has warned.
 "A second round of wage increases will force closely corresponding price increases in the months ahead, unless such increases finally force both labor and goods out of the market," said Emerson P. Schmidt, director of the National Chamber's Economic Research Department.
 "Such a collapse of production and employment is a strong possibility because of the disparity between the incomes of workers whose wages have been artificially forced upward while the incomes of others are lagging behind."
 "Last winter the Chamber of Commerce of the United States warned that the first round of wage increases would be accompanied by closely corresponding price increases. That warning proved all too true."

Profits Fallacy

The profit incentive is widely misunderstood and maligned. Many folks talk about profits as though they were injurious. These folks indulge in side-glances, as if profits were a vicious imposition upon the people. Profits, to some who are misled or misinformed, have assumed a negative sound. The fallacy is that industry arrives at selling prices by piling onto production costs as much profit as the traffic will bear. This is not the way profits are calculated.
 Sales prices on the tags are the prime consideration. In a free competitive market, the price tag is not marked according to preconceived notions of what the profit ought to be. Another fallacy, that free enterprise makes goods for profit rather than for use, comes to light here. The consumer is king in a free market: the price tag is slave to the demands of a price-conscious buying public. This is one game in which the consumer takes the sweepstakes.

Efficiency Is King

You and I manufacture radios. We meet squarely in the market, where mine is priced at $100 and yours at $75. If the quality is the same, I must either lower my selling price to compete or give to the customer one-third greater value than you do. The lower the price and the more quality included, the better off each of us will be—saleswise. And the first one of us to achieve quantity sales, or real mass production, will be the first one to give the customer lower prices and better quality. Competition thus regulates the selling price regardless of my costs.
 The cycle is just that simple. To keep factories running, the goal of our industries is to make a better product available to a larger number of people through mass production and lower selling costs. After deducting costs from the customer's price the result may or may not be a profit. When the margin is uncomfortably close, the next logical step will be toward more efficient production.
 Efficiency of operation means to industry the ability to keep down costs of making and selling a product. The object is a favorable position on the open market. This means that factories must be busy constantly, taking up the unemployed, supplying products at lower costs to an ever increasing buying public. Not only idle men, but idle money, is called for to provide the tools to increase output.

Though he looked a carefree figure, Epitaph's thoughts were acutely painful. "A weepin' woman. Always a-weepin'. Livin' in lux'ry, a lovin' man, all the work she can do and still she weeps. No sooner she stops weepin' for one thing she begins weepin' for somethin' else. Weep and cry—cry and weep, till I gotta find me some real sunshine somewhere, quick."

As though drawn by a magnet, his feet climbed a steep street, passed a pool hall, a fruit market, a barber shop, a pawn shop. He turned through a white-washed gate into a neat yard where red tubs set on great gray stumps waited their summer cargo of flowers.

Epitaph's knock was answered by a trim young woman who greeted him with a pleased laugh.

"Why, how-de-do, Mr. Jones. I was jest sayin' to myself I wisht that nice Mr. Jones would drop along and here you come promenadin' in. Do have this easy chair, Mr. Jones, and lemme take your hat."

Tearful spring had drifted into gracious summer and summer had faded into frost-tinted autumn when Epitaph again crossed the black and gray ash heaps where grimy children and bony goats still swarmed. He did not swagger now. His raiment was as natty as ever and his cap still clung to a rakish angle but there was a chastened air about him. He had a look of one who has suffered a grievous disillusionment.

"Why how-de-do, Mr. Jones. I was jest sayin' to myself I wisht that nice Mr. Jones would come along."

Pausing before the crazy old cabin, he surveyed it fondly. Then he tip-toed across the sagging porch and slowly pushed open the protesting door.

A TALL thin woman in a dejected black dress appeared from an inner room. She saw Mr. Jones and began to laugh. Mr. Jones felt the universe reeling. Sissy laughing!

"Why Sissy, I thought you was such a weepin' woman. You sick Sissy?"

"No indeedy. Never felt better in my life. Come right in, Epitaph." Sissy trilled merrily.

"How come you to change so, Sissy?"

Sissy chuckled, "Well, when you went off with that gigglin' Cyrene I took a thought to myself. If that no-account Cyrene can laugh another girl's man away from her, I says, I better learn me some laughs too, so I did."

Epitaph shuddered as at a pricking memory.

"But Sissy, I don't like laughin' women. Can't you weep jest a little, Sissy?"

"No, I'll weep no more. How come you stayed at Cyrene's so long if you don't like laughin' women, Epitaph?"

"This mornin' she got a—a kind of laughin' fit and throwed a hammer at me. So I took it was kind of a hint and I jest natchelly snuck out and left. Hammer hit me, too."

"Ain't that a shame, Cyrene didn't ought to act so. Now me when I have laughin' fits I jest hurl flatirons," and Sissy caught up one that stood on a near-by table and advanced on her guest in a perfect gale of merriment.

THE west was still bright when Epitaph beached his boat on the sandy shore. A crooked path led him to a small clearing in a wood. On a ragged blanket before a ramshackle hut built mostly of packing cases and tin strips, sprawled a man, idle, relaxed, half-hidden in a haze of rank tobacco smoke. A scrawny hound, equally relaxed, dozed beside him. As Epitaph Jones gazed on that peaceful scene a sense of relief, of security, swept over him.

The man on the blanket looked up. He spoke with a rare economy of effort.

"Hi, Epitaph. Make y'sef t'home. Meet m' sis' 'Vang'line." He closed his eyes, exhausted.

Epitaph shivered—half turned to flee. Then he made an about-face. Said Mr. Jones most politely, "How-de-do, Miss 'Vangeline, I jest dropped in to see would you like me for a steady boarder. I need me a change of climate, bad, and with you I could dwell forever in one apex of glorious delightomeness," concluded Mr. Jones in an ecstatic burst of poetic fervor.

The Public Profits

Winner of this game is the buying public. Because of the profit incentive and free competition, the public reaps huge dividends in the form of better merchandise at fair prices. To the average citizen of socialist and totalitarian countries, where I have observed that these things are never duplicated, these simple facts seem an unattainable dream. What American would wish to exchange this system for methods that have never succeeded half so well?
 Profit is no parasite feeding on our economic system. Profit is the life blood of the industrial and business enterprises responsible for the highest level of civilization the world has known. Freedom to compete against skill and efficiency by using better skill and more efficiency means a progressive civilization—not a static economy that either withers away or makes spoilage for the spoilers.

Mountains Wall in Venezuela's Oil Wealth

Venezuela, one-third larger than Texas, is the northern crown of the South American continent. Its thousand miles of Caribbean sea coast fit between Colombia on the west and the Guianas on the east, says the National Geographic Society.

In its western quarter the two northernmost ranges of the Andes system wall in the low, hot plain in which lies Lake Maracaibo, center of vast petroleum wealth. Southeast of these mountains are the great cattle-raising prairies, or llanos, lying mostly north of the Orinoco river, which cuts Venezuela almost in two. South and east of the Orinoco and covering nearly half the republic are the Guiana highlands, low mountain masses, forested and little developed.

Petroleum has greatly affected Venezuela's economy since about 1925. In the immediate prewar years, 1937-41, the republic was producing around 200 million barrels of crude oil annually and closely pressing Russia for second position (after the United States) among oil-producing nations. After the Pearl Harbor attack, the very Axis submarine activity which strangled Allied shipping along the approaches to the nearby Panama Canal, curtailed Venezuelan oil production and brought the war to Aruba and Curacao, Netherlands island off Venezuela's western coast where most Venezuelan oil is refined.

One big advantage in not being rich is that you can pick your own friends.

Cranberry Pie Solves Short Sugar Ration

What's good for the sauce is good for the pie, is especially true of cranberries, according to Marjorie Griffin, Rural Home editor of nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer.
 "There's a blend of orange marmalade, apple slices and cranberries in the flavorful filling," she tells home makers. "White corn syrup, one of the standby sugar savers, is used with egg whites in making the fluffy meringue."

Sugar Cranberry Pie.

2 apples
 2 c. orange marmalade
 3 c. fresh cranberries
 2 tbsp. corn starch
 2 tbsp. cold water
 2 egg whites
 3 tbsp. white corn sirup
 1 baked 9-inch pie shell
 Peel and slice apples. Heat marmalade; add apples and cook gently for 3 to 4 minutes. Add cranberries; continue cooking until cranberry skins pop open — about 10 minutes. Blend cornstarch and water to a smooth paste; add to cranberry mixture. Cook, stirring constantly, until filling is slightly thickened and clear. Cool; pour into pie shell. Beat egg whites stiff, gradually adding corn sirup while beating. Pile meringue in ring around edge of pie. Bake in slow oven (325° F.) until golden brown — about 15 minutes.

While sorting clothes, unfasten buttons, remove pins, close zippers, brush out pant cuffs and brush off caked mud or dirt.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh
Apple Tree Versus Wheat Field
 If you ever visit Jeb Crowell's farm, he'll take you right out on that back porch of his and show you his apple tree.
 "There," says Jeb, "is nature's noblest creation—fifty years, and bearin' still the finest cider apples in the county!"
 But last fall, when a group of us was there, Lud Denny points across the river to his grain fields and says: "There's an even finer sight! Acres and acres of golden grain you can make dozens of appetizing things with—including wholesome, sparkling beer."
 Both of them got so eloquent on the subject, that the rest of us worked up quite a thirst; so Jeb goes to the icebox for beer and cider. And when the refreshments come, Lud chooses cider, and Jeb takes the beer!
 From where I sit, that's the answer to most disputes. You can talk all you want, but when it comes to tastes and preferences, there's just no argument.

Back to Life
By Maude Norman

MARY STARR finished putting the dishes away, took off her apron and went out to the front porch. She glanced anxiously toward where the bright tip of her husband's cigarette showed in the darkness.

"It gets dark earlier now, doesn't it," she remarked.

She tried again. "Anything interesting happen today?"

James threw his cigarette over the railing. "Oh, sure, I had a very interesting day," he mocked. "As usual I took the 7:35 to town. I sold, or tried to sell suits. I took the 6:30 home as I have for the last six years."

"Perhaps if you started writing again you might sell something," she ventured.

"Write," he snorted. "I'm so tired at night I don't have an idea in my head. I do the same thing day in and day out, world without end, amen, and you think I can write. Write about what!"

The next morning Mary raced through her work, washed and dressed the baby, settled three-year-old Shirley in the sand-box to play, then got out her typewriter.

Two days later James received a letter, a delicately scented missive that Mary handed to him without a word.

"Dear Mr. Starr," the letter began. "About seven years ago I was confronted with a serious problem that a story of yours, 'Stella's Solution,' helped me to solve successfully. I should have written and thanked you then, only that I knew how men in your position are deluged with letters.

Sincerely,
Justine Owen."

James did not show the letter to Mary and she asked no questions. No more letters came to the house,

He went into the house, slamming the door.

although she knew he had answered. He began writing every evening, re-typing and sometimes rewriting the stories he had written and laid aside. Shortly after sending out his first story a check came for $25, not much, but enough to encourage him.

Mary rejoiced at the change in him, especially after he sold two more stories, until one day, going through the pockets of a suit she was sending to the cleaners, she found a note.

"DARLING! There I have said it and say it again. Darling! I love you. Does that seem strange? But why should it? Your letters, carefully worded though they are, tell me you love me too. Name a place where I can meet you. Your post office address makes you seem so far away.

"You mentioned responsibilities. In all this world there are only two things that matter. You, and the fact that I love you and will love you forever. You are my inspiration.

Hopefully,
James."

James found Mary unusually silent that evening. Although he tried to interest her in the day's happenings, she busied herself feeding the children and barely answered him.

"I sold another story," he said. "Looks like I can write after all."

"That's nice," she answered briefly, trying to pass him.

"Aren't you glad?" "Of course I am." "Then what's the matter?"

Mary handed him the note she had found in his pocket. "I wasn't snooping," she said. "I found this when I emptied the pockets of your grey suit when I sent it to the cleaners."

James took the note. "I was hoping you would find it pretty soon," he grinned.

"WHAT!"

"I hope you don't think I'm as dense as I appeared to be. Oh, at first I fell for it. Long enough to sell a story and get a little self-confidence. Then I became curious to see the lady who wrote such lovely letters. A trip or two to the post office soon showed me she was someone I knew very well indeed."

"And you don't think I'm silly, do you? I only wanted to give you a little romantic interest. I thought it would help you."

"It certainly did help me, Silly. After you dragged me out of a black pit of self-pity and despair! I meant every word I wrote," he kissed her gently. "You really are my inspiration."
