Illinois State Capitol News

Parking space for 12,000 autos will be available at the Illinois state fairgrounds this year. A new parking space has been prepared and the old parking areas have been enlarged.

More than 6,500 disabled civilians of Illinois have been helped to surmount physical or mental handicaps and get into paying work during the last four years by the Illinois Division of Vocational Rehabilitation.

Illinois is expected to have a corn crop of 406,080,000 bushels this fall, according to an estimate released recently by state and federal departments of agriculture. This would be more than one hundred million bushels less than last year's bumper crop, but well over the state's ten-year average production.

An array of the work of Midwest artists in oils, water colors, sculpture and lithography, comprising the Old Northwest Territory art exhibit, will be a notable feature of the Illinois state fair, August 8-17. Nearly 600 works of art have been entered and judged, and winners of $2900 in awards will be announced on the opening day of the fair.

Forty Year Old Buick Licensed to Operate

One-hundred-sixty makes of passenger automobiles, one of them a forty-year old model, have been licensed to operate in Illinois since the first of the year, Secretary of State Edward J. Barrett said recently.

Most of the popular early "gas buggies" are represented in the current passenger car license registrations which now total 1,598,734.

Secretary Barrett said that a review of the automobile department files showed the oldest licensed car to be a 1907 Buick. Other licensed old-timers are a 1908 Stoddard-Dayton; 1909 and 1910 models of both the Brush and the E. M. F.; a 1913 Regal; 1914 Allen; 1916 Stanley; 1918 Overland; and five 1920 models including a Birch, Cleveland, Revere, Patterson and Scripps-Both. Six Detroit-Electrics have licenses.

Another group of old-time models have titles only because they are maintained by their owners as museum pieces or collector's items, and not for road use. These include a 1902 Gardner-Serpollet and a 1903 Auto-car as well as many of the more popular models manufactured from 1907 on through 1920.

Foreign cars represented in the license files include a Maerlcar, Mar Rosse, Hisano Suiza, Newfield Motor Glide, Standard, Volkswagen, Matford and Delta. The last four were brought back to this country by G. I.'s.

County School Head to Get Pay Boost

(News-Gazette)

The salaries of County Superintendent of Schools E. M. Harshbarger and Assistant Superintendent E. G. Montgomery will jump by approximately 40% next month under a legislative bill signed Monday by Governor Dwight H. Green.

The new law grants increases ranging from $1,000 to $2,450 on a population basis throughout the state. Harshbarger's salary will be advanced from $3,600 to $6,000, effective August 1, the beginning of the new term of office.

Montgomery, named last fall as assistant to Harshbarger, will benefit automatically under a clause which fixes his salary at three-fifths of the superintendent's pay. His salary will be $3,600 under the new law, an advance of $1,440.

The new statewide salary increases for county school heads is the first in more than 20 years.

The Champaign county salaries are fixed on the basis of the 1940 census, which reported population as slightly under 75,000.

L. W. Class Meets at Home Mrs. Belle Smith

The L. W. class of the U. B. Church met at the home of Mrs. Belle Smith on Wednesday, July 16.

In the absence of the president Mrs. Kate Stutz was in charge. The meeting was opened by all singing, "His Grace is Enough For Me." Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Ten members answered to roll call.

Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: Mrs. Kate Stutz, president; Mrs. Lula Pearson, vice president; Mrs. Dophia Warner, secretary-treasurer with Mrs. Belle Smith her assistant.

The next meeting will be a potluck dinner, each member to bring a guest; each member also to help with devotions and entertainment.

Mrs. Smith was in charge of devotions. She chose for her topic, "Charity," with scripture from Corinthians, 13th chapter, followed by prayer by Mrs. Leona Bergfield. Several interesting articles were read by various members.

Mrs. Shultz thanked the class for cards received during her recent illness.

The entertainment was in charge of Mrs. Lula Pearson.

The hostess assisted by her daughters served lovely refreshments.

Wisdom and Understanding For Our Daily Living

LESSON TEXT FOR JULY 27—Proverbs 1:1-5; 3:13-18; 9:9, 10; James 1:5.

MEMORY SELECTION—Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting get understanding.—Proverbs 4:7.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Of The Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

EDUCATION is so widespread in our day, and so eagerly sought after, that one might assume that the world would soon solve its problems through the cultural attainments of its people.

Why this is not true appears clearly in our lesson; for it is wisdom that the world needs, and wisdom is quite different from the understanding or memorizing of a mass of facts.

Wisdom teaches us how to use knowledge effectively for the glory of God. We see in our lesson:

I. The Meaning of Wisdom (Prov. 1:1-5).

PROVERBS are pithy, useful sayings, which gather up the wisdom of a people in easily remembered form. They are highly thought of in all nations, but reached their highest development among the Hebrews, because they rightly insisted that they must be related to God and worship of him.

We learn in this passage that they are given to us that we may "know" that we have both wisdom and instruction. The growth of knowledge is always a prerequisite to growth in grace—learn more about God and his precious Word, and you will have more of his grace upon you.

Knowledge must be coupled with discernment (v. 2), which speaks of going beyond and below the surface meaning. This will not be an abstract love of the scholarly, but a practical application of truth to life (v. 3). Wisdom results in right living and proper dealing with our neighbors.

The one who has come to this place is ready to give (v. 4) help to others, especially to the young or those of "simple" thinking, who have not yet reached the place where they can get hold of such things for themselves.

Notice that the wise man does not stop at that point, but because he is wise he goes on to more and more understandings, to further receiving and giving out of "sound counsels" (v. 5).

II. The Value of Wisdom (Prov. 3:13-18).

THE character of a man shows up in the things he holds to be valuable. Some cannot see beyond gold and silver. Others seek comfort and convenience, and do not wish to be disturbed in their easy ways.

The wise man knows that for real pleasure of the highest type, for peace of mind and heart, for riches that will last and not bring him into either sin or sorrow, there is nothing like the cultivation of understanding and wisdom.

This scripture affords us the opportunity to say a needed word to young people who are being so sorely tempted these days to forego their opportunities for an education, and to rush out into the world to make money, more money, yes, the most possible money.

Education seems to be unnecessary, a waste of time and effort. But wait, the years will come and go, and then when it is too late, the realization will come that a golden opportunity was missed, and that doors of usefulness and effectiveness are now closed.

It pays to give time to the cultivation of the mind and of the heart in preparation for life. We are not thinking primarily of the dollars and cents value now, for that is secondary, even though it may be important.

III. The Source of Wisdom (Prov. 9:9, 10; James 1:5).

GOD is the source of wisdom, and it is as a man fears him that he becomes wise. The fear of God is not a matter of fright or terror, but rather a genuine concern that one may do his will and never fail to be obedient to his guidance.

God is always more ready to give than we are to receive. He will not turn us aside, or belittle our efforts; but will, if we ask, give wisdom, and that in no little measure.

Let no man think that he can attain unto true wisdom apart from a right relationship to God. He may have knowledge, but not wisdom. On the other hand, let no man who knows God and serves him go through life lacking wisdom when all he has to do is to ask it of his heavenly Father. Why be poverty-stricken when you can be rich in wisdom and understanding?

Goods Less Scarce

Most lines of goods are now available to buyers in sufficient volume to meet reasonable demands, but there are still shortages in some items and in a few raw materials. On the whole, consumer demands are being supplied more rapidly than was the case a few months ago, but most prices remain high.

Farm equipment, including tractors, is being produced in greater volume than ever before, but will not meet demands for some time, and the same is true of some lines of furniture and home equipment. Automobiles remain far below consumer demand, and it may be another year before production is adequate.

The shortage of clothing of all kinds is being relieved, but there are still scarcities in medium and lower grades of merchandise.

The high cost of food still presents a serious problem to persons in the lower income brackets, and there seems little prospect of any material reduction in the near future. Floods in the mid-west will have considerable effect on the year's food production. With food prices at an all time high, less money is available for luxury items.

For the country as a whole, retail sales in nearly all lines are holding at record levels, so far as money value is concerned, but the quantity of actual goods sold is lower than a year ago. In other words, people are spending more, but getting less for their money.

How long the present boom can continue at the prevailing high levels of wages and prices cannot be foreseen, but unless all former experience is reversed, a business recession is bound to come sooner or later.

Army Warned of Reds

Copies of a new War Department pamphlet being distributed to officers and men of the Army turns the spotlight on the American Communist Party as an agent of Soviet Russia. The document will be used as the basis of lectures to United States troops at home and abroad.

Directions are given on how to recognize Communists, which state that if a person "always supports the party line, agrees with the party press and always supports the policies of the Soviet Union, he is a Communist."

But it adds: "We do not wish to begin a Communist witch hunt. Genuine liberals must not be confused with these enemies of the United States. Don't call anyone a Communist before applying the above test."

The pamphlet declares Communists in and out of the service were responsible for the "near mutiny" agitation for bringing soldiers home after V-J Day, which dangerously reduced American military strength in occupied areas.

It may be added that the same influences are at work in trying to prevent the adoption of universal military training and other plans for strengthening our military position at the present time.

While the actual membership of the Communist party in the United States is comparatively small, by agitation and propaganda it has been able to influence large numbers of prominent citizens—including many clergymen, college professors, writers and others—who have joined the numerous Communist front organizations which consistently play the Soviet game.

Most of these are ardent admirers of Henry A. Wallace, who is not a member of the Communist party, but who probably is doing more to undermine America's non-partisan foreign policy than any other individual citizen.

Sidelights

Speaking of signs, the one in a bar on San Francisco's Third Street may be effective. It says: "Our aim is to have the cleanest cuspidors on this street. Your aim will help."

The House of Murphy, a famous eating place at Beverly Hills, Calif., prominently displays a sign that might be heeded everywhere: "It is all right to drink like a fish if you drink what the fish drink."

A bartender reports that recently three men stepped up to his bar for a drink, whereupon one slipped to the floor and made no effort to arise. His pals paid no attention to him but ordered two drinks. The bartender looked at the man on the floor and asked: "What'll he have?" One of the two still upright said: "Nothing, Joe—he's driving." And so it goes.

Certified as cured, a patient at an insane asylum was saying goodbye to the director of the institution. The director was pleased that the treatment which the young man had received had been so effective and was anxious to know what plans he had made. "Well," said the patient, "I have passed my bar examinations, so I may practice law. I also have had quite a bit of experience in college dramatics, so I might try acting." He paused for a moment, deep in thought. "Then on the other hand," he continued, "I may be a teakettle."

Women IN THE CHURCH by Mary Fowler

The Rev. Mrs. Tamaki Uemura of Tokyo, an ordained minister of the United Church of Japan, was recently touring American Presbyterian churches as a "missionary of reconciliation" from her country to the United States. Now this best-known Japanese woman preacher is back in her homeland, and it is reported that "auditoriums in Tokyo and Yokohama have been filled with crowds to hear the message from her lips; in a few days she leaves to tour the land and tell the people that the world can become one, but only in Jesus Christ. She is busy with the task of interpreting the heart of America to Japan." One of Mrs. Uemura's first acts upon her return was to present to the Empress of Japan a beautiful Bible sent her by the women of America. "She talked for two hours with their Majesties, whose eyes welled up with tears as she told them of the healing of wounds and the promise of the restoration of the long friendship which had been interrupted by the war."

SHORT STORY

Humble Beggar

By Matthew Christopher

THE knock sounded like the soft click of a night latch. Naomi opened the door, and he stood there—a tall, humble looking figure whose sunken grey eyes peered unobtrusively from a sun-leathered face.

If Philip had been here she would have closed the door. She would say, "I'm sorry, but we have nothing left." Or, just, "I'm sorry." But Philip wasn't here. And she was ready to place the food on the table. "Good morning, Ma'am?" he said. He smiled, a tender smile that broke through his grey whiskers. "Would you be kind enough to give an old man a—bite to eat?"

Then it was as if Philip was behind her, staring over her shoulders glaring with those level brown eyes of his, saying, "Tell him to go on his way."

The sun flashed a welcoming signal on her bright smile, and touched the high tones of her smoothly planed face. "Come in," she said. "You're just in time."

He had a cautious quality about his step as he crossed the threshold into the kitchen. She could almost hear Philip say, "See how careful he is? You got to watch that kind. That characteristic quirk isn't exactly human nature!"

Connie ran in from the dining room, her brown curls bobbing on her head like soft coils of spring.

"Go back and get in your chair, Connie," Naomi said. "We're going to have company." She gave the beggar a radiant smile, and pointed to a chair in the dining room. "You may sit there. The hat can go on the bureau behind you."

Suddenly she saw her purse there. She had placed it there after having brought home the things from the grocer's. But it would look silly now to remove it, she thought. Even if he were one of Philip's characters, there was only 60 cents, to the penny, in the purse.

IT WOULD have made no difference in the world to Philip that he was old. The older, the more experienced; the more experienced, the craftier, was Philip's philosophical slant on it.

Naomi heard the man chuckle as she stood at the stove, mixing the gravy with the potatoes. She brought the food to the table, put some in Connie's plate, and urged the man to help himself. He did, unembarrassingly, but he didn't take much. Just a little of each.

He pushed the plate away from him when he was finished, patted his skinny stomach with satisfaction.

"You're not through?" Naomi said. "There's lots more."

He shook his head. "No, Ma'am, thanks. I'm through. It was delicious, believe me, Ma'am. I'm certainly thankful to ye."

Philip would rave when he'd hear. She'd tell him, of course. Why not? She thought, if Philip could be here, now; if he could just sit in a corner and watch, he would cast out of his mind all those ridiculous beliefs he had about these unfortunate human beings.

A tall humble looking figure with sunken grey eyes.

But she'd tell him, and she would laugh when he'd rave.

Back in the dining room, she sat down again and began finishing her meal.

"Mamma?" "Yes, dear?" she glanced up. Connie's black eyes were staring peculiarly at her. "What is it, darling?" "That man opened your purse," Connie said.

Naomi stared incredulously at her daughter. "Connie," her voice was sharp. "Are you sure?" "Yes, Mamma."

Immediately, she thought of Philip.

Quickly, she rose from the chair, swooped the purse off the top of the bureau. She flicked it open with her thumb, and sprawled into it with trembling fingers. And, suddenly—

"Connie!" Her voice shrilled high, bell-like. "Connie, look!" She was smiling radiantly.

The child stared blandly at the old, wrinkled, one-dollar bill Naomi was holding in her hand.

Smile Awhile

Faithfulness and truth are the most sacred excellences and endowments of the human mind.

Pop, why do you always sign my report card with an 'X'?

I don't want your teacher to think anyone who could read and write would have a son as dumb as you.

They were entertaining the preacher at lunch, and the guest remarked to the small boy of the house, "Don't you ever say prayers before your meals, my child?"

A man was trying to sell a horse. He stroked the animal's neck and remarked to the prospective buyer, "Hasn't he a fine coat?"

The prospective buyer had noticed that the horse was wind-broken, so he replied, "Yeah, his coat's all right—but I don't like his pants."

A hillbilly and his wife had a big family of children—and added a new one to the family almost every year. Then came the war and maneuvers. One day the eldest child saw a paratrooper floating into the yard.

Hey, Pa! he yelled. Git yer shotgun. The stork is abringin' m full-growed naow!

Balzac's profound knowledge of human nature caused the great novelist to fancy himself an expert at reading character in handwriting.

One day an old woman brought him a little boy's copybook and said, "Master what do you think of this child's possibilities?"

Balzac studied the scrawly, untidy handwriting. Are you the boy's mother? he finally asked.

No. Some other relative? he ventured.

None at all, the woman replied. Then I will give you my frank opinion, Balzac pontificated. This child is slovenly and probably stupid. I fear he will never amount to anything.

The old woman cackled with laughter.

But, master, she cried, that copybook was your very own when you were a little boy in school!

The profound judge of human nature retired in confusion.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Sam Helps with the Dishwashing

Dropped in at the Abernathy's just the other evening—and there was Sam, out in the kitchen with an apron on, helping his missus wash the supper dishes. (And then I learned later he'd helped cook the supper, too.)

and the mealtime chores is sort of a bond between them ... like sharing that friendly glass of beer together, when the work is done. It's one of those little all-important things in marriage.

Of course, Sam could have settled into his favorite chair, enjoyed his evening glass of beer, and left all the messy kitchenwork to Dixie. But he kind of likes her company—and she in turn certainly appreciates his help.

From where I sit, the time that a man and wife can spend with each other in this busy world today is all too precious. And the more things they can do together, the better.

In fact, sharing the housework

MILLIONS SPENT FOR DOG FOOD RESEARCH

Wide Use of Prepared Products Boosts Dog Ownership, Says Expert

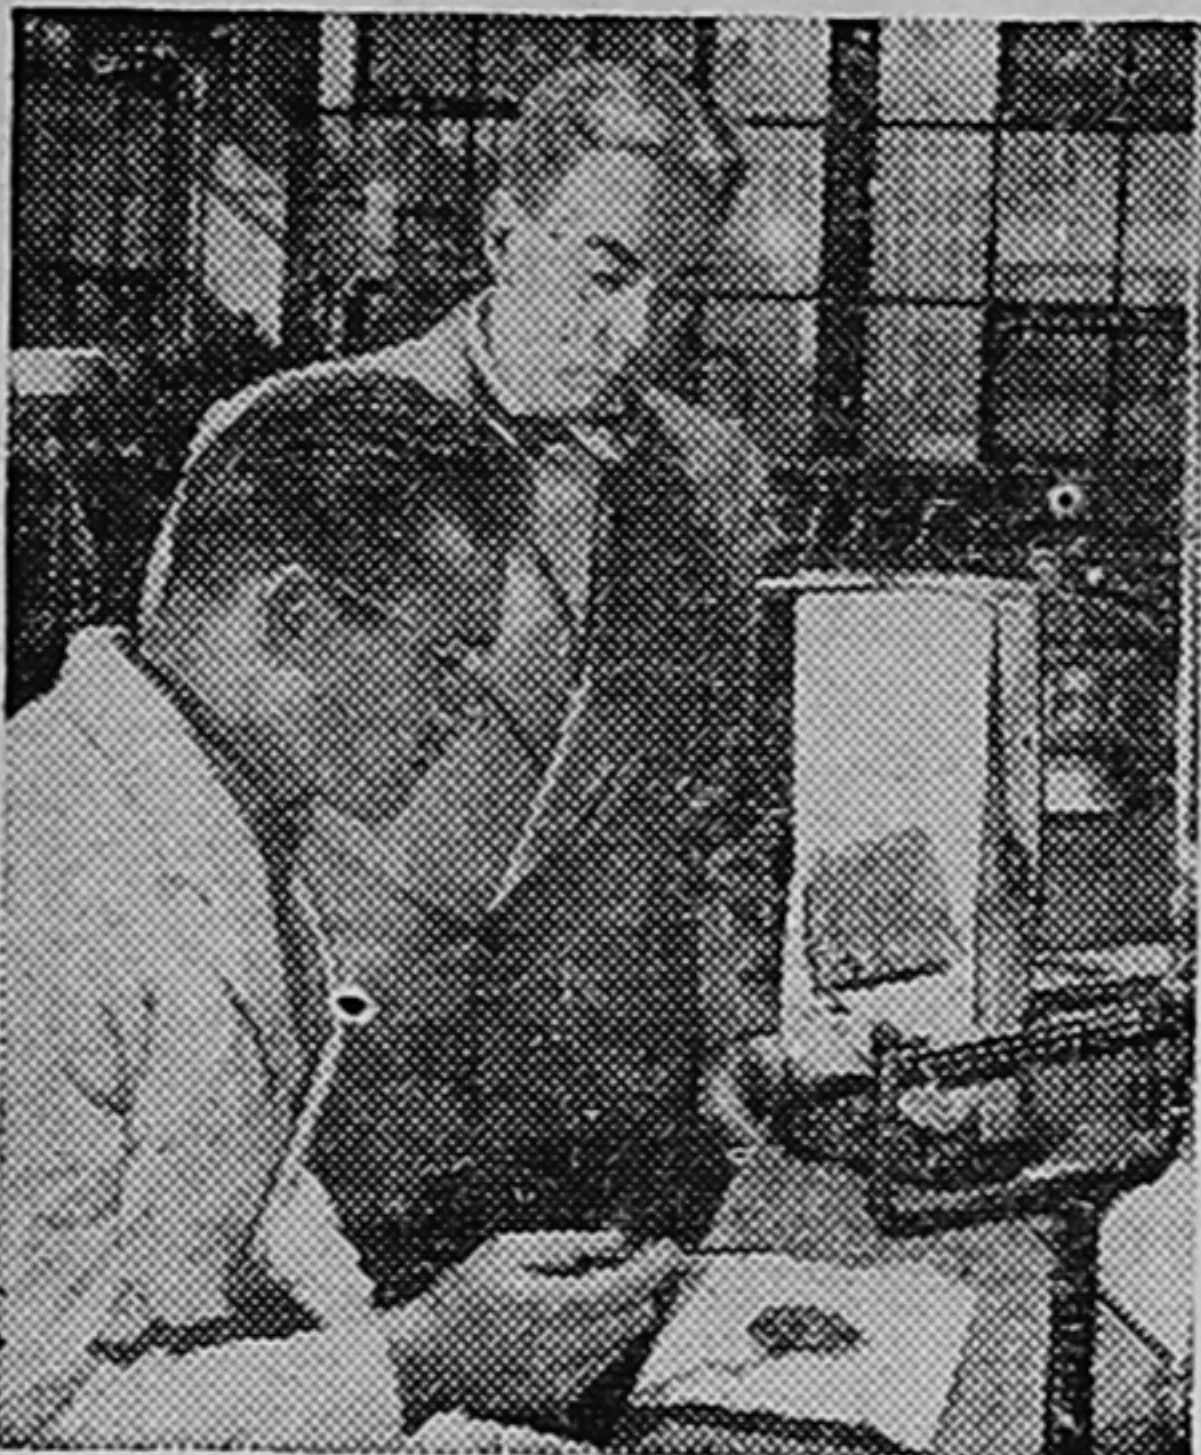

Prepared dog foods are chiefly responsible for the present new high level of dog ownership in the United States, according to Harry Miller, director of the Gaines Dog Research Center, New York City.

"So long as the homemaker had to think in terms of cooking special food for the family dog, the recognized American affinity for pets could not have full play," Mr. Miller states. "But the popularization of prepared dog foods released the brake and as a result the per capita dog population in America today is the highest in our history."

According to Mr. Miller, prepared dog foods are not only work and time savers for the woman in the home but they are much better balanced and certainly more economical than what she could fix up herself. In fact, some of the prepared dog foods on the market are so scientifically balanced as to require nothing more than the addition of water—though few Americans can resist the temptation to give their canine pet a "little extra something" from the table.

"The meal-type dog food in particular has proven a blessing," he states. "The better brands contain every nutritional element dogs are known to need—they provide more than sufficient amounts of all the vitamins, minerals and amino acids the dog requires. With meal the main part of each feeding, meat, table scraps, milk, soup or gravy can be added for variety, taste appeal or as a treat."

Mr. Miller paid warm tribute to the researchers in dog nutrition whose work in recent years, and particularly the war years, he stated, have brought this branch of science up on par with the work done in livestock and human nutrition. Years of laboratory and kennel research, made possible by the expenditure of millions of dollars, are paying off in the superior prepared dog foods the consumer can use with utmost confidence, he said.

Checking on dog food in the laboratory.

Speaking of table scraps, Mr. Miller warned of the dangers of indiscriminate feeding of "left-overs." While some table scraps have considerable nutritional value, others are harmful in character—too starchy, too rich, sharp bones—and are to be discarded. The wise dog-owner carefully segregates the "good" from the "bad" before letting his pet partake of table scraps.

He Answered Call Of Opportunity

A typical story of American opportunity is the life of Earl Owen Shreve, new President of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

This big-shouldered hard-working son of Iowa climbed from the bottom to one of the top executive posts in the General Electric Co., as vice-president in charge of customer relations.

Born in Mapleton, Iowa, he had a job at the turn of the century as station agent and telegrapher at Harrisburg, S. D., with the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad. He got so interested in his work, he went to Iowa State College at Ames to study electrical engineering. Then, with a degree in electrical engineering, he joined General Electric and started his climb.

Mr. Shreve knows what he talks about when he calls America the land of opportunity.

The News appreciates your news items.

Business To Tell American Story

American opportunity!

What it means and how it works—That is the title and the task of a nation-wide effort undertaken jointly by business leaders, public opinion specialists, economists and advertisers, cooperating with the United States Chamber of Commerce.

The objective is to give the American people better understanding of their enterprise system and its benefits. The chief medium of this effort will be advertising.

An example of the economic truths the joint effort will seek to tell in concrete language is the following:

The average American can earn a pair of shoes with six hours work—the average Russian 30 days, the average European 20 days.

In 1900 it took the average American 24 hours to earn that same pair of shoes. In 1920, only 12 hours.

Facts are stubborn things because man can't twist them to suit his prejudices.
