Mrs. R. Young Hostess to Missionary Society

The Fairfield Missionary society met at the home of Mrs. Russell Young on November 12.

The devotions were in charge of Mrs. T. N. Shurts who read a sermon by Dr. Holland on Faith.

The missionary topic "Through All the World," was given by Mrs. Logan Akers.

The business meeting was conducted by the president, Mrs. James Church, after which three boxes were packed with Christmas gifts brought by the members.

A large box of toys, books and games for the Witherspoon Mission school, at Buckhorn, Ky.; a box of miscellaneous Christmas gifts for Rosalie Hallon, a teacher at Cow Creek, Ky.; a box of candy for mountain children in Kentucky. This last was bought by the members instead of having the usual Christmas gift exchange. Also it was voted to send a Christmas gift of $10 to the Kemerer Orphanage at Assumption, Ill.

After the meeting all adjourned to the dining room where a delicious salad course was served by the hostess, to ten members and five guests.

The December meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Ira Laverick.

Letters To The Editor

Chicago, Nov. 19, 1947.
Dear Joe: How do you like my fish story? I caught these in Chesapeake Bay last summer when I was visiting Uncle Dave. Sincerely, Kent Harden.

(Editor's Note: Congratulations, Kent. I have counted eight fish in the picture you sent. Although you and I have not had any luck on the three occasions we went fishing north of Broadlands, I still have hopes that we may land some fish next time we go.)

Illinois State Capitol News

An increase of 1,073 persons in the welfare institutions of Illinois during the twelve months ending Nov. 1, brings the total population of these places to 46,092, according to Cassius Poust, director of public welfare.

The greatest increase, 740 patients, occurred in nine mental hospitals. These hospitals are now treating 33,066 patients.

Recently completed studies of archaeological material dug up last summer on the summit of Starved Rock strongly tend to confirm history's belief that the Rock was the site of Fort St. Louis, French frontier stronghold established by La Salle in 1682.

Vari-colored beads, metal hatchet blades, knives, gun parts, musket balls, and evidence of large structures were uncovered by an expedition in the Starved Rock area, supervised by Dr. John C. McGregor of the Illinois State museum.

External violence of one kind or another, including accidents, suicide and homicide, caused 3,211 deaths in Illinois during the first six months of this year, according to Dr. Roland R. Cross, state director of public health.

Accidents were responsible for 2,594 of these violent deaths. Of this number 732 were caused by motor vehicle accidents; 572 by other public accidents; and 347 by occupational accidents. Only four diseases, cancer, heart disease, cerebral hemorrhage, and nephritis, accounted for more deaths than were caused by accidents.

Staff Sgt. Bosch Is "Soldier of the Week"

The following article concerning Staff Sgt. Ralph A. Bosch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Bosch, is copied in part, from EUCOM, Special Services Shopper, published at Bad Nauheim, Germany. The paper, published by the Technical Information Branch, carries a front page picture of Sgt. Bosch and is a "Soldier of the Week" edition. The article is entitled, "Nothing But the Best."

"Some soldiers pass in review; others stand out. They look smart, salute smart, are smart. This is the American Army we are proud of—the best dressed, best kept up army in the world.

This month—a salute—to "the soldier of the week" from all PXs throughout EUCOM, over 200 established to serve the American soldier during the occupation.

Meet our soldier of the week—twenty year old Staff Sgt. Ralph A. Bosch from Broadlands, Illinois. For his neat appearance and military bearing, he was selected in a competitive formal Guard Mount at Frankfurt to become an enlisted aide to Lt. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner for a one-week period, 9 to 15 October.

Reviving an old army custom of selecting GIs to act as aides, representatives of any unit may appear before the inspecting officer and O. D. for consideration in the competitive contests which are held on Wednesdays at formal guard mounts.

In addition to all this, the aide gets a three-day pass and top priority on the Headquarters Command quotas for the weekend Swiss tours or the Garmisch and Berchtesgaden Leave Center weekends.

It is an honor to be chosen an aide; but the whole joy of it lies in the everyday satisfaction of living up to your best in being a good soldier.

"That really is the reward, and that about sums up what it takes to be an aide, too," Staff Sgt. Bosch says. "Of course, when you pick only one man a week, not every GI can be selected, but there are a lot of good soldiers that qualify."

It is to all these soldiers, along with Sgt. Bosch, that EC PXs in November extend their "soldier of the week" salute.

Chicago Stock Show Opening on Nov. 29

Final preparations are being made for the opening of the nation's largest live stock show in Chicago Nov. 29.

Show officials promise that the 1947 International Live Stock Exposition and Horse Show, which will continue through December 6 in the International Amphitheatre at the Chicago Stock Yards, will be one of the greatest in its 47 year history. Final returns on entries indicate that a number of departments will be larger and more impressive than ever.

Long known as the final court of judging for live stock, this year's Exposition is attracting from the furthestmost regions of the continent, the finest farm animals that breeders and stockmen can produce.

Sixty-three well known stockmen, packers and agricultural college specialists from 18 states have the task of choosing winners among the expected 12,000 animals which will be shown. Heading the judges' panel is Richard S. de Quincey, of Hereford, England, an internationally recognized breeder and stockman who will judge all the individual steer classes.

De Quincey's final task will be that of selecting the grand champion steer out of the several thousand which will be exhibited. The International grand champion steer is the most celebrated bovine winner of the year and the contest arouses more interest than any other show competition.

Champaign County Corn Averages 39 Bushels

Official announcements indicate that Champaign county corn production averaged 39 bushels per acre, soybeans 20 bushels, wheat 30 bushels, and oats 32 bushels.

Reported by A. J. Surratt, agricultural statistician, the yields showed little change from the estimates made in late September, although in the case of both soybeans and corn, the figures represented a sharp gain over the midsummer reports.

Twenty-two counties exceeded Champaign in the per acre yield of soybeans, averaging from 21 to a high of 23 bushels, although the county production because of the large acreage stands at the top in over-all production.

Christian and Macon counties, both claimants to the title of soybean capital of the state, averaged 19 and 18 bushels respectively.

About thirty counties exceeded Champaign's 39 bushel average for corn production, with most of the heavy per acre yields in counties in the northeast part of the state. Rainfall at the start of the growing season accounts for the higher yield.

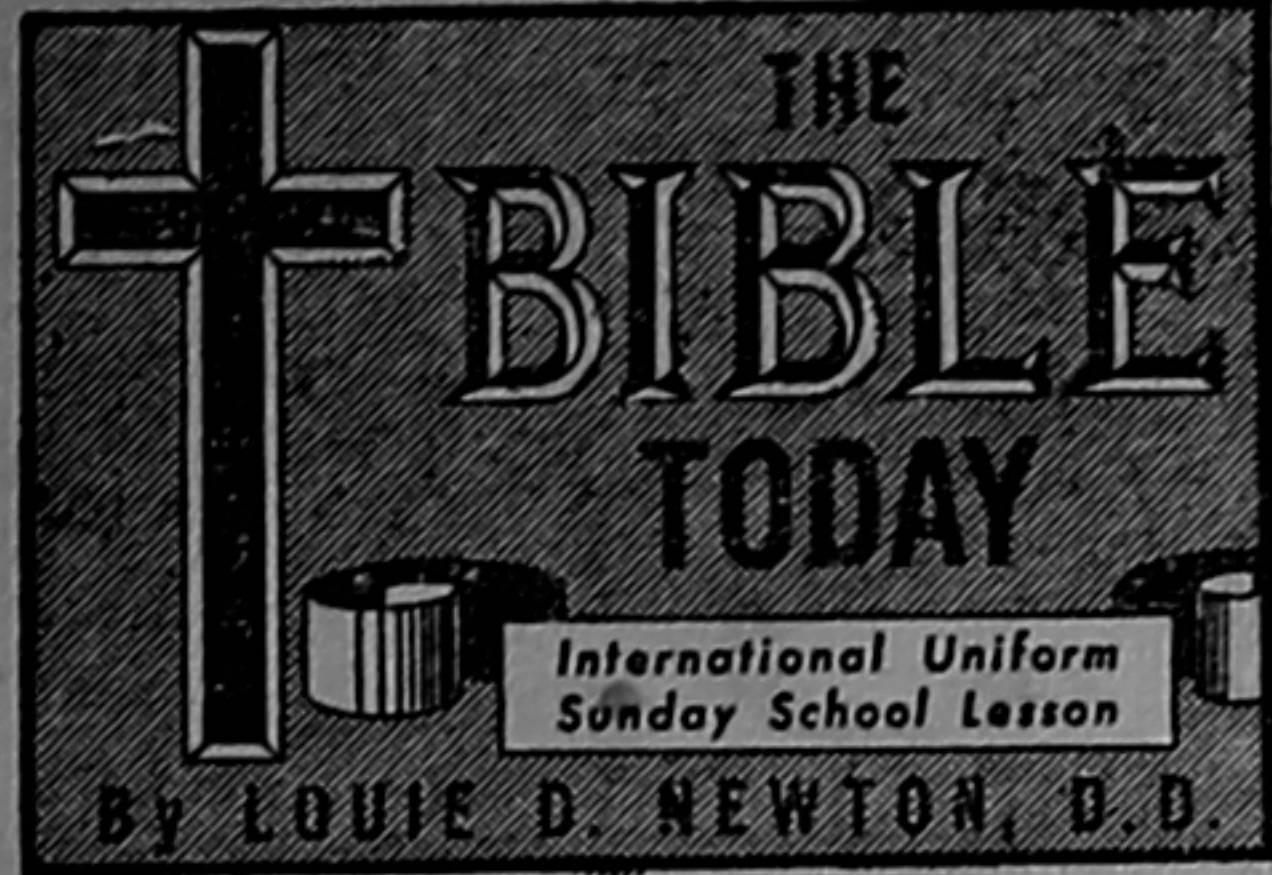

Iroquois, Vermilion, Edgar, Douglas, Piatt, DeWitt and McLean had higher yields, although with the exception of Vermilion county, soybean averages were below that for Champaign.

SCRIPTURE: I John 4-5; II John; Acts 4:1-13.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Romans 8:1-11.

Proof of a Christian

Lesson for November 30, 1947

OPEN your Bible to I John 4-5; Second John; and Acts 4:1-13, and you will have the Scripture background for Sunday's lesson. Add to the above passages Romans 8:1-11, as devotional reading, and you will be thinking of the unimpeachable proofs of a Christian.

Two men are brought before us as examples of Christian discipleship.

Peter and John had been preaching Christ to the people in Jerusalem, and they were arrested and brought before the Sanhedrin. The rulers and priests scolded them, asking by what power or name they had done this. Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, answered them:

"Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole. . . . Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

And then follows the verse that reveals the proof that these humble fishermen were really Christians: "Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus."

The Lord Is My Helper

IN HEBREWS 13:6, we find this revealing statement: "The Lord is my helper; I will not fear."

The more we study the words of John in Sunday's lesson—words that remind us again and again that God is love, that we love him because he first loved us, that when we love him we are made strong in serving him, the clearer we come to understand the incident in Acts 4:1-13, when Peter and John stood boldly before the Sanhedrin, impressing the court with the fact that they had been with Jesus.

They were not afraid because they were conscious of the presence and power of God. The Psalmist put it sublimely when he said, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want."

When We Walk With God

THE incontestable proof of a Christian is the manner of life he reveals when he walks with God. "And this is love, that we walk after his commandments. This is the commandment, that, as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it," II John 6. When we walk with God, in the light of his word, what a glory he sheds on our way!

A group of men sat in the University Club in Boston, discussing religion. Someone asked Professor William James to define Christianity.

"I will not attempt a definition of Christianity, but I can give you an illustration."

And he pointed to Phillips Brooks. There was no argument. Phillips Brooks was proof positive that Christianity is something vital and practical and real and effective in everyday life.

Who Is a Christian?

WE COME now to the question which always emerges when we think along this line, Who is a Christian? Look now at I John 4:15-21. I quote some of these revealing words:

"Whoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God. And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him."

We are not certified as Christians by any man-made creed, nor by any ritual or ceremony. We are certified as Christians by the direct access which every soul may have with God, through Jesus Christ our Great High Priest forever.

Church membership does not make us Christians. Baptism does not make us Christians.

Anyone may become a Christian, provided he or she is willing to confess their utter lost estate and, repenting of sin, believe on the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour and Redeemer. Christ is the Author and the Finisher of our salvation. There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved.

"Whoever will may come."

DC-6 Planes Grounded

All the big DC-6 passenger planes now in use have been laid up indefinitely, because two of them recently caught fire in the air for reasons not yet determined. About three weeks ago one of them crashed in flames in Utah, killing all 52 persons on board. Last week another caught fire near Gallup, N. M., but fortunately was landed without injury to passengers or crew.

President Truman's new plane in which he flew to Brazil recently, is a DC-6, and it was also placed out of commission until any defects can be found and corrected.

A great many planes have caught fire in flight at various times without any apparent reason, and it is certainly time that aeronautical engineers should concentrate their efforts on devising means of preventing such tragic occurrences.

Flying is beset with many hazards at best, and it seems criminal to permit planes with inherent defects to be operated. Surely American engineering skill should be equal to the task of producing safer aircraft.

Margarine Taxes

We don't know what measures for controlling the cost of living will be proposed by President Truman or enacted by the special session of congress.

But we know one simple measure, long overdue, that would help materially: Repeal the federal taxes on margarine.

There is no respectable reason for these taxes. Their sole purpose is to protect the butter business—to make margarine cost consumers more than it should and to make its use needlessly inconvenient.

Each margarine manufacturer must pay a federal license fee of $600 a year, plus a tax of one-fourth cent on each pound of uncolored margarine he sells. His tax for selling colored margarine would be a prohibitive 10 cents a pound. That's why housewives can't buy yellow margarine, but must work the coloring matter in at home.

The government charges the wholesalers $200 a year, retailers $6, for the privilege of selling white margarine. If they sold it colored, wholesalers would have to pay $480 a year, retailers $48.

There are no similar federal taxes on other foods. Even with these taxes, which are a rank discrimination against margarine, it sells for about half the price of butter. But it would be cheaper still if the taxes and fees were taken off.

Many bills to take taxes off have been introduced in recent sessions of congress, but were blocked by influence of the butter lobby. The special session offers a grand opportunity to get rid of them.

The American Sucker

On next December 5 there will be a boxing bout in Madison Square Garden, New York City. Joe Louis, heavyweight champion of the world, will defend his title against Joe Walcott. Twenty-five thousand persons will pay up to $30 each for admission.

The gate will run into seven figures, and both Louis and the challenger will be paid more money than the average man could earn in several lifetimes for taking part in an exhibition which is not expected to last more than a few three-minute rounds.

Instead of being a worthwhile exhibition in the manly art of self-defense, this will be largely hoop-la, and a majority of those who pay good money to get inside will expect little more. Walcott will be pictured as a possible new world champion, Joe Louis as in a decline.

In some respects the American people are fall guys. Otherwise they would not be so eager to fatten the purses of a couple of pugilists and add to the wealth of crafty promoters. But a segment of the population will continue to pay up to $30 to see a $2 show, if for no other reason than to be able to boast having seen another so-called championship battle.

Sidelights

How times change. Not too many years ago it was said that a man spent more time and gave more consideration to the automobile he purchased than he did to the woman he married. Now, it seems, he exercises no more caution in the purchase of a car than he does in selecting a bride. Both processes are running neck and neck, so we are told.

Here is a story that brings a chuckle from any football fan. It seems that a couple took their young offspring to a game recently and although every play was full of excitement, the thing that caught the eye of this future gridiron star was the antics of the cheer leaders. That night after the little fellow had been dressed for bed, his mother went in to hear his prayer. There he was, standing in the middle of the bed swinging his arms and shouting: "God bless Mama. God Bless Papa. God bless sister. Rah, Rah, Rah!"

A friend describes the demise of his long-faithful motor vehicle: "I no longer have an automobile. What happened to it has been explained to me in technical language but the details escape me. I was driving peacefully down the highway, when suddenly something that sounded like a machine-gun broke loose under the hood. I stopped as soon as I could, but just before the stop there was a clank like a freight car bumping against its brother, and clouds of blue smoke puffed out both sides. There was an ominous hissing. I got out of there. For the last 100 yards I had traveled, there was a wide wet streak on the pavement and assorted liquids were still squirting out here and there. Strung about on the road were odd bits of automobile. As I watched, the thing would hiss and puff and spew out a chunk of iron from time to time. Then it was still. All was at an end." And with automobiles priced as they are today—what a headache he must have.

Household Hints

Before shampooing your hair apply cold cream around eyes to prevent soap getting into them.

Place a rubber jar ring or towel under a chopping bowl when preparing food. This will steady the bowl and allow easier handling.

When making children's dresses, make a wide tuck on the underside of the hem. Dresses are then easy to lengthen, and the tuck does not show.

When storing meat in freezer lockers butcher only one animal at a time. This will provide meat for a longer period and will give you a chance to use it before it becomes old.

Do not stuff your Thanksgiving turkey too compactly because the roasting process may cause the turkey to burst. Over-packing will also make the dressing soggy.

SHORT STORIES
Legacy For Lucy
By MAUDE NORMAN

WHEN John Grahame brought a wife home from England, everyone in Glencove wondered how long the marriage would last.

I had known him ever since he was a spoiled youngster who thought it was fun to see his dog chase my cat. But after I had caught him out in back of the woodshed one day, preparing to set fire to one of my cat's kittens, he had dipped in kerosene, he left me and my cats alone, because I picked up a stick and gave him the thrashing he deserved.

John must have told Lucy some terrible tales about me because she acted scared to death of me at first. But she soon found out I wouldn't bite and we became good friends. That is, good as could be expected with John disliking me. She would run over sometimes when he wasn't home. When I went over there, I would sit by the front window where I could see him coming and duck out before he reached the house.

"I wasn't afraid of him, but I didn't want him hollering at her. She had it hard enough, poor child."

Judge Arnold's mother had come from the same place in England Lucy was from and they became good friends. Lucy could not spare time from her sewing to go away very often, so old Mrs. Arnold would come every week to visit her. Lucy always asked me to come over too. I'd take a plate of cookies with me so there would be something to serve with the usual cup of tea. That was one time John did not object to my being in his house. The fact that the richest woman in town was a friend of his wife overshadowed even my presence.

I had been taking care of Mrs. Arnold and before she died she told me she was leaving Lucy enough money so she would not have to work any more.

I didn't dare upset her by telling her John Grahame would take every penny for himself, so after thinking about it I went to see Judge Arnold and the doctor.

AT FIRST John was speechless when he heard Lucy was to receive a hundred dollars a month. Then he started making plans. "Now I can buy a decent car," he exclaimed, ignoring the fact, as I knew he would, that the money was Lucy's. "A hundred dollars every month. Oh, boy!"

The Judge cleared his throat. "The money is to be paid to your wife, Lucy Grahame, on the first day of every month—" he paused impressively—"as long as she lives."

John sat down heavily. "You mean if she dies—the money stops." The Judge nodded gravely.

But you're well, aren't you, Honey," John cried. I'll wager that was the first time he had called her "Honey" in a long time. "You're fine, aren't you?"

Lucy lay back against the pillow, looking very wan. "I feel terrible," she faltered. "I'm so weak and tired."

"But that's because of the flu, isn't it, doctor?" John asked anxiously. "Tell her she'll be all right." I held my breath, then relaxed at the doctor's answer. "Your wife will need the utmost care in the future, Mr. Grahame," he said soberly. "She must not do anything that will tire her under any consideration."

"I'll take care of her," John exclaimed. "Anything you want done, Honey, just tell me."

The doctor's face remained perfectly blank, but if the Judge had been a less dignified man, I would have declared he winked at me.

I enjoy sitting watching John cut grass and do the chores Lucy had done for so long. She insisted he make a garden and keep it in order. He treats her very differently than he did before. He watches her like a hen with one chick. She understands his solicitude. He is afraid she might die and he would lose the hundred dollars a month. But she enjoys having him wait on her.

Sometimes I wonder what he would say if he knew Mrs. Arnold had left Lucy the money in a lump sum. I don't believe he would appreciate the interpretation we gave the will.

A Speech Was Made

A letter came to my desk a few weeks ago containing one paragraph that astonished me. It read: "At the church conference held in this southern district a speech was made against the profit motive." That any American group, particularly a religious group, should raise its voice against the profit motive struck me as amazing.

To get rid of the profit motive, you would have to find some substitute for economics in modern civilization. You would have to eliminate all trading and marketing, buying and selling. You would have to get rid of money and other mediums of exchange. You would have to cease bartering and swapping. In fact, you would have to reduce your modern civilization to self-sufficiency of the individual.

Only Two Ways
A modern and complicated civilization like our own could not do without trade, exchange, manufacturing, raw materials and production. You just have to ask more than it cost you. That is what profit means. And without the profit motive, trade and commerce would die.

There are only two ways that an economy may operate. In America individuals own farms, stores, factories, and run them for the chief purpose of making enough profit to live on. The other way is for government to own everything, operating all production merely for the purpose of feeding the people and supplying what it thinks are their needs.

Compare the Two!
The profit motive is the very foundation of our American way of life. It is the constitutional way in our country. It has produced more enthusiasm, finer cooperation, and a greater abundance of clothing, food, housing, and transportation than the masses of the people have ever known in any other country.

The other kind of economy, owned and operated by the government, attempts to do away with the profit motive. Actually, it does away with incentives, individual initiative, and efficiency. This kind of economy soon settles down to a "what's-the-use" status, offering only the barest necessities to its people. Russia is a good example of this. Russia has attempted to substitute other enthusiasms for those of owning property and making profit, but she has found that whenever she wanted increased industrial output she had to imitate some of the incentives that are so common in America.

Advance Agents?
The very concepts of freedom of the individual spring from the Bible. Therein you will find the foundation for the freedoms and liberties that America has built upon. I am unable to explain why church leaders are willing to attack the profit motive. To do so indicates tremendous misunderstanding of the American way of life, of our constitutional government, and the freedoms of the individual.

Let us not confuse greed and sin with the profit motive. There is nothing un-Christian, nor anti-social, in fair and honest buying and selling and trading. One who is against the profit motive is in reality opposed to ownership of property, for when the profit motive is taken away, the right to own things must go with it. It is high time for some of our religious people to start thinking through these things. Doing this, perhaps they would refuse to be used as advance agents of socialism and communism.

Uncle Sam Says

This is the time of year when the "shop early for Christmas" signs begin to take on meaning which will grow day by day until the happy day actually is here. You could do no better than to put savings bonds at the top of your gift list for someone in your own family circle or a dear friend. U. S. Savings Bonds are truly the gift that is thrice blessed—when it is given, when it is received and when it matures 10 years hence at the rate of $4 for every $3 invested.

Smile Awhile

Mike—The trouble with Casey is he has no backbone.
Pat—Faith, he has backbone enough if he'd only bring it to the front.

Excuse me, officer, said the meek-looking little man to the cop, but I've been waiting here for my wife for over half an hour. Would you be good enough to order me to move on?

Little Willie, home from school, Where he'd learned the Golden Rule, Said, "If I eat up this cake Sis won't have a stomach-ache."

A visitor to west Texas reports this conversation he heard while passing through the Lone Star State:

Say, Clem, have you met that new lawyer, Higgins?
Well, we've howdied but we haven't shook.

A friend was visiting a wealthy and very portly acquaintance one day. The stout chap was wearing a bath robe with enormous checks and a number inscribed on each check.

What's the idea, the friend inquired.
I'll show you, offered the rich man. Summoning a butler, he yawned and ordered: "Jeeves, scratch No. 23!"

Now, said the preacher to the Sunday school class, "can any of you tell me the name of an immense place where huge golden pillars rise high above you; where the air is perfumed and there is soft music? The place where we all go to if we are good?" He stopped and beamed with delight at the eager faces before him. Then, with one accord: "The pictures!" chorused the class.

Dear, remarked young Mrs. G.I., here's something interesting. It's reported here that the U. S. treasury says that a dollar bill lasts nine months.

G.I. said nothing, but a thoughtful expression stole over his countenance.
Darling, he finally exclaimed, you'd like to be patriotic, wouldn't you?
Why, certainly, dear, she replied.
Then, said her husband, very gently and very persuasively, won't you please try to avoid making the government out a liar?

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh
Ma Hoskins Sneezed at Cats!
Ma Hoskins couldn't understand why she got a fit of sneezing every time Harpo, the cat, came in the room. Finally figured she'd have to get rid of Harpo altogether.
Then Doc Hollister explained she had an "allergy." Cat's fur made her sneeze like strawberries give some folks rash. He gave her an inoculation so she and Harpo could live sneezelessly together.
I guess a lot of us have "allergies" in the social sense. Some folks just can't stand movies, or radio comedians. Other folks don't go for beer. Myself, I enjoy a moderate glass of beer or two with friends... but it's up to them what beverage they choose.
From where I sit, the important thing is not to let our social allergies result in antisocial taboos. Let's not criticize the fellow who likes beer if we like cider. A little inoculation of tolerance can help us live-and-let-live happily together.

SHORT STORY
Irascible Darling
By NICHOLAS KUSHTA

GENERALLY Paul Brown was pictured as an irascible man with the customary vile temper. The graying hair to match his age and furrowed brows cutting deeply into his forehead gave him a forbidding appearance. Now the picture was altogether different and he sat back in a comfortable chair and let his age creep over his body in a nice relaxed position.

On the veranda, sitting on the swing, his daughter Hilda turned toward her fiance and said, "He is an irascible darling," and Paul Brown knew they were talking about him.

He didn't mean to eavesdrop but sometimes eavesdropping did some good. Paul Brown had been so intent on gathering up the loose ends of his father's business that he had gone on and made a fortune out of a near bankrupt estate. But then Martha, his wife, had died and he had withdrawn into himself. Only his daughter's plans for an elopement had roused him from his forgetting world and made him realize what an ogre he had been, especially about Hilda and her young man.

ONE week to the day he had been sitting here dreaming when he heard Hilda making her plans with that young Jack Farnam.

There had been words and Hilda had stormily left and gone up to her room. Jack had turned and walked down the steps.

The next night Paul Brown couldn't sleep. He could hear the young folks on the porch again but Jack's voice had certainly changed, seemed a lot huskier. After a while he realized that it wasn't Jack on the porch with Hilda.

"I can't bear it at home," Hilda was saying. "I can't take it any longer. Take me away."

There was only one thing Paul Brown could do. That was to get Jack Farnam and put a stop to this nonsense his daughter was planning.

He met Jack in the bushes in front of the house. "Hilda's going to elope," he gasped.

"I thought you said she was dying," Jack accused. "We're through you know. If she wants to elope, let her go ahead."

"I thought you wanted to marry her."

"I do," Jack protested, "but I haven't a decent job. Mr. Brown, I know how you feel about relatives in your business and all that, but I know just what you need in your engineering department. Your production methods are old-fashioned now and if you would put in a conveyor belt on the style I've designed, it would pay for itself in a short time."

"This is a fine time to be talking about a job when my daughter is

"Blasted hayfever." He was seized with a fit of sneezing. about to run away!" Mr. Brown sneezed. "Blasted hayfever!" He was seized with a violent fit of sneezing.

JACK shook the old man. "There's Hilda on the porch with a bag," he whispered. "There's a man coming up the road."

The shouts and the commotion frightened Hilda and she ran back into the house. The fellow turned and ran back to his car.

The next evening Jack Farnam called on Hilda and they made their plans. Jack had gotten the job in the engineering department of Paul Brown's plant.

Paul Brown snorted; "Eloping one night and marrying another man the next."

"I'm glad Jack was there to help you. It got him a job and everything's fine now. We're going to be married in a short while."

"But," her father persisted, "who was that fellow you were going to elope with?"

"Oh, that," Hilda laughed until the tears ran. "That was Jack's older brother."

"Hmph!" Paul Brown turned into the house.

"He's such an irascible darling," Hilda told Jack.

Fast Driving Main Cause of Crashes

Driving too fast is the leading cause of motor vehicle accidents in Illinois, according to the state division of highways. This conclusion was reached after studying approximately 9,000 accidents during the current year, which resulted in 284 deaths and 3,578 injured persons.

Driving on the wrong side of the road, confusion in emergencies, and failure to signal properly are listed as other causes of accidents.

Bill Overturf Suffers Injuries to Fingers

Tuscola, Nov. 21—Bill Overturf, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Overturf, remained in Jarman hospital Friday receiving treatment for a badly injured right hand received in a farm accident Wednesday evening.

Overturf received three mashed fingers when his hand was caught in a corn picker as he attempted to douse a fire in the machinery.

Oak Grove Farmer Injured In Picker

Oak Grove, Nov. 21—Chester Crowley, 50-year-old Oak Grove farmer, received a badly crushed hand when the hand was caught in a corn picker Thursday. He was taken to Burnham city hospital, Champaign, from the Howard Williams farm, where the accident occurred.

Keeps Buildings Cool

Although it has been well established through demonstration that the use of white or light colored paint on exterior walls can reduce the surface temperature in direct sunlight approximately 15 degrees, relatively little attention has been given to the fact that similar painting of roofs can increase summer comfort of occupants of homes and other buildings. There is now a growing advocacy of the use of aluminum paint, which has excellent adhesive and covering power, on roofs of almost all kinds of material, including slate, composition shingles, as well as metal and wood. It might be concluded that a building so protected in summer would be similarly colder in winter, but paint authorities explain that this is not so. The reason is that the cooling effect is principally in direct sunlight, the incidence of which averages much less in winter than in summer. Also, moisture is a conductor of heat and cold and the sealing of surfaces in winter is equivalent to added insulation.

Swedes Celebrate 800th Anniversary of Cathedral

The city of Lund, in southern Sweden, is celebrating the 800th anniversary of the founding of its Romanesque cathedral, one of the oldest and most important in the land. The crypt was consecrated in 1123; the high altar in 1145. The city itself is of ancient origin, recalls the National Geographic society. The old Rhyming Chronicle says, "At the time Christ let Himself be born, stood Lund and Skanoer in fairest growth." An Icelandic saga records the sacking and burning of Lund by the Vikings A. D. 940.

Lund once was a commercial port on the Hajeaa river, when the largest ships sailing the seas tied up at its wharves. Centuries ago, however, the watercourse silted up, leaving Lund several miles inland from the sound which separated it from Copenhagen, 25 miles to the west.

The name Lund in Danish means a small grove of trees. In this case the grove was the site of ceremonies to Odin, Thor and other northern deities. Christianity did not come to Lund until about A. D. 1000, during the reign of the Danish king, Svend Tveskaeg (Sweyn Forkbeard), builder of Lund's first church.

Pioneers Tanned Leather
American pioneers knew and practiced the art of tanning leather. To them it was a useful art and a simple one, and very little special equipment was needed for the work. When they killed a buffalo, cow or deer, they used the hide as well as the flesh. On their floors laid rugs made from the skins of wolves and other animals. Methods of curing skins were known to the ancient Egyptians. In China, leather has been found which proved to be more than 3,000 years old.
