Letters To The Editor

Urbana, Ill., Outlook Sanatorium, Sept. 29-47.

Hello Joe—Say fellow how in the heck are you? I want to thank you for the Broadlands News. I have got it several times the past year. I sure enjoy reading it even though I do not know many people around there anymore. But it does bring back memories of a lot of people I do know. There are several fellows in here from around Sidney and we pass it around. So it sure doesn't go to waste.

Well Joe I've been here for 28 months now and believe me it sure is one long and lonesome job to whip this. I never have much company only my wife. She has been mighty faithful, only missed a few times seeing me twice a week for that long. I don't know what I'd do if it was not for her, as this sure is hell in bed all the time. So you see a paper or card around here sure is appreciated. I'm doing just fine though. I expect to go to Chicago real soon now for surgery. Have to have several ribs out, then it will take from six months to a year anyway to get out, that is if everything goes all right.

Well Joe tell all the boys I know hello for me, and I hope to be out and around again some day.

Yours,
Virgil (Keener) Reed.

Former Longview Resident Weds A Wisconsin Girl

The Church of Atonement at Beloit, Wis., was the scene of a large wedding on Sunday, Sept. 21, at 2 o'clock, when Miss Carolyn Luety, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Luety, and James (Jack) Kalk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard B. Kalk, came to the altar to say their marriage vows in the presence of 300 guests.

White gladioli stood on the altar while palms stood at the sides and white bows marked the pews.

Preceding the ceremony, Miss Dorothy Sward played a prelude of organ music and accompaniment for Mrs. Elizabeth Reinholdt, who sang, "Bless This House" and "If God Left Only You," also "The Lord's Prayer" as the couple knelt at the altar.

Before the bridal processional, James Luety and John Reinholdt placed white carpeting through the center aisle, down which the bride walked with her father who gave her in marriage. She was gowned in heavy white satin with inset yoke of Venice lace on a fitted bodice. Matching lace trimmed the long sleeves.

A bustle back featured the skirt which terminated in a five yard train. The bride's veil of French illusion was attached to a Dutch cap of lace matching that on her dress. She carried a single white orchid on a white Bible. The gift from the groom was a gold bracelet.

The maid of honor and bridesmaids were attired alike in royal blue nylon taffeta. Their short mitts were of matching material. Each carried a cascade bouquet of gladioli and yellow roses with halos of yellow roses in their hair. Each wore a single strand of pearls, a gift from the bride.

Miss Jeanne Kalk, the groom's sister, was maid of honor; Miss Billie Kalk, Miss Elaine Luety and Miss Esther Meech were bridesmaids.

Little Miss Jeri Ann Kalk, small sister of the groom, was flower girl, and was clad in a nylon taffeta dress made floor length, with short puffed sleeves and fingertip veil held by a halo of yellow roses. She wore a small locket, a gift from the bride, and dropped rose petals from a dainty basket.

Lester Popanz was best man. Edward May and Paul Luety were ushers.

The Rev. Frank Berg officiated in the double ring ceremony.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held and a two-course luncheon was served to 250 guests in the church parlors. A five-tiered wedding cake graced the bridal table, together with the bouquets of the maid of honor and bridesmaids.

Before leaving on a honeymoon trip to Washington, D. C., the bride changed to a royal blue gaberdine suit with brown accessories and an orchid corsage.

They will reside at Beloit, where the groom is engaged in farming.

The bride, a 1946 graduate of Beloit high school, was employed as a bookkeeper. The groom attended Hononegan high school.

Apostle of Better Things

Lesson for October 12, 1947

THIS lesson opens, Hebrews 3:1-8, with the explanation that Jesus Christ is the minister of better things in that he is the apostle and high priest of our profession, perfectly faithful to him that appointed him. The comparison is made with Moses, who was also faithful, but within a very small circle as contrasted with the Son of God.

Called to God an high priest after the order of Melchisedec, Christ, the author of eternal salvation, dealt no longer with symbols, but offered himself as the perfect lamb to take away our sins. "And for this cause he is the mediator of the new covenant (testament), that by means of death, for the redemptions of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance," Hebrews 9:15.

Jesus and the Bible

JESUS is introduced in Matthew 4:1-4, as he quotes the Old Testament to Satan in the wilderness temptation. Having been reared by a God-fearing mother, Jesus was familiar with the Bible as a child. What is the best thing any parent can do for his or her child? I would answer without hesitation: Teach them to hide God's words in their hearts in the impressionable years of youth. A Bible verse learned in youth will serve through all life's testing situations.

"I will not forget Thy Word," Psalms 119:16.

He Helps Us Use the Bible

THE better ministry of Jesus is reflected in the fact that, "We have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God. . . . For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need," Hebrews 4:14-16.

Study the example of Jesus in his answers to Satan in the wilderness temptation, and He will teach us when and what to say to Satan. We are not dependent upon our wisdom and words. Our great high priest will supply wisdom and words to match any situation that Satan ever presents.

I think of a story of a junior boy, recently accused of stealing. The boy was the victim of a wicked man who sought to turn circumstantial evidence upon him to cover his own sin. The boy told me that he was innocent. I went with him to the juvenile court. The judge asked him if he was guilty. He looked straight into the eyes of the judge and said: "Sir, I have not sinned. Who convicteth me of this charge?" The man dropped his head, and said: "Your honor, I ask for the privilege of withdrawing the charge."

His Laws in Our Hearts

"I WILL put my laws on their hearts, and upon their minds also will I write them," Hebrews 10:16. Jesus declares, "I do always the things that please him," and he enables us, by his grace, to do the father's will by his indwelling in our hearts. Thus, his will becomes the law of our lives, through the grace of Jesus Christ.

It is impossible for us to keep the law perfectly, but Christ, the better Christ, becomes our righteousness, and then his law is kept by his grace. In the olden times, men claimed to keep the letter of the law, without the spirit, as in the case of Moses. Now, through the offering of Christ, we are enabled to satisfy the spirit of the law.

The Sufficient Christ

THIS lesson should enhearten every trusting child of God, since it makes clear that, "He is able to save unto the uttermost them that draw near unto God through him," Hebrews 7:25.

He is not only able, but yearns to save unto the uttermost. He wills to save everyone. God has done everything he can do to save every sentient soul on this earth. Those who go to hell do so because they decide to go to hell. It is not the pleasure of God that any should perish, but that all should repent and be saved.

Robot Pilots Plane

Piloting airplanes by mechanical means is not new, but the flight by a U. S. Air Force four engine Skymaster from Newfoundland to England recently, controlled only by an "electric brain," is the first overseas feat of its kind.

While there was a crew aboard as well as observers, no one touched the controls except to throw the starting switch, during the entire flight of about 2,400 miles, made in 12 hours and 5 minutes.

Automatic mechanical devices sent the plane from the starting runway to gain the desired altitude, after which it was guided by beams from two ships in the Atlantic and another beam from the airport near London, where it landed and rolled to a stop, as its momentum was checked by automatic brakes.

Incidentally, the pilot, who had nothing to do but stand by, was Capt. Thomas J. Wells, born in Selma, Ala., and the commander was Col. James M. Gillespie of San Antonio, Tex. The state flag of Alabama was painted on one side of the ship and that of Texas on the other. They named the plane the Robert E. Lee, thus adding to the Southern touch. Wells had made about 150 landings under automatic control prior to the trans-Atlantic flight.

The immediate object of the new "electric brain" is to make flying and landing safe in all kinds of weather, but it evidently has other possibilities of ominous significance, which the Air Force will not overlook.

In Religion's Name

Now and then we hear of the doings of a fanatical religious sect, whose self-appointed preachers use venomous snakes and poisons in connection with their evangelistic efforts, occasionally with fatal results.

About six weeks ago, the Rev. Gordon Miller, at a meeting place near Lyerly, Ga., induced a hysterical convert named Ernest Davis, 33, to drink some poison "to prove his faith." Davis died in agony shortly afterward.

Miller was arraigned, charged with manslaughter, but a local judge freed him, presumably on the theory that it is no crime to cause the death of another if it is done in the name of religion.

Near Ball Station, Ga., a few days ago, Miller and two other evangelists held another revival, according to the Atlanta Journal, at which Miller boasted of his acquittal, declaring that the Lord had vindicated him.

At this meeting, snakes were handled and a glass of water and a can of household lye was provided for any who desired to demonstrate their faith, but none ventured to try a drink of lye water, probably having the fate of Davis in mind.

Freedom of religion is one of our prized constitutional rights, but we can't help wondering whether these people are not carrying the idea too far!

The U. S. and Europe

American policies with respect to the European situation are being discussed daily and at great length by editors, columnists, radio commentators, officials and members of various groups of citizens. And there is plenty for all of them to write and talk about.

Most of those who are well enough informed to make their views worthy of consideration are in general agreement on one point: The United States must continue to give aid to friendly nations of Europe which stand in greatest need of assistance.

This aid must be given, not only from humanitarian motives, but in our own self-interest as well. As has been so often pointed out, the economic collapse of Europe would endanger our own security. Such a collapse is exactly what Russia is waiting for, because it would make it easier for her to take over—and let no one doubt that that is what she hopes to do. And how could Russia do this? Perhaps there is no definite answer to this vital question, but one or two possibilities may be suggested.

From the best information available it is believed that Russia has had excellent crops this year, while Western Europe has suffered from the worst drought in a century. If conditions in the West become more desperate there will inevitably be widespread strikes, food riots and the attendant chaos upon which Communism thrives.

Consider the case of Italy. Communists are already strong in that country and the recent strike of a million farm workers in Northern Italy, inspired by Communists, was temporarily settled by the government after much difficulty. The fate of the present government in Italy still hangs in the balance, and has been maintained this long only through support from the United States.

If we abandon Italy, it would be possible for the Soviet Union to strengthen the Communist party, by supplying grain from the Ukraine, and arms if necessary, to enable it to take over the government, thus adding another satellite to the Russian orbit, without action by the Red army.

The President and Congress decided some months ago that it was necessary to aid Greece and Turkey to halt the spread of Communistic rule. It is even more important that we continue aid to Western Europe. The Marshall Plan is undoubtedly the most practical means to that end.

The plan requires the countries in need to do all they can to help themselves through cooperative efforts. Sixteen nations represented at the recent Paris conference have promised to join in these efforts.

They are asking a credit of about 16 billion dollars, spread over a period of four years, but this will probably be trimmed down to some extent. This is a lot of money, but only about 6 per cent of what it cost us to win the war. If it can help to save 16 nations of Europe from disaster it should be furnished.

This matter is urgent, and we agree with those who believe a special session of Congress should be called to act upon it.

Sidelights

A story is told of a certain country preacher down in Georgia. He was conducting funeral services for one of those good but sharp-tongued women who try to regulate the lives of all in the community. As he preached, a cloud came up and there was a blinding flash of lightning, followed by a loud clap of thunder, whereupon the preacher remarked: "Brethren and sisters, she's got there."

It is predicted by some medical men that many of us now alive will live to see the day when surgery will be as uncommon as bleeding. It is thought that new drugs, serums and electric rays will cure such complaints as appendicitis, tonsillitis, cancer, ulcers and tumors. Surgeons would be needed only for fractures and such mechanical jobs, it is pointed out, and thus this branch of the medical profession would have plenty of time for golf.

We suppose there are some problems that just can't be solved, at least young Johnny had one thrust upon him that overtaxed his ability. He had been asked by his mother to mind his baby brother. All went well for some time until all of a sudden, baby brother filled the air with his cries. "What in the world is the matter? Can't you keep your little brother entertained?" she called from the kitchen window. "I'm trying to figure out what to do," patiently replied Johnny. "He's dug a hole in the ground and wants to bring it into the house with him."

"A great advance could be made toward the reduction of the alcohol problem if in each community and social group there would be those who dared to set the pace in gracious hospitality by making it fashionable to serve non-alcoholic refreshments," says the Board of Temperance of the Methodist Church. "To change this custom would be to save many a good man and woman from alcoholic enslavement and financial and moral disaster. It would save many a home from being broken, due to alcoholic conduct. It would safeguard the sacred rights of children who stand to suffer most when their home goes on the rocks of divorce."

Be An "Engineer in Good Eating"—Do Home Canning!

Simple Instructions Based on Science

You may not have a degree as an engineer, Mrs. Housewife, but when you're home canning you're using scientific principles just as surely as a mining, chemical, electrical or other engineer. That is, if you follow glass jar manufacturer's instructions, for they are based upon scientific discoveries made over a period of a century and a half.

Back in Napoleon's time, a Paris confectioner, Nicolas Appert, set out to find a method of food preservation and win a 12,000-franc prize offered in 1795 by the French government. Napoleon, like Frederick the Great, believed an army travels on its stomach, and the folks at home got hungry and discontented too!

Nicolas won the prize, after 15 years' work, but his methods and equipment have been greatly improved upon. He labored under many handicaps, not knowing a temperature beyond boiling is required for processing some foods and having to design his own glass jars. Not until 1860 did Louis Pasteur establish the fact that microorganisms are responsible for food spoilage. Fourteen years later, an American, A. K. Shriver of Baltimore, invented the "retort" or "pressure" cooker.

In 1858 John Mason patented the Mason jar with neck designed for receiving a screw type cap. The Mason jar with porcelain-lined zinc cap is an old reliable. Mason would probably be astounded by the 1947 cap for sealing the Mason jar. This new style cap is a two-piece metal affair with a Dome lid which has sealing compound on the under side and is tested for seal by pressing on the center of the lid with the finger. Sealing with the Dome lid is made doubly sure by the new type metal band which bears down on the lid at three pressure points.

Also reliable in seal is the lighting type jar with rubber ring, glass lid and wire bail.

Many scientific experiments and jar improvements have perfected processes for today's home canning and it is upon them that instructions you will find in reliable home canning literature such as the Ball Blue Book are based. Follow these instructions and you become an "Engineer in Good Eating"—much to the benefit of your family's health and increased pleasure at the table provided by delicious home canned foods.

SHORT STORY
Good Business
By M. J. COLLINS

UNCLE JOE came stamping into the kitchen making about as much noise as a small herd of cattle. "Here! You be careful!" Aunt Martha warned, waving a large mixing spoon threateningly. "I have bread settin'. And wipe your feet, don't you dare traipse in here from that dirty old barn yard."

"Gol darn it, woman, you put what I was goin' to say clean out of my head," he grumbled. "Oh, yes, now I remember—I think we should sell out and go live in town." There was a faraway look in his eyes and he thought of all the pleasures of retirement. Perhaps they'd buy a new car and do a little traveling.

"Huh! I'm not moving to town and leave our home just to suit a whim of yours. Just get the whole idea out of your head!" There was finality in her voice. "You go and clean up. Ralph and Jenny are coming over for supper. All your clothes are on the bed so don't ask me where they are when they're right under your nose."

We didn't have the slightest inkling of what Uncle had suggested until supper was nearly over and then Aunt Martha asked:

"Do you know what your uncle wants to do?" and as she generally does, answered herself before we could even open our mouths. "Sell the farm and move to town."

"Oh, I think that's a good idea!" Jenny cried. "It'll be so much easier for you."

The first thing we knew, we were involved in a full scale battle, three against Aunt Martha, but she wasn't

We were involved in a full scale argument, three against Martha, but she wasn't giving an inch. Not her! Finally she did admit that she didn't get her work done as spryly as before and from there on the battle was won.

Uncle Joe was jubilant. It had been easier than he'd dreamed.

During the next few weeks several would-be buyers came to appraise the farm and finally one of them said he would buy it. Uncle Joe and Aunt Martha had been shopping around trying to find a house in town but getting one was a tougher proposition than they'd expected.

Eventually the sale was completed and the new owner bought the farm complete with stock and implements for ten thousand dollars. He told Uncle Joe they could have another additional two weeks to find a house and move.

Early next morning we were over at their place and into the job of packing up. About nine-thirty the new owner drove out and hailed Uncle Joe.

"I'VE been thinking it over, Mr. Quinn, and this place doesn't quite suit me. How would you like to buy it back at the same price?"

Uncle Joe sort of looked at him popeyed and we all crowded around. "Well, sir! I just don't know what to say," he mumbled. "The wife has sort of set her mind on movin' to town."

"Faith, and I haven't!" Aunt Martha swung her arms around excitedly. "You buy it back, Joe Quinn, if you know what's good for you."

"Well, let's go to town," there was no reluctance in Uncle Joe's voice, "and get the papers fixed up."

We went outside, leaving Aunt Martha crying softly in Jenny's arms. I watched them drive away and Uncle Joe was grinning for all he was worth.

Later when we were driving home, Jenny said, "It was lucky the man wanted to sell it back. Neither one of them wanted to leave the farm."

"Lucky my eye!" I snorted. "It was just plain conniving on Uncle Joe's part. He made an agreement to pay the owner an extra thousand if he'd come out and say what he did. Don't say a word to Aunt Martha, he told me to keep it under my hat."

"Well, what do you know," Jenny laughed. "Uncle is still a bit of a gallant."

"An expensive one," I grumbled. Jenny smiled to herself, there was no sense in telling him that Aunt Martha had already paid the new owner five hundred dollars to sell the farm back to her husband.

Smile Awhile

Diner—I see tips are forbidden here.

Waitress—Lor' bless ye, mum, so was apples in the Garden of Eden.

And what, bawled the interviewer, do you think of the modern girl?

Lor' sir, replied the centenarian, I be a hunderd, I be, an I gave up thinkin' 'bout the girls nigh on to five years ago.

Book agent—Is your mother at home?

Small Boy (swinging on gate)—Yes, sir.

Agent—(After knocking several times) I thought you said your mother was at home.

Small Boy—She is, but we don't live in this house.

A tiny ant stood looking helplessly and longingly at the carcass of a dead horse, wondering if he could nibble some of it to take home.

A truck filled with cases of whiskey passed by and a bottle fell out near the ant and broke. The ant took a sip and then another and pretty soon began to feel revitalized.

Grabbing the horse by the tail it started shouting, Come on big boy, we're going home!

Taffy, working on a turning lathe in a British factory, was suddenly caught in the belt of his machine, which took him 'round and 'round. After he had gone around three times he was thrown to the ground.

His buddy seeing this, dashed up to him and cried:

Are you all right, Taff?

Why are you so interested? answered Taffy huffily. I just passed you three times, and you never even bothered to speak to me.

Uncle Sam Says

Small business firms can take a wise tip from many of their customers who have built a reserve nestegg of Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan for buying Savings Bonds. The Bond-A-Month Plan at local banks where the corner druggist, the grocer and the butcher maintain checking accounts is equally effective in providing a growing reserve for a business. For example, suppose you own a business which nets a $1,000 a month. By investing $200 a month in Savings Bonds through your bank's Bond-A-Month Plan you would have a $2400 reserve in one year's time. U. S. Treasury Department

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

How to Tell
You're Getting Old

Doc Walters gave me this formula: It's a sure-fire sign you're getting old when you resent other people having a good time.

And the Doc means it hasn't much to do with age. There are old folks in our town who get a big kick out of seeing other people enjoy themselves—seems to keep them young in spirit, with a twinkle in their eyes!

And there are some others who resent the young folks going fishing: who feel that community games and dances are just a waste of time; or who criticize temperate people for enjoying a mellow glass of beer with friends.

They're often well-intentioned folks, too. But from where I sit, the minute we criticize our neighbors for enjoying wholesome pleasures—like a game of horseshoes, a glass of beer, or an afternoon's fishing—it's a sure sign we're growing old (in spirit anyway) no matter what our age is.

Fur Bearing Marshes
Digging ditches in marshes—not for drainage to fit the land for cultivation—may be the most profitable way of developing such wet land, says the U.S.D.A. The level ditches with no outlets made the water deeper in some places and shallower elsewhere. This has proved favorable for muskrats—particularly in cold climates where shallow water freezes solid. The deeper water in the ditches keeps muskrats and other marsh dwellers safe and well fed in cold weather.

Flying Lifeboat
The U. S. coast guard has developed a flying lifeboat which will be valuable in rescuing shipwrecked seamen or downed aircraft crews, writes Gib Swanson in Capper's Farmer. As a glider, the 36-foot lifeboat is towed by plane to the scene of the disaster—then released for landing. Wings and tail are ejected after landing in the water, and a small gasoline engine powers it to shore. The lifeboat keeps contact with the rescue plane by two-way radio.

Moon Gets Larger
Various theories have been offered to account for the effect of the moon appearing larger near the horizon when it rises, but the conclusion of psychologists who studied the problem very carefully show that none of the theories is satisfactory. There seems to be some physiological effect by which the effort of raising or lowering the eyes shrinks the size of the moon as we perceive it, but so far there does not seem to be a satisfactory explanation of how such an effect could take place.
