Mrs. Mary K. Wienke Funeral This Friday

Mrs. Mary K. Wienke, 83, widow of the late John C. Wienke, passed away Tuesday evening at 7:40, at the Dunn nursing home in Champaign.

Funeral services will be held at 1:30 p. m. Friday at the home of her son, Clarence, north of Broadlands, where she had made her home for a number of years, and at 2 p. m. at the Immanuel Lutheran church. Burial will be in the adjoining cemetery, with Dicks Bros. funeral home in charge. Reverend P. E. Kerkhoff, pastor, will officiate.

Mrs. Wienke was born Jan. 20, 1864, near Springfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Rothermel. She was preceded in death by her husband, and a daughter, Mrs. Gusta Albers.

Surviving are her son, Clarence, and three daughters, Mrs. Joe Beck, Syracuse, N. Y.; Mrs. Josie Oye, Tuscola; and Mrs. Ida Beck, Homer.

Let's Have Halloween Fun; Not Destruction

Why can't young boys and girls have their Halloween fun nowadays without damaging the neighbors' property, and perhaps causing them bodily injury? Can there be something wrong with them—or with their parents or teachers—that allows such vandalism as is experienced during the Halloween season each year?

Probably it's merely an increasing degree of high spirits generated by this swift moving age. But if that is the case, adults in the home and in the community must take extra precautions to see that enough safety valves exist—in games, parties or some form of group activity.

Nobody wants to take the fun out of life, and the Halloween season has become traditionally a time for pranks and gaiety. But neither is there a desire to revert to the uncivilized practices of the early Druids, who actually thought that Saman, the lord of death, called together the wicked souls on Halloween.

There is a happy medium, and young people know the difference between harmless pranks and wrong-doing. But they need to be reminded, and helped.

Christian Conduct

Lesson for November 2, 1947

CHRISTIAN standards of conduct must be understood as Christ's standards, not man's standards. Our lesson makes this quite clear when James declares:

Dr. Newton

not bridled, or the ship when it is not controlled.

Which brings the first practical lesson—that of the tongue. "The tongue is a little member," says James, "and boasteth great things. Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth!"

The Words I Say

IN PROVERBS 8:7, we read, "My mouth shall utter truth." And again in Proverbs 25:11, we read, "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver."

Which adds up to this: The words we say have much to do with what people think of our standard of conduct. If we speak words of truth and kindness, we need not be concerned what people will think of us.

Boys and girls who guard their tongues will have friends. Boys and girls who speak words of envy, prejudice and falsehood will be shunned.

The Right Words

WHAT is in our hearts determines what we say and do. Therefore, if we are to speak the right words, our hearts must be right—right with God.

I have just come from a playground where a group of junior boys and girls were having a picnic. I got there at the moment when a baseball game was in the decisive ninth inning. One of the junior boys was umpire. He called a pitched ball a strike, and the batter objected. Words followed—not altogether pleasing words. They saw me standing on the sidelines, and asked me to settle the matter. I had not seen the pitched ball closely enough to express an opinion.

The boy who had spoken most sharply went to the boy who was umpire, took his hand, and said, "It's okay with me. I am sorry I said what I did." That boy had the right attitude. He turned wrong words into right words, because his heart was right.

The Power of Words

"SPEAK not one against another," writes James, 4:11. Two teen-age girls were walking home from school. One spoke bitterly to the other of a third girl. They parted at the corner, and the girl who had spoken the bitter words of her neighbor slipped and fell as she passed the home of the girl about whom she had been speaking. The neighbor girl rushed to her side, helped her into the house where her mother dressed the ankle. Waiting for her father to come with the car, the girl who had spoken bitter words began to cry. Thinking that her neighbor was crying from the pain of the ankle, the girl who had been bitterly assailed spoke sympathetically to her neighbor.

"Will you forgive me?" cried out the distressed girl.
"Forgive you?"
"For the unkind words I spoke about you to Mary. O, I am sorry, sorry."
Forgiven, they became trusted friends.

Words Reflect Character

THIS lesson should summon every heart to utter the prayer of the Psalmist:

"Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my Redeemer," Psalm 19:14.

Our words reflect our character. Christ's standard of conduct calls for words wisely chosen. Longfellow put it well when he wrote:

*I shot an arrow into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For, so swiftly it flew, the sight
Could not follow it in its flight.*

*I breathed a song into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For who has sight so keen and strong,
That it can follow the flight of song?*

*Long, long afterward, in an oak,
I found the arrow still unbroke;
And the song from beginning to end,
I found again in the heart of a friend*

"Speaking Frankly"

James F. Byrnes, former secretary of state, has created something of a sensation with his new book, "Speaking Frankly," published recently and now being printed serially in numerous daily newspapers. He advises the greatest firmness in dealing with Russia, including the use of force, if necessary, to stop Soviet encroachments.

The former secretary still believes that the United Nations is our best—if not our only hope—for reconciling differences that exist between us and the Soviet Union. Referring to the difficulty of reaching agreements on peace terms for Germany, Mr. Byrnes said:

"The United States wants no separate peace, but if it is not possible to secure the cooperation of all nations, we should seek to enlist the assistance of as many as are willing to join in the task."

In that event, the program suggested by Byrnes is, in substance, as follows:

1. Call a general peace conference, and act with or without Russian agreement.
2. If a treaty with Germany should then be produced, put it up to the Soviet Union to withdraw her occupation troops.
3. If Russia should refuse to withdraw (from Germany and Austria) then take the matter to the United Nations as a threat to peace.
4. Seek to obtain a Security Council order directing the withdrawal of Russian occupation forces.
5. In the event that the Soviets defy the United Nations, be prepared to take "measures of last resort," presumably war.

Mr. Byrnes expressed the belief that Russia would not remain away from the peace conference on Germany and thus isolate herself from the rest of the world; also that he did not believe the Red Army would try to hold permanently to all Eastern Germany in the face of a United Nations directive to withdraw.

In this he appears to be unduly optimistic. Russia has shown no inclination to give up any European territory now occupied, but unmistakably seeks to expand more and more. We will be lucky to keep France and Italy from going Communist, and Greece and Turkey are by no means safe.

We may be able to confine Russia to the territory she now holds, but we could not do that if Stalin saw fit to wage a war of aggression. The Red Army is estimated to have more than 5,000,000 men under arms, with an air force vastly superior to ours in numbers.

Whether Russia may have the atomic bomb soon—or whether she has it now—we do not know. Referring to the bomb, Mr. Byrnes said:

"If Russia refuses to join in a treaty containing safeguards for the atom bomb (which she has repeatedly refused to do already) . . . we must use our best efforts to develop better bombs and more of them . . . This is a harsh judgment, but the nature of the weapon demands that we be realistic."

On this point at least, Mr. Byrnes is on solid ground.

Sidelights

It is a real jolt in every man's life when, after taking recommended vitamin pills in quantity, he finds he is still unable to face the day's task with the vim and vigor of other days that still remain fresh in his mind. Yep, it's tough.

Of course we don't believe it and you won't either but a farmer friend tells us that he has the laziest rooster in the world. "Why," he says, "he's so lazy he won't even crow. He just waits around for another rooster to crow and then he nods his head."

We are told of a prominent, though tactless guest at a swanky banquet recently, who when he found himself seated next to a Chinese gentleman, took special pains to be agreeable. After the first course, he asked: "Likee soupee?" There was no reply, just a genial beam. After the next course, he inquired: "Likee fishie?" Again, just a genial smile rewarded his question. Later in the evening, the guest from the Far East was presented for an address and delivered a masterpiece in perfect English. On resuming his seat, the Chinese turned to his neighbor and asked: "Likee speechie?"

Our beer-drinking readers might appreciate the story about the lovely girl and her handsome escort who entered a cocktail lounge recently. "My dear," said the man, "would you like a drink of champagne or a short beer?" In a cultivated voice, the girl replied, "I believe I prefer champagne. When I take a drink of champagne, I get dreamy; I imagine I'm a queen, sitting on a golden throne; a big handsome prince is beside me; he holds my hand and makes my head swim; hundreds of slaves appear at my call; I am in the seventh heaven of ecstasy. But when I drink beer—I burp."

An un-named editor is reported to have "pied" a couple of articles, one about a wedding and the other about a public sale. Thinking them only one article, he gathered the lines and printed them with this result: "Billie Smith and Texie Brownhill were disposed of at public auction at my farm, one mile east of a beautiful cluster of roses before a background of farm implements too numerous to mention in the presence of about 70 guests, including two milk cows, six mules and a bob sled. Rev. Baker tied the nuptial knot with 300 yards of hay wire and the bridal couple left on one John Deere gang plow for an extended trip, with terms to suit the purchasers."

Women IN THE CHURCH
by Mary Fowler

Church women in every state in the Union have been working during the summer months preparing boxes and bundles for school children in the war-devastated countries of Europe. This undertaking has been under the auspices of the United Council of Church Women, and will come to a climax on World Community Day, Nov. 7, when women will gather at union church services in their local communities and present these gifts. Mrs. Ruth M. Worrell, Council executive, has just returned from Europe and says that all the 500,000 boxes and bundles asked for from American church women are already "spoken for" on the continent and will not begin to fill the need. Now comes Church World Service, Inc., the welfare and relief agency of all Protestants, and says that it will continue to receive boxes and bundles for children and adults at its several centers and will ship them all winter to Europe and Asia. It asks church women and groups of women to continue to gather food and clothing.

Rayon Plastics

A recent development in the use of rayon is in the manufacture of an increasing variety of rayon laminated plastics which may be utilized in the molding of articles such as cabinets, table tops, trays, machine parts, household utensils, and a large number of other products. Rayon laminated plastics consist of a number of layers of resin treated fabrics or fibrous mats laid together and pressed into a compact bonded plate or molded article. For special applications where major strength is needed in one direction in the laminate, unidirectional high-tensile rayon fabrics possess particular merit. For other applications a square or twill weave will be found more desirable.

Household Hints

When making beet pickles, use only a good cider or fruit vinegar to maintain the bright red color.

A box of ordinary correspondence cards makes an excellent file for your recipes.

Never wash your best china in boiling hot water, as the heat tends to mar the glazed finish.

A pail of water in a freshly painted room will help remove the odor.

Thick frost slows down the cooling of foods, so watch the frost line in your refrigerator freezing compartment.

Place popcorn in the refrigerator before popping it. This creates moisture and makes the corn pop better.

The next time you dust meat with flour before frying, try using pancake flour instead of the regular product.

Two thin coats of paint give better results than one thick coat. Sandpaper lightly between coats.

For pressing dark wool clothes use a piece of dark wool next to the clothing and a dampened cotton cloth on top.

Before cutting out garments on the dining table, spread the asbestos mat on the table to avoid marring it.

Don't throw away your lemon rinds. Save them to use in the water in which dish towels are boiled to help remove stains.

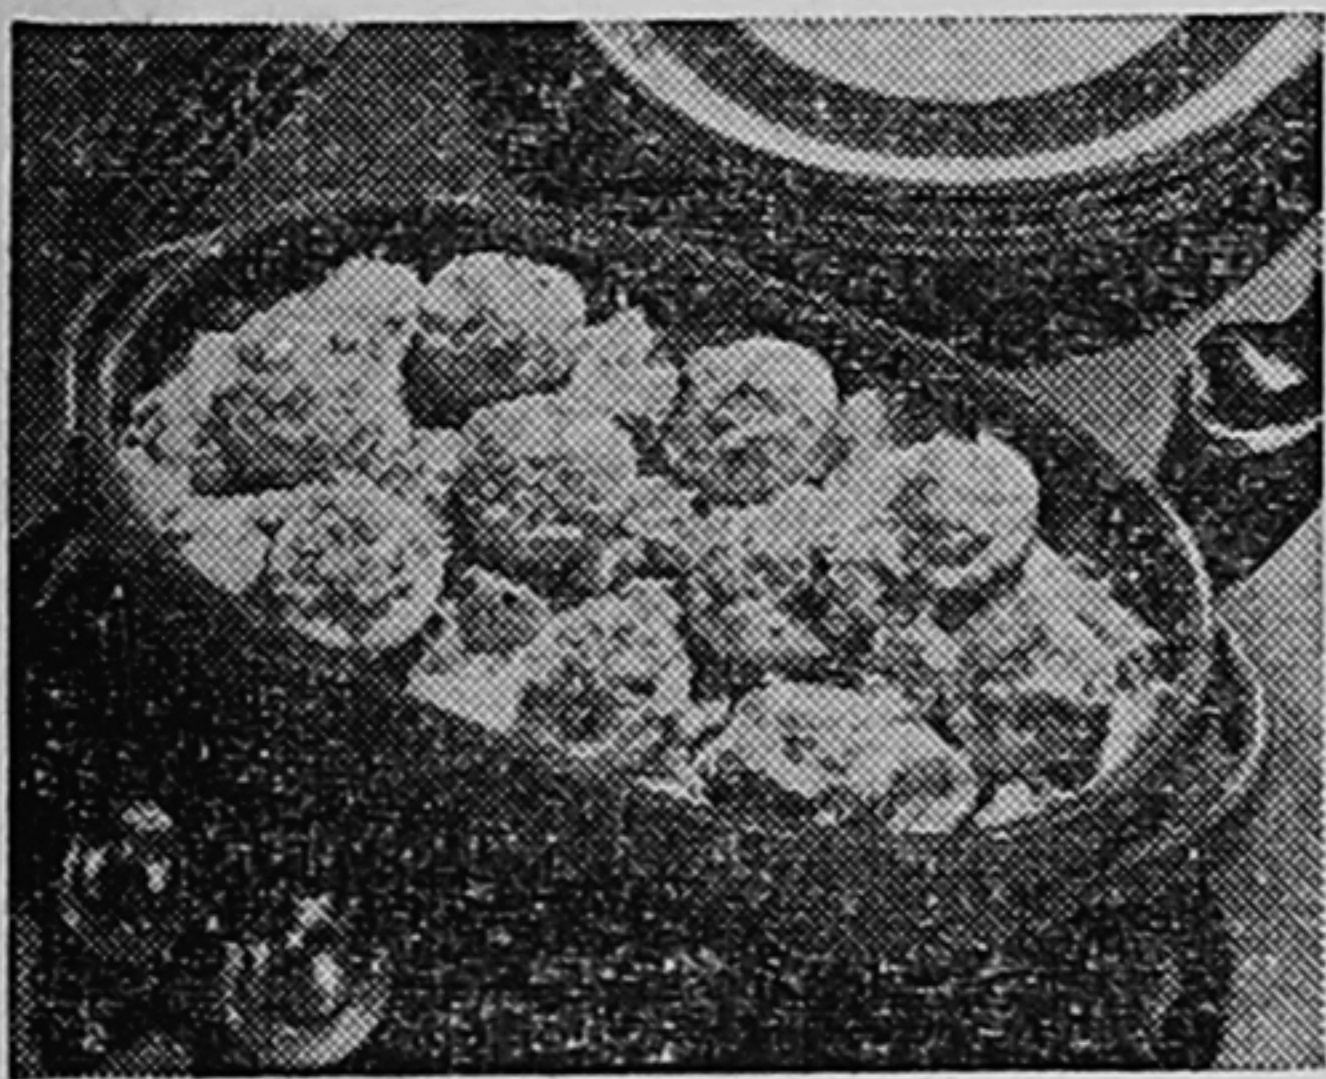

To remove water marks on furniture, rub the spot with a damp cloth on which a few drops of ammonia or spirits of camphor have been sprinkled.

Go over the clothesrack with sandpaper and rub down any splinters that may be on the bars. One small splinter can ruin a pair of nylon or silk hose.

A handy pin cushion for the wrist can be made by sewing the ends of an elastic band to a small pin cushion. It's handy when pinning down patterns or pinning up hems.

Deviled Egg - Noodles Casserole Tasty Dish

"Folks will be asking for the recipe after they've tasted this deviled egg and noodle casserole," says Marjorie Griffin, Rural Home editor of Capper's Farmer, one of the leading farm magazines.

"You'll tell them there's no trick to making it," she writes in the magazine read by 1,300,000 farm families.

DEVILED EGGS AND NOODLES

- 2 c. uncooked noodles
- 6 hard-cooked eggs
- 2 tsp. mayonnaise
- 1 tsp. vinegar
- 1/4 tsp. paprika
- 1/2 tsp. dry mustard
- Salt and pepper
- 4 tsp. butter
- 1 tsp. flour
- 1 tsp. salt
- 2 c. milk
- 1 c. cheese cracker crumbs
- 2 tsp. melted butter

Drop noodles into boiling salted water and cook until tender. Drain in strainer and rinse with cold water. Place in buttered casserole or six individual baking dishes. Cut eggs in half. Remove and mash yolks, mix in mayonnaise, vinegar, paprika, mustard, salt and pepper. Fill egg whites and place on top of noodles. To make white sauce, melt butter, blend in flour and salt. Add milk and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Pour sauce over eggs and noodles. Top with crumbs mixed with melted butter. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 20 minutes. Six servings.

Madam, what do you mean by letting your child snatch off my wig?

Sir, if it is just a wig, think nothing of it. I was afraid that the little devil had scalped you.

Yes, said Sally, and He knows where the money is coming from, too. I heard Daddy say so.

An Englishman lost his way tramping in the Highlands. After rambling for hours he spied a shepherd. Hoy! he shouted, I'm lost.

Course not.

Well, said the Scot, ye're still lost.

A girl from a big city, helping with the harvest, complained that a bull kept looking at her in a somewhat menacing manner.

I expect, said the farmer, that it's on account of that red froek you're wearing.

Oh, said the girl, I know it's terribly out of fashion, but just fancy that—a conuntry bull noticing it.

What does this expression, 'Sez you,' mean? asked the British judge.

My lord, the clerk replied, "it appears that this is a slang expression of American origin which has gained regrettable currency in the language of our people through the insidious agency of the cinema, and is, I am led to understand, employed to indicate a state of dubiety in the mind of the speaker as to the veracity or credibility of a statement made to him."

Oh, yeah! said the judge.

Sam's a Matrimony Expert

Sam Abernathy never intended to be a matrimony expert, but he hit the nail on the head the other day when he said:

"What marriage really needs is more open minds and a lot fewer open mouths."

Sam may not think much of his missus' choice of hats or her habit of serving watercress and cream cheese salad. But he keeps his mouth shut (I mean, he just uses it to eat the salad). And the missus never criticizes Sam's affection for that worn-out chair before the fire, and his mellow glass of beer and pipe at the end of a long day.

From where I sit, that prescription would apply to most human relationships. Criticism rarely rouses anything but resentment. But an open mind—whether it's applied to a woman's choice of hats, or a husband's preference for a pipe and a moderate glass of beer or two—leads to the conclusion that there's right on both sides.

SHORT STORY

Mrs. Halligan Expects

By M. J. COLLINS

A NASTY spring blizzard whipped over the county from the east, then swung around into the west and came charging back with a cold viciousness. Every road in the county was smothered in white oblivion. We were gathered around the huge box stove in Jed's general store. A bunch of old coots were swapping tall tales and reminiscing about other storms.

"She's a gosh almighty blow," Old Enoch Siltan took his pipe out of his mouth. "Sure raising hob with everything. Hate to be livin' on a back road and get sick."

"I'll say," Frank Hayes agreed. "You'd be hard put to get a doctor in now. This'd be about the time Mrs. Halligan would have another baby. It seems to me she always has them at just about the worst time of the year."

"The Halligans got too many kids." Old Enoch growled as if it were a personal affront. "They're running around like rabbits."

"Say, listen!" Frank Hayes exclaimed. "I hear sleigh bells." Sure enough we heard them above the storm.

"That's Curt Evans from up Halligan's way," I said as the man hollered "Whoa!" to the heaving, sweating team. We noticed a large bundle of blankets and covers in the back of the sleigh.

"Here's a list of groceries," Curt handed a slip of paper to Jed. He pulled up a chair and sat down, rolling himself a fat cigarette.

"Mrs. Halligan expectin'?" Frank opened the conversation cautiously. Curt is a big fellow, sort of saturnine. He lives all alone and you can never quite tell how he's going to take your questions.

Curt finally nodded. "Old man Halligan's sort of put out about it too. Says something always goes wrong with their figgerin'. He was hoping to have a spell of nice weather and now he's laid up with the flu."

"How many kids they got now?" Old Enoch growled. "Ten or eleven?"

Curt started counting them off on his fingers. "Edith, Judy, Ray—" and so on. "I don't know," he finally admitted.

The Halligan farm is next to Curt's so if anyone should know how many little Halligans there are, Curt's the man.

WE FIGURED he had come down to meet the train, it generally got to the village about twenty. Old Doc Horner would be aboard and Curt would drive him out to the Halligan's place swathed in the blankets we'd noticed in the sleigh.

Jed phoned across to the station and was told the train would be half an hour late.

Curt relaxed again. He had been getting ready to go and harness the horses in order to have them all set when the train arrived.

You can never quite tell how Curt is going to take your questions.

The talk went right back to babies. You would have been surprised to hear we knew so much about the subject.

"Think you'll have any trouble getting back over the road?" Frank asked Curt.

"I hope not. I want to get back as fast as possible."

The shrill whistle of the train sounded faintly.

"Well," Curt said, rising and reaching for his coat. "Guess it's time to harness up. Got them groceries, Jed?"

I went back to the stable with him to help. By the time the train got in he had the team ready and the groceries stowed away safely. We drove over to the station and loaded several perforated cardboard boxes full of peep-peeping yellow chicks onto the sleigh. Curt covered them carefully with the numerous blankets and covers we thought had been to wrap around Doc Horner. Then he indicated the store with his thumb.

"You can tell the boys that what Mrs. Halligan expected has arrived—all four hundred of them." He grinned at me as he drove away.
