Walther League Holds Bowling Tournament

The Walther League of the Central Illinois District held its bowling tournament on two Sundays, May 18 and 25, at the Playdrome, 2004 Main St., Peoria.

Misses Mildred Messman, Evelyn Seider and Alice Roethermel, all of Broadlands; and Devalson Schweineke and Virgil Luth of Newman, represented the local Immanuel Lutheran League, and bowled with the Peoria Trinity Church leaguers on Sunday afternoon, May 25.

This event was carried out under the personal direction of Dan Messman of Bloomington, formerly of Homer, who is now serving as athletic chairman for this district. Since a tournament of this kind had not been held during the war years, it revived old interest and created much new interest, with 45 different leagues participating.

Arriving in Peoria on Saturday evening, the Broadlands group spent the night at the Hotel Pere Marquette, and attended services at Trinity Lutheran Church, where they not only had the privilege of hearing guest speaker, Pastor Uhlig, of Jacksonville, preach an inspiring sermon on Pentecost, but also, at the same time, see him deliver the same sermon to a group of deaf people in the sign language.

Illinois State Capitol News

Motor vehicle accidents on Illinois highways killed 133 persons during April, according to the monthly report of the state division of highways. This is seven per cent less than the number killed in April, 1946. In the first four months of this year, 579 persons have been killed. Highway deaths in the similar period last year totaled 611.

The state division of highways has opened and is studying bids for nearly five million dollars worth of highway improvements to be made in 32 Illinois counties. Much of the work will consist of bituminous surfacing on gravel or crushed stone, while some concrete reconstruction of existing roads and a considerable amount of bridge painting will be included.

Suspension of all Illinois exhibits of live poultry has been ordered by Arnold P. Benson, state director of agriculture, to check any further spread of Newcastle disease. The ruling applies to all county fairs as well as the state fair, and includes chickens, ducks, geese, turkeys and pigeons.

Newcastle disease is one of the most devastating maladies known to poultrymen. Produced by a virus, it causes symptoms resembling those of bronchitis, eventually producing paralysis of the infected birds. First identified at Newcastle, England, it is now reported prevalent in some sections of Illinois.

FACING NATIONAL PERILS

LESSON TEXT—II Kings 19:5-7, 32-37; 20:12-17.
MEMORY SELECTION—For thus said the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel: in returning and rest shall ye be saved; in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength.—Isaiah 30:15.

Perilous times had come upon the southern part of the divided kingdom known as Judah. There had been a period of outward prosperity under King Uzziah, but the inward decay of the people made it an empty thing.

Judah, like Israel, was on the downward path which was to lead to ultimate captivity and judgment. The occasional reign of good kings seemed to stem the tide a bit; in fact, the great king of whom we study today, Hezekiah, gave Judah a "fresh lease on life and enabled her to outlive her sister kingdom by nearly a century and a half."

Judah experienced a real revival of faith in God under Hezekiah (II Kings 18:4-6; II Chron. 29:31). The temple was cleansed, the priesthood renewed and reconsecrated, and the great feast of the Passover kept once more. This undoubtedly explains the new life which came to Judah in an hour when the nation seemed about to disintegrate.

I. The Enemy's Threat (19:5, 6).

For the background here one must read the previous chapter. Hezekiah, having tried to throw off the yoke of Assyria, had seen Sennacherib and his armies sweep over the land. Thinking to stop him and to save Jerusalem, he sent a great gift amounting in value to millions of dollars. The gift was accepted, and then Sennacherib treacherously besieged Jerusalem.

Rabshakeh, Sennacherib's messenger to Hezekiah, not only threatened the nation, but blasphemously denied the power of God. Such was the awful situation Hezekiah faced as he went to the temple, and sent trusted servants to inquire of Isaiah what he ought to do.

The response was prompt and definite. We may learn from this incident that in an hour of confusion and danger it is well to take time to find out what the Lord has to say about things. He knows what to do!

II. The Lord's Answer (19:7, 32-37).

God has only to blow on the mighty, blustering monarchs of this world and they come to their end, definitely and conclusively. The "blast" of the Lord (v. 7) is enough to care for that! And remember, he is still ready to act on behalf of his people!

On the plains of Philistia the mighty host of Assyria met the angel of the Lord, and they never awoke from their sleep. The loss of 185,000 men sent Sennacherib home to Nineveh broken and fearful, and there he met his own violent death.

How much we need the encouragement of such an event as this in our own day when the mighty of this earth seem to speak so boldly and confidently against the name of the Lord. His children must often hear the blasphemous threats of unbelievers and bear the burden of their scorn.

Let us remember that we do serve a God who can with a glance of his eyes throw into confusion all the enemies of his mighty name. Let us be strong to fight the victorious battle in his name!

Hezekiah knew the sweetness of victory as he trusted in the Lord. If we could only rest the matter there. But the weakness of the flesh comes to the fore as we see

III. The King's Folly (20:12-17).

Babylon, one of the great Gentile enemies of Assyria, wanted to cultivate the friendship of Hezekiah, so an embassy was sent to express joy at his recovery from a serious illness.

It was the Lord who had healed him (see 20:11) in a miraculous way, but now Hezekiah did the foolish thing of trying to cultivate the help of men.

To impress these possible allies from Babylon, he showed them all his wealth. He evidently wanted them to return to their ruler with a story of the might and glory of Judah.

Poor Hezekiah! He only made a fool of himself, prepared the way for the ultimate taking of his possessions and his people by the Babylonians.

The lesson to be learned here is not only that boasting is folly (although that is always true), but also that it is the height of folly to put one's trust in the arm of flesh.

No matter how mighty the forces of this world may be, or how wonderful it might seem to have their favor toward the cause of the church, let us be clear that it is in God that we have our strength—and in him alone.

The church (and individual Christians too) has lost its testimony and its power in the community whenever and wherever it has turned to the world for help or support. Remember the folly of Hezekiah.

Fewer Farm Workers

Farm production in 1946 was about 31 per cent greater than before the war, although 300,000 fewer farms were operated last year and there were 8.3 per cent fewer workers employed in farming. At the same time the number of horses and mules used on farms was cut nearly in half.

At present only about 20 per cent of the nation's labor force is employed on farms, whereas in the 1920's about 26 per cent of all workers were employed in farming.

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson calls these developments a "revolution" in farm production. Several factors have entered into this trend, including the use of more tractors and other farm machinery, more fertilizers and soil building practices, better seeds and improved farm management.

With fewer work animals to feed, nearly 55,000,000 acres formerly used to produce this feed have been released to furnish food for human consumption.

These changes have increased the flow of farm workers to the cities, thereby adding to the labor supply available for industrial production. Since the war, industry has been able to absorb most of these workers, and predictions of mass unemployment made in 1945 have proved wrong so far.

Total civilian employment in 1946 reached more than 58,000,000, an all-time peak. In addition, about 2,600,090 were in the armed forces. Only about 10,000,000 are now engaged in farming, and that number is likely to further decrease as the farm "revolution" proceeds.

Portal Suits Banned

President Truman recently signed the bill outlawing suits for portal-to-portal pay not based on definite contracts or established customs, in spite of strong pressure from the CIO demanding that the measure be vetoed.

The President stated that several features of the bill were not satisfactory to him, and suggested further legislation to remedy what he considered to be defects in the law.

As finally enacted, the measure does not prevent the making of contracts between unions and management providing for portal-to-portal pay, and does not interfere with such contracts already in existence. It does ban the ridiculous claims recently made for amounts totalling nearly $6,000,000,000, extending back for several years.

There was never the slightest justification for these claims, as neither the companies nor their employees expected that such claims would arise until a vague decision of the Supreme Court appeared to afford a pretext for making them. In fact, the American Federation of Labor did not approve of such claims, most of which were made by CIO unions alone.

The new law will serve to prevent endless litigation and uncertainty in industry, which litigation never had any basis of fairness or common sense.

The state of Illinois contains approximately 12,000 miles of railways, a larger mileage than any other state.

The state of Idaho is one of the leading states of the Union in the production of sheep and wool.

Sidelights

The guy who expects to be blown to eternity any moment by an atom bomb is a direct descendant, according to Pathfinder, of the guy who joined the church when he heard that Halley's Comet was going to hit the earth. Or aren't you old enough to remember?

As efforts for establishing the lasting peace continue, we all too often become discouraged as supposedly civilized countries appear to be "on their marks" at the starting line of a new war. And the fact is that history keeps repeating. In ancient times Aristotle said: "It is more difficult to organize peace than to win a war; but the fruits of victory will be lost if the peace is not well organized." But the trouble is, Aristotle didn't tell us how to organize the peace. No doubt he suffered from the same affliction as our present political philosophers—know the trouble but can't find the solution.

Since television is not yet available to us, we have often wondered what happens on the Fiber McGee program when the clatter from his famous closet takes place. We learn now that Soundman Monty Fraser, creator of the closet, piles his stuff on boxes placed on five wooden stairs, turns them over one by one. In the aggregation of noise producing items are five flat boxes, bowling pins, golf clubs, a lunch pail, a tool kit, bellows, roller skates, assorted tin pans and cans, an ice cream freezer, baseball shoes, a saber and scabbard, a tambourine, a steel helmet, an alarm clock, a wrench, a rifle, a churn, a trunk and a guitar.

Household Hints

Wiping up grease or liquids immediately after spilling may prevent many bad falls.

Let your youngsters draw slips for their tasks of the day. Less irksome for them that way.

Apply liquid wax with a fly spray. It does not leave spots and can be polished in half the time.

Clean and air felt hats before covering with paper and storing in a dry place. Dampness may cause mildew.

Pushing a child in its carriage provides a form of outdoor rest, but should never take the place of a child's real nap.

Make it a habit to turn the handles of saucepans toward the back of the stove, so that they are out of reach of little children.

Clothes hung away for the summer should have all pins and metal ornaments removed, as these may rust and leave stains on fabrics.

Allow your window curtains to reach the sill, to cover the base of the apron, or to reach the floor. In between lengths never look right so gauge your curtain lengths as above and your windows will look well dressed.

Freezing Fish

Fish is prepared for freezing much in the manner of meats.

It is especially important to chill fish quickly after catching, freezing it the same day as caught if possible. Soak the fish, remove head and entrails, and wash well. Trim fins and tail if fish is small and is to be frozen whole. Cut large fish into pieces ready for cooking. Sometimes lean fish are dipped in a salt solution for one minute. Use ½ cup salt to 1 gallon of water. Do not use salt on fat or oily fish. This treatment is not necessary if fish have been kept cold and are cleaned and frozen soon after catching. To package, wrap tightly in cellophane paper, seal in cellophane bags, or put in heavily waxed cartons. If fish are not properly packed, they may give off flavors to other foods.

Why Is It Coming?

Many observers are of opinion now that the nation may expect a considerable business recession by August or September. It is expected that this recession will be reasonably severe and might last for six months. Some expect it to bring bankruptcy to a good many businesses that are weak financially, create unemployment, and maybe interrupt production seriously.

President Truman is so much alarmed that he is asking industry to reduce prices of commodities in order to help cushion the expected recession. Fears are that it might develop into a real depression. In view of our huge national debt and the fact that we must maintain a high national income, this prospect is rather serious. Naturally, we are asking ourselves: "Why must it come?"

Washington Fable

It is on the way because everything is entirely too high. Homes are too high, manufactured goods are too high, food is too high—everything is too high. People are refusing to pay the prices. They are going to continue to refuse until something is done about it. Now, why do not the industrialists just immediately lower prices until there would be no talk of depression?

That's impossible. Prices are regulated by costs. In manufacturing a price is charged that covers the cost. Big item in cost is usually labor, which averages 50 or 60 or 70%, and as much as 85%, of a finished article. Now the fable. When the war was over the President's Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Henry Wallace, recommended that in the automobile industry wages could go up 30%, without increasing the prices of automobiles at all.

Spiral Again

If that could have happened in the automobile industry, of course, it could have happened also in many other industries. Labor was encouraged to demand a 30% boost, which they were told should bring no price increases. The facts, however, were on the other side of the fence. After an 18 ½ cent increase was granted auto workers, and even before OPA died, automobile prices had to be increased an average of 22%. Other industries granted similar raises and prices went on moving upward.

Labor soon realized that it had lost all its gains in the higher costs of living. When we get far enough from the present problems to size them up more accurately and when a correct history is finally written, it will probably be explained that wage boosts in the fall and winter of 1945-46, more than any other one thing, were responsible for the inflated prices that followed. This is what now threatens to make depression inevitable.

If our government could have found in 1945 enough backbone for a firm stand against increases in wages and prices, urging instead a high productivity to get the nation back on its feet as quickly as possible, then the present feared depression would have been mere talk. But when the general inflationary rise in wages and a corresponding inflationary rise in prices came, all thinking people agreed that finally a depression would probably come. We may get back to a reasonable level that way, but even yet we could use a much better way, which this column will outline next week.

Home-Canned Pickled Beets Are Good Appetizers

Small pickled beets add a colorful and appetizing note to meals the year 'round. Your home canning schedule should include them. Here is an excellent recipe taken from the famous Ball Blue Book on home canning:

- 1 gallon small beets
 - 2 cups sugar, or 1 cup sugar and 1 cup corn sirup
 - 1 long stick cinnamon
 - 1 tablespoon allspice
 - ¾ cups vinegar
 - ½ cups water
- Cook and skin beets. Add sugar and spices to vinegar and water. Simmer 15 minutes. Add beets. Boil five minutes. Pack beets into hot jars. Cover with boiling sirup. If not enough sirup to cover, add more vinegar. Process five minutes in hot water bath.

Daily Vitamin Source—Home Canned Tomatoes

Tomatoes, really a fruit but more often regarded and used as a vegetable, are easy to can at home, and yet few people ever have enough to last through the winter until the next crop comes along. To can, select fresh, firm, sound ripe tomatoes and wash carefully. Scald in small quantities. Using a cheesecloth square to hold the tomatoes and dipping them into hot water is an easy and effective way of scalding. Skin, pack and process as quickly as possible after scalding. Letting the tomatoes stand after scalding is likely to cause flat sour. If exposed to air after skinning they also lose food value. Tomatoes are an important source of Vitamin C (ascorbic acid) which is needed in daily diet for good health. Always cut out the hard cores and green spots before canning and avoid canning tomatoes from which decayed spots and fungus growths have been removed. The Ball Blue Book recipe for Regular Pack directs that the prepared tomatoes be packed solidly into hot jars. Add one teaspoon salt to each quart. Do not add any liquid. Process 45 minutes in hot water bath. Or, another method given is to boil the prepared tomatoes five minutes, pour into hot jars, add one teaspoon salt to each quart and process 20 minutes in hot water bath. To can tomatoes whole, prepare them as above, being careful not to cut into the seed pod when removing the core. Pack into hot jars as closely as possible without crushing. Add one teaspoon salt to each quart, and cover with hot tomato juice or puree. Process 35 minutes in hot water bath.

LOOKING AHEAD by GEORGE S. BENSON

Free Elections Ever pay any attention to your newspaper reports of trouble encountered in the smaller European nations concerning free elections? The former satellites of Nazi Germany, and the present satellites of Soviet Russia, are finding the ideal of elections incompatible with those political doctrines that have been foisted upon them. Such insane foolishness as having the masses go to the polls for honest and secret voting, they say, is reserved for the decadent democracies. These classless and enlightened denizens under benevolent socialist governments (that's the picture drawn up for consumption of peoples still ruled by despotic capitalists) do not of course value the power of the vote. They do not know what a workable factor of democracy the vote is. Not having permitted the will of the people to develop through free speech, a free press, and free elections, the fetters of ruling classes are likely to remain.

Example, Britain No nation can have free elections, while at the same time it tries to artificially discipline its labor force and foster government management of industry. Recent events in Britain give point to this statement. It was evident to me while in England last August that the nation was in for trouble. Absenteeism of workers in coal mines had risen to about 25%, and this was reduced to 18% only in January, when the coal famine was already a reality. Productivity remained inexplicably low. Because there was a lack of national discipline, that is, the normal self-discipline common in America's industrial workers, coal was not coming from the mines. Parliament was afraid to discipline the miners to get coal. Parliament feared results at the next election. This explains why the labor government calmly watched the coal crisis develop, step by step, fully aware that it was coming.

No Ruling Classes No country can promote government management of industry, as England is trying to do, and maintain discipline of labor along with free elections. Stalin has the first two, in good measure, but he is not troubled with elections. Free elections under present conditions in Russia would have little meaning. They are a risk that the Soviet ruling class could never assume. We in America have found that the best type of discipline comes from incentives found in the ambition to get ahead. When a man knows he can better his lot and is not afraid to try, the best kind of self-discipline is the result. The lowliest immigrant can become a great inventor. An assembly line worker can plan to own the factory, and can do it honestly. Things like these have happened too often to go unnoticed.

If we want to keep high efficiency, with the highest possible wages and an increasing standard of living, we must keep private ownership and private management of the tools of production. Holding to these things in a free market and cherishing the freedoms of speech, assembly, and press, we shall have little fear of dictatorship. Free elections would not permit it.

Please, can you tell me why the tide is not up this morning? asked the little girl at the seaside. Yes, replied the old fisherman. It's because it was out last night.

No one finds quite so many things of interest in a newspaper as Aunt Samantha.

Job Printing! she read from an advertisement in "The Weekly Clarion." Poor Job! They've kept him printing, week after week, year after year, ever since I can remember. If he wasn't the patientest man that ever was he never could have stood it so long no how!

The Sunday school teacher was telling the class a Bible story.

"Elijah built an altar and piled wood on it, he said; then he cut up the bullock in pieces and laid them on top. Next, he ordered the people to fill four barrels with water and pour it on the altar. Now, can any boy tell me why all this water was poured over the bullock on the altar?" Up spoke a bright boy. To make lots of gravy, he said.

MacIntosh was having a dispute over the fare he owed a taxi driver.

The man with the meter talked loud and harshly, and it angered the Highlander.

Do you know who I am, he demanded, proudly, drawing himself up to his full height. I am MacIntosh.

The taxi driver snorted. I don't care if you're a brand-new umbrella, he said. I'll have my rights.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh Want to Run a "Collective" Farm? Was reading the other day about the "collective" farms they have in certain countries. It seems the folks who run them have plenty of help . . . good hours . . . and the best equipment. Sounds pretty nice—till you learn that the "farmer" doesn't own his land, or even farm it, in our sense. He takes orders from the state; produces whatever they want him to produce, at prices they set. Even his off-hours are spent according to state regulations. No, that would never go here. We're willing to work hard, but we like to farm the land our own way, put our own value on the crops, and relax as we like—if only with a temperate, companionable glass of beer. From where I sit, collective farming may produce results. But the American way—freedom to work and relax as we see fit—is what makes this country a great place to live. So let's not change it! 3 MINUTE SOUVENIRS
By Jock Carroll
WNU Features.

AS SOON as the president of United Motors had been safely chauffeured away to his office, his wife slipped upstairs to her room. This was a day that belonged to memories.

Margaret took a small wooden box from the bottom drawer. After she had opened it she sat quite still for a few minutes. For on the top of the pile was a snapshot of her and Bill at the beach. Emotion swept her. His blond head, quiet smile. The clean strength of him as he swung her to the top of the diving tower. Bill.

One who took life seriously. He dreamed of big things, and he was working to realize them. Night classes, so many hours of study per week. A daily grind that had lifted him from a mere machine operator to an assembly foreman.

A bright party hat. A dance program. Ticket stubs with silly words written on them.

Here was a newspaper clipping. A rakish young man. Crisp black curls rioting on his head. His devil-may-care smile was that of a man who is taking the world in his stride. In the picture the dark shadows under his eyes were scarcely noticeable.

"Hal Dennisson," said the caption. "Popular young man who is succeeding his father as president of United Motors. He is expected to create more than a bit of a stir when he takes over."

"When I look into the mirror it seems that my eyes have never shone so brightly." She had written in her diary.

A little red book spread apart under Margaret's fingers.

Monday: "Today," it said, "the new boss arrived at the office. He's tall and good-looking and quite mad. Half-an-hour after he arrived he picked me out for his secretary and made Mr. Hurlbutton get another. He talks like a machine gun.

Tuesday: "It is wrong that I am writing this under Tuesday, because it is already three o'clock on Wednesday morning. But I am too excited to go to sleep. When I look into the mirror it seems that my eyes have never shone so brightly—and that I will never get my breath back from that drive home.

"Something kept bothering me though—bobbing around under the surface of my mind. It wasn't until now, Diary, that I realized what it was. I was supposed to go out with Bill tonight. . . ."

Wednesday: "Hal."

Thursday: "Hal."
Friday: "Tonight Hal asked me to marry him. And, oh, Diary, it's not just that I'm so hungry for the things that Hal wants to give me, but it's the idea of being safe."

Saturday: "Tonight, after Hal had roared away in the roadster, a figure rose from the shadows of the verandah. It was Bill.
"He was quiet and kind, as always, and he made me feel ashamed."

"I guess we both know what's happened, Margaret. I thought that we had just about decided on a license and a small apartment next year, but looking at it from your point of view it mightn't be so good. Years of waiting. No money for luxuries. Just scraping and existing while I studied and prepared myself for something bigger. I'm not an engineer yet, you know, and it's a long way up from there."

"Then, Diary, some terribly sad music drifted out from the radio and Bill swallowed a couple of times before he could say: 'If ever you think that is what you want, Margaret, I'll be waiting.'"
Margaret closed the book. She cupped the small, golden pin in her hands, and her dark head bent over it. Two bright beads that might have been tears glistened in the sunlight from the window, they had shattered on her hands.

When the president came home that night, he heard his wife's heels clack upstairs. There was a quick patter on the staircase, then Margaret was in his arms and hugging him as though they had been years apart.

Her face tilted back for his kiss and he saw that her eyes were shining with happiness. Afterwards she buried her head in his shoulder.

"Bill," she mused, "what ever became of Hal Dennisson when they made you president?"
