Cultivating Good Will

LESSON TEXT FOR SEPTEMBER 14—
Proverbs 3:30, 31; 15:1, 18; 22:24, 25; 23:18,
21, 22; 26:20, 21; Matthew 5:9; James 3:17.

MEMORY SELECTION—Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God.—Matthew 5:9.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

By WILLIAM CULBERTSON, D. D.,
Of The Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

IT IS true that the Christian life gives offense on occasion. When a controversy exists between men and God, the Christian has no other course of action than to align himself on God's side. As he takes his stand in such cases, he should do it in love, but nevertheless with firmness.

The Bible nowhere commends a critical spirit or a perverse attitude. It rather emphasizes the necessity of firmness in the course of right, a firmness that loses nothing of its intensity through being tempered in the fires of love.

The Christian beyond all others should give himself to a life manifesting sympathy, kindness and charitableness. Thus he will open avenues of opportunity, of witness, and of service in which the Lord may be greatly magnified.

I. Contributing Factors to the Making of Good Will (Prov. 3:30, 31; 22:24, 25; 25:18; 26:20, 21).

VARIANCE and strife mar good will (Prov. 3:30, 31). Notice that this strife is unoccasional. When we strive with men to no purpose; when men have not harmed us, and with bitterness of spirit we turn upon them, we of course forfeit every opportunity to influence them for good.

The man of variance similarly should be passed by. We are not to emulate him; we are not to envy him; we are to choose none of his ways.

A wrathful spirit also mars good will (Prov. 22:24, 25). A man of anger is not to be followed by the child of God. This passage enjoins us to have no friendship with such that we shall learn their ways and their ways will then be a snare to our souls.

Another way in which we mar good will is to be the purveyors of untruth (Prov. 25:18). The false witness is characterized as a large hammer or a sword or a sharp arrow, for he wounds his neighbor, often grievously.

The man or the woman who in gossip has maliciously wounded another loses all opportunity to influence him for God. The cultivation of good will involves the speaking of truth.

Let us with all diligence, with the help of God, banish from our hearts and minds all of these attitudes which hurt and mar.

II. Contributing Factors to the Making of Good Will.

IN THE first place, the soft answer of the controlled spirit will establish good will (Prov. 15:1, 18). The soft answer does turn away wrath. The man who is slow to anger appeases strife.

Let us not confuse a soft answer with an unconvincing one, or with that mealy-mouthed procedure that we commonly call double talk. Happy is that man who knows how to present the truth convincingly, who can make men, despite his opposing standards, understand that he has their good at heart. Of course, there is one absolute requisite to such a testimony, and that is a life wholly lived for God.

Another factor in making good will is the act of kindness (Prov. 25:21, 22). This passage, you will remember, is quoted in Romans 12. Here is the opportunity for us, in all matters of personal injury, to place our case in the hands of God rather than to seek revenge. By such acts of kindness, as we trust God, we shall be obeying the Lord; and who knows but that our enemies may thus be turned to him.

A third contributing factor in making good will is that of making peace (Matt. 5:9). So often this business of attempting to make peace is a thankless task, but that thanklessness is only from human sources. So far as God is concerned, he has placed his seal of approval upon every child of his who seeks to lead men into peace with God and to make peace between men.

God speaks of them as being "called" sons of God. It is one thing to be a son of God; it is another thing to be acknowledged as a son of God.

Labor Day 1947

Monday, Sept. 1, was observed as Labor Day in tribute to the nation's workers, to whose efficient efforts the present prosperity of the country is largely due. For several months more than 60 million persons have been employed, the highest number in our history, and at the highest level of wages.

While the cost of living has also reached an all-time peak, labor is still in a strong economic position, and a recent survey shows that about two-thirds of all workers are saving some money from current wages. At present there is comparatively little unemployment on account of labor disputes, and this should be a source of gratification to all.

Labor Day this year practically coincided with the coming into effect of the new Taft-Hartley Act, concerning which many labor leaders have expressed apprehension. It will take some time to determine just how the new law will affect the welfare of the workers, and some of its provisions will be tested in the courts as to their constitutionality, which is an entirely proper procedure. Even more important than the details of the Taft-Hartley Act, is the problem of keeping 60 million workers employed.

Disarmament Bunk

For more than a year a United Nations commission on disarmament has been fooling with the idea that some scheme can be devised whereby the nations of the world may be induced to reduce their armaments to a minimum by mutual agreement.

This is in theory a most desirable objective, but in the present state of affairs it is an utter absurdity. Why this is so should be easy to understand, and may be expressed in a single statement:

The Soviet Union cannot be trusted to carry out its agreements in good faith.

This fact has been demonstrated over and over again in the last two years, during which time the Russian government has violated virtually every important pledge it has made concerning international affairs.

Recently the U. N. armament commission was told by Soviet Delegate Andrei A. Gromyko that Russia would demand that proposals to collect official data on troops and arms from member nations must include figures on atomic bombs on hand. This demand was aimed, of course, at the United States, which is supposed to be the only country at present possessing such weapons.

Gromyko well knows that we will not give this information until an international agreement, protected by rigid safeguards, including the right of inspection, is placed in full operation. The United States many months ago proposed an agreement providing such safeguards, but it was flatly rejected by Russia.

It should be plain to everyone by this time, therefore, that no agreement satisfactory to the two governments is possible. This being the case, any further discussion of disarmament seems futile.

Sidelights

The movement of wives to join husbands overseas has been labeled by Army men as Operation Henpeck.

We learn of Clementine—the favorite cow of a Seabee outfit in the Midway Islands. Clementine met with an accident and lost her tail. The flies nearly ran her nuts until sympathetic Seabees fashioned a tail for her from a length of three-quarter inch manila rope and tied it securely to the stump that was her tail. Clementine's disposition immediately improved.

The little community of Augusta is situated in the bottom-land of Arkansas. For 15 years the white residents of that area have had no regular church. On the other hand, the negro population had both. Recently the negro congregation arranged it so both had both. They loaned their church to a white ministerial student who will use it for regular services among the formerly churchless white congregation of Augusta. The familiar pattern of domestic missionary work in reverse.

Cooperation comes from the strangest places. Mrs. Kathryn Jones of Chicago will tell you that. Recently her car stalled just beside the New York Central railroad tracks. Try as she would, the starter refused to budge. The rear end of the car was very close to the rails and Mrs. Jones did her best to push the vehicle out of range. But it was no use—a fast freight train was bearing down on her as she leaped to safety. The train neatly sheared a rear fender from the car as it moved it a few feet away. Mrs. Jones picked up the fender, placed it in the back seat, stepped on the starter and drove off.

A colored boy was a witness in a recent shooting affray. As he took the stand, he was so scared he could hardly talk. The court reporter was having a hard time catching his words and pulled her chair just in front of him. Soon he became accustomed to his surroundings and began answering with ease. He gradually picked up speed in telling his story and the court reporter having become accustomed to his drawing accent, was able to take his testimony very rapidly. Presently the witness was panting for breath. Asked the trouble, he fixed a forlorn look upon the court reporter and pleaded: "Please, mam, slow dat pencil down a little. I jist can't keep up wid you."

The Lovell family, of York, Nebr., will assure you that lightning does strike twice—and often more—in the same place. All set for a day's outing, Homer Lovell and his brood struck out for the country and an all-day picnic. The weather was ideal. The car was loaded with all kinds of good things to eat and off they went. But before night the gas tank sprung a leak and ruined all the food. One little Lovell lost her purse three times—but found it three times. On the way home the car's four tires had seven flats. Discouraged, the Lovells stopped at a farmhouse for help. As they waited in the front room, the plaster dropped off the ceiling, but no one was hurt. No plans are being made by the Lovells for any future picnics.

Household Hints

Scissors may be sharpened by cutting through fine sandpaper several times.

A delicious whipped cream substitute can be made by adding a sliced banana to the white of an egg and beating until stiff.

Your sewing machine should be oiled after each day's sewing, or after eight or ten hours of stitching.

One part mild soap flakes to five parts hot water beat to a stiff lather with an egg beater makes a good cleaning agent for rugs and upholstery.

The next time you are repairing furniture, add fine sawdust to the glue. This will prevent the glue from cracking away from the wood.

Frozen meat, once thawed, is more perishable than chilled meat. For this reason, you should cook frozen meat as soon as possible after thawing. Do not remove the wrapping until you are ready to cook the meat.

When redecorating your home, soak the wallpaper you wish to remove with water containing vinegar. Use one cup vinegar to a pail (10 quarts) of water, and you will find the old wallpaper will peel off more quickly.

Majolica Vase
By L. T. McFARLAND

HARRY LANG had come prepared to spend fifty dollars for the vase. He sat nervously watching the auctioneer, the people, and the door and prayed that Marjory Higgins (that horrid spinster who seldom missed an auction, and always outbid him for his treasures) had broken a leg or something so she couldn't appear this time when the Majolica vase was to be put up on the block.

He strained his neck for the hundredth time toward the entrance. He wondered if her knowledge of antiques covered old pottery. Maybe not. Maybe his auction-sparring enemy didn't know a Majolica vase from a beer mug. Yet the very thought of those snapping eyes and that crisp sanguine voice sent his blood pressure soaring.

"What am I bid for this Majolica vase? A rare antique! Rarest thing in this room!" the auctioneer's well-oiled voice boomed forth while his free hand gestured out over wash tubs, kraut shovels, and the toil-worn carpet sweepers.

3-Minute Fiction

There it was! Harry looked about cautiously and held his breath for the sheer beauty of it.

"Who will start the bid?" the auctioneer coaxed.

"Five dollars." Harry called out. The girl was nowhere in sight.

"Thank you, sir, five dollars. Who will make it ten?" Thus the bidding proceeded until thirty was reached.

She pictured her proud exit with the vase safely tucked away.

THE crowd was swaying restlessly. Interest was on the wane. Harry took a plunge. "Forty," he finally said. Now the vase was practically in his lap, but the auctioneer held on. "Forty-forty—is all I am offered—who'll make it fifty?"

"Fifty," called a clear voice near the door.

Suffering cats! It was her voice.

The crowd turned en masse to see Marjory Higgins make her way up the aisle to a spot almost directly in front of Harry. She stood there, confidently, already picturing her proud exit with the vase in her possession.

Harry ground his teeth and muttered, "Sixty."

"Seventy-five," the crisp voice came back at once as Miss Higgins tossed a swift challenge back in Harry's direction.

"Eighty," Harry took the challenge, and this time Marjory flushed and seemed embarrassed.

"Eighty," teased the cryer.

"Eighty I am offered. Make it eighty-five, Miss?"

The girl nodded. "Eighty-five."

Harry was really seeing red.

"Eighty-five it is. Now make it ninety, Mister, make it ninety. Don't let the lady outbid you."

Harry sensed that the crowd to a man was on the lady's side and were inwardly rooting for her, enjoying her sportsmanship—so he raised up and shouted, "Ninety."

Now he had it. The auctioneer scolded and pleaded and begged but Marjory was immovable. She must be putting. She heard the "Going—going—g—"

THEN it happened. Marjory Higgins whirled about and faced Harry Lang. She was trembling. "You cheap skate!" she shouted. "You penny pincher! It's not the money, but the principle of the thing that burns me up. All this embarrassment over a measly nickel or two. Ninety cents—well, you don't get it for ninety. I bid one dollar. So there! And now that the vase is mine, I'd like nothing better than the privilege of breaking it over your head."

She stepped up to the stand and snatching the vase from the for-ounce speechless auctioneer, threw it with all her strength at Harry Lang's dome. Lucky for Harry he had made his record in football catching forward passes. A moment later it lay neatly tucked away under his arm.

"Touchdown!" someone shouted and the crowd surged forward pushing Harry Lang until he was face to face with his assailant.

"Thanks, madam. Thanks very much for the vase—the clerk will be along in a minute to collect your bid," he managed as the crowd pressed up. And in the riot that followed, Harry edged his way outside.

Smile Awhile

Mother was slow to comprehend what seemed so perfectly clear to little Sue. The pride of the family was talking about a 'fedder.'

A 'fedder?' mother questioned. Why, you know, Mummy, it's a leaf from a chicken.

A rich old aunt was paying her nephew's college expenses and her visitor asked her if it were expensive.

Well, said the aunt, some of the languages run pretty high. My check this month covered $10 for Chemistry, $20 for Latin, and $250 for Scotch.

The kindly old lady had made a pair of pajamas for the Red Cross to give to some soldier. The Red Cross worker looked at the handsome clothing and noticed that the pants had no front opening. Gently the situation was explained to the donor. The little old lady was downcast at first but then she brightened up.

"I have it; give them to some bachelor," she murmured sweetly.

Hello, Henry, a Birmingham darkey called out to a friend he had not seen for several months, how's everything?

Ain't you heard, Joe? Henry replied. I've been divorced.

Do tell! said Joe. What did you and your woman do wit dat house you-all owned?

Oh, we divided it up.

Divided yo house? rejoined Joe looking slightly puzzled. How?

Fifty-fifty! said Henry. She takes de inside an' I takes de outside.

Two Yankee tourists in England were forced to stand in a crowded tram. Finally an English woman and her daughter prepared to get off. Suddenly the woman nudged her daughter and whispered:

"Mary when we get off, back out of the car just as I do. I can't tell you why now."

Dutifully the daughter obeyed and they both backed out of the car onto the street. Upon safe arrival on the pavement the daughter asked the reason for her mother's strange request.

You saw those two Yankee tourists? Well, when we were preparing to get off, one of them said to the other, "When those dames get off we'll pinch their seats!"

You Takes Yer Choice

I am an American worker. If I decide I'd rather work and live in Schenectady, I can go there. Or Racine, or Spokane. If I want to, I can settle down and make the San Fernando Valley home. If I've been a machinist, but decide that the radio industry is the place for me, there are ways I can train myself to get into radio. If I want to drive a Diesel locomotive instead of a bus, I can go into railroading.

Nobody tells me I can't. I can try as many jobs as I like. If I don't like the job, I can walk out the door. When I find a job that suits me, I can work right up to be manager of the department or even president of the company, if I have the ability and the enterprise. If I want to start my own business and become an employer, I can do that, too.

Nobody Says "No"

In America nobody tells me I can't do all these things. But if I lived in a totalitarian country, I would be told. A uniformed official would have the duty of telling me in what part of the country I could work. A representative of the State would inform me that I must train for a certain job. I would have no choice in the kind of job.

Being told to stay put, I would have little chance for advancement. My wages would be regulated entirely by the state, and there would be no redress of grievance. Leaving a job would be impossible. There would be no firing for unsatisfactory work. Instead, I could be thrown into a concentration camp or a slave labor battalion. There I would be taught completely how to become servant to the master, the State.

Is not this contrasting picture accurate? Yes, you agree. However, what you are probably thinking is that America can never become such a totalitarian state. Friend, we would have to ignore the history of the world to assume that such dangers do not confront America. When a nation is prosperous is just the moment that you may watch for decline to set in. We must be no less watchful because times are good. We cannot ignore danger signs.

Swap With Europe?

No American worker would want to swap places with the average European worker. Yet so many of us unhesitatingly accept ideas and methods that come right from the very countries that we have outperformed a hundred ways to breakfast. Not everything is bad simply because it originates in Russia or Europe, but it is time to look around and see that what we have puts totalitarian countries out of the running.

Yet, in a recent survey from a cross-section of 5,000 persons, 63 per cent of the college students and 43 per cent of the general population said they would get as much or more in America under government management and ownership of industries. In other words, a lot of folks apparently believe that state socialism or totalitarianism would be more efficient and more desirable than freedom of opportunity and freedom of the individual. How mistaken they are!

Making Toy Shelves

An old set of bookshelves painted to harmonize with the surroundings makes a convenient place for children to store toys, according to the Rural Home editor of nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer. The playthings are kept in better condition than if thrown helter-skelter in a box.

SHORT STORY
Home Run
By
GROVER HEIMAN

MARY'S eyes had been serious as Matt turned to go into the clubhouse and he knew she was going to say something. He didn't want to listen, but he waited.

"I wish you would quit baseball and go into business with Father," she said, twisting her gloves in her long fingers.

"We've talked about this before, darling. Hundreds of times. I thought it was a closed subject."

"I'm reopening it, Matt. I've worried sick night after night."

"We'll talk about it after the game," he said wearily and the old anger grew large in his chest. Why this again!

They had been married less than a year and it had been the same story since spring training. Sure he had been lucky to get her. Or was it lucky to marry a girl with a cool million?

The cheers of the crowd that greeted the Red Legs when the team poured out of the clubhouse was music to his ears.

Here were his people—the fans. Rich and poor, they had one consuming interest and he shared that interest. Baseball was king in this square of grass circled by stands and myriads of faces.

The game rocked along as a pitcher's duel. Matt worked a fast double play in the top of the eighth to nip a Greenie rally and the stands went wild. Matt glanced at Mary, but there was no sign of elation.

The Red Legs needed this win to move into first place, but the outlook was dim when the first two batters swung three times and then came back to the dugout. Matt chose his bat and took his place at the plate.

Mary was still on his mind and he watched the first ball slant in and faintly heard the umpire call a strike. The next pitch was a strike and Matt gave the bill of his cap a jerk and leaned closer. Slow burning anger boiled up then and he was eager for the next throw. He wanted to hit it with everything he had, wanted to hurt the ball because he was hurt. It came and he swung.

The solid crack of the bat told the fans and they rose as one to cheer. Matt looked over his shoulder after touching second and grinned. A home run and the ball game. He noticed the two girls sitting next to Mary, on their feet and cheering.

MARY was waiting for him at the clubhouse. He wanted to hear her say it was a good hit, but her face was clouded in thought. She took his arm and they walked to the gate. A mass of humanity met Matt, and he had to halt. He autographed the ball and then books, tickets and anything else they shoved into his hands.

A tousle-haired boy standing on Mary's side turned a freckled nose to the boy standing beside him.

"Boy!" he murmured in awe. "Matt Johnson. That's what I want to be—a ball player like Matt."

They ate dinner and conversation was sparse. Matt wasn't happy, not with Mary feeling this way. It looked like a choice—Mary or baseball. He knew it would be Mary, but he loved baseball. The bank job with Mary's father would drive him crazy. If only she could understand!

As he paid the check he heard a man at a nearby table saying to a woman in a turban:

"That's Matt Johnson, one of the greatest second basemen in the game. That guy is a credit to the game and to the country. Really a clean sportsman and the idol of a million kids..."

Matt took Mary's arm and they departed. He didn't want to hear more. In the car he made up his mind. It would be better to break with the game now than later. In another month he knew he wouldn't be able to do it. He knew it because he knew himself.

"Mary... about baseball..."

She put her finger over his lips and kissed his cheek. "I've been a fool, darling. A selfish fool. I realized it when you hit the home run and when the fans wanted your autograph. And the way they cheered. Those boys by the car, what they said, and the man in the grill. You can't leave baseball, Matt. You are baseball."

Motorists Failing to Stop For School Buses

With the return of school buses to the highways, numerous instances are being observed of failure of motorists to stop when approaching from either direction school buses engaged in loading or discharging children, Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor Club, stated today.

Most motorists evidently recognize that they must stop when approaching from the rear a school bus engaged in loading or discharging children, but fail to recognize that the law in Illinois, Indiana, and a majority of states also requires them to stop when approaching the bus from the opposing lane of traffic.

The Motor Club urges motorists to exert especial care to remedy this hazardous violation, particularly when driving in rural districts, where consolidation of the schools is producing heavier school bus traffic.

Illinois State Capitol News

A total of 153 persons were killed in automobile accidents on Illinois highways during July, an increase of 26 per cent above the fatalities for the corresponding month last year. The cumulative death toll stood at 1,013 for the seven months of 1947, two per cent greater than during the similar period in 1946.

A substantial increase in the airport facilities of Illinois during the last twelve months is shown in a report just released by Robert Dewey, director of the state department of aeronautics. There are now 186 airports certificated by the department, as against 148 a year ago. This is an increase of 38 in the number of fields having two or more runways and other modern aviation facilities.
