Esther's Zeal For Her People
Lesson for June 13, 1948

GEORGE MEREDITH has a line that runs like this, "God's rarest blessing is, after all, a good woman." In this study of Esther, you may wish to think of her primarily as a courageous woman—most people do, I guess. But back of her courage was a solid goodness, else she would never have been able to say, "And if I perish, I perish."

One must read the Book of Esther, of course, to have any grasp of this great story. It requires but a few minutes, and every reader will be richly rewarded. I have a lawyer friend, a prodigious reader, who tells me that once each month, for the past 50 years, he has read the Book of Esther.

A QUEEN WHO WAS BRAVE
DANIEL, we agreed, was a brave person; but not more brave than Esther. There is a verse in Hebrews 13:6 that serves admirably to interpret this first stage of Esther's manifest courage, "The Lord is my helper."

We go to the palace in Shushan, where reigned Ahasuerus. His kingdom stretched from India even unto Ethiopia. His queen, Vashti, refused to come before him when he had made a feast. As a result of this refusal, the king ordered young maidens brought before him that he might choose a new queen. There was in the court a Jew, Mordecai, who had been brought there from Jerusalem. He had in his care the daughter of his uncle, a beautiful maiden, named Esther. Mordecai saw here a great opportunity and he brought her before the king. She was chosen. This brief sketch accounts for her position.

A QUEEN WHO HELPED HER PEOPLE
HAMAN, who was next to the king in authority, discovering that Mordecai was a Jew and was not worshipping as Haman had commanded, caused a decree to be issued which would put to death all the Jews in the kingdom. Mordecai, learning of this decree, sent word secretly to Esther, urging her to intercede on behalf of her people to the king.

Here is the heart of the story. Space does not permit a detailed recital. It is sufficient to say that Esther, though still in her early twenties, managed this delicate situation with such skill that the gallows which Haman had built for Mordecai turned out to be the instrument of death for Haman and his sons. Instead of the Jews being slaughtered, those who had planned the death of all the Jews lay dead.

ESTHER RISKED ALL AND WON ALL
IF EVER there was a perfect illustration of staking one's all on one great moment, Esther provides such illustration. "Who knoweth whether thou art not come to the kingdom for such a time as this?" said Mordecai as he bolstered her nerve.

It is such a challenge as young people may be facing today. Obviously, the moment now confronting us calls for great faith and great sacrifice if this world is to be saved from utter destruction. It may be that this situation calls for hitherto unknown tactics. And let us pray God there is somewhere an Esther.

THE MESSAGE OF ESTHER
WHICH leads me to suggest that racial hatred was never more bitter than at this moment. Unless the winds of God blow, unless some mighty manifestation of divine intervention is granted, the world will break up on the rocks of prejudice and selfishness and ambition and all the forms and fashions of sin.

"God moves in a mysterious way, his wonders to perform." Let us pray that we may early witness some mighty stroke of his mercy and deliverance, ere the night let down.

Atomic Hope

Terrifying as is the prospect of atomic energy running wild in the hands of a generation of men morally and spiritually unprepared to handle it, even more thrilling is the prospect of a Divine Will subjecting even such a diabolic thing as the atomic bomb to discipline and control.

Cost of Coal Strike

Just what did the last coal strike cost this country, its people, and the world? Here is a partial answer.

Nearly 50,000,000 tons of badly needed coal were not mined. Exports needed to carry out our foreign policy had to be drastically curtailed. Thousands of automobiles were not built for lack of steel. And thousands of coal cars, needed for next winter's peak movement, could not be manufactured.

The miners lost more than $100,000,000 in wages. Their welfare and pension fund lost about $5,000,000. And there is no way to estimate the millions lost to workers in the industries which had to cut down operations because of lack of coal.

The country's stockpiles of coal are sadly inadequate. They cannot be rapidly replenished—supply and current demand are in close balance, and our exports must be resumed if the European Aid Program is to have a chance of success in the fight to keep Communism from dictating to the world.

All of this happened because one man obviously considers his organization superior to the welfare of the United States and its domestic and international policies during a period of grave crisis. He has it in his power to bring to an immediate stop, the basic industries of the country, and to throw armies of workers into unemployment. He can decide whether or not the American people shall or shall not have coal to heat their homes. Can any country long allow any man such great and menacing authority?

Conventions Near

The national convention will open in Philadelphia soon, and three weeks later the Democrats will meet in the same city. These conventions will adopt platforms for their respective parties and nominate candidates for President and Vice President.

At the moment, principal interest is centered on the question of whom the Republicans will select as their nominee for President. Seldom, if ever, have there been so many avowed candidates for the nomination, and three of these—Governor Dewey of New York, former Governor Stassen of Minnesota and Senator Taft of Ohio—are waging intensive campaigns for convention delegates.

Stassen has been an active aspirant for more than two years, and has covered more territory during his speech-making tours than any other candidate in the country's history. He has generally made a good impression among the rank and file of voters, but he has openly antagonized Dewey and Taft, besides incurring the opposition of the Republican Old Guard.

Stassen and Dewey have wound up a whirlwind campaign in Oregon, where they were the only Republicans entered in the primary held recently, and which was the last G.O.P. primary test before the convention. While Oregon will have only 12 delegates, the primary's results may be of considerable significance if either Stassen or Dewey should score a decided victory over the other.

There seems no probability that either Dewey, Stassen or Taft will command a majority of votes on the first ballot at the convention, and there is the possibility of a deadlock. In the latter event, the nomination might go to a "dark horse," such as Senator Vandenberg or Speaker Martin.

In the Democratic convention, which begins on July 12, it still seems quite certain that President Truman will be nominated on the first ballot, in spite of the Southern revolt and other opposition. Some talk of drafting General Eisenhower continues, but there are no indications that he would reverse himself and accept the nomination, after repeatedly stating that he did not want it. So, it looks as if the Democratic party is stuck with Mr. Truman, although his chance of winning in November is not good.

But anything can happen in the great game of American politics, and predictions are always risky.

Sidelights

We read where two Indians were discussing the sad plight of the world at the present time and the unrest that has existed since World War 1, when one remarked: "Uh, the way I see it, when nations smoke the pipe of peace, nobody inhale."

For all of six years, B. F. Holcomb of Portales, N. M., has been wondering the reason why his old milk cow limped. He sat for hours trying to figure out the reason and finally got up enough energy to investigate. After a careful scrutiny of old Bossy's left hind foot, he found imbedded therein a diamond ring that Mrs. Holcomb had lost six years ago. Now, it is reported, Mrs. Holcomb and the cow both feel better.

We are told of a little girl who was very proud of her dolls and took a delight in showing them to her mother's guest. Asked their names the little lady pointed to one she called Miss Vanderbilt, another was Miss Astor, a third she called Miss Ford and the fourth was named Miss Rockefeller. Puzzled the visitor asked the reason for such odd names for dolls. The youngster just drew herself up and sighed: "I don't want a single one of them to ever have any financial worries."

Elam W. Heisey of Lancaster, Pa., killed two robins that were destroying his strawberries and then returned his old shotgun to its accustomed place above the mantle, very much pleased with himself. In fact, he felt that he had done a good day's work until a game warden called at his home. It cost him $45—$20 each for shooting the birds and an additional fine of $25 for discharging a firearm within 250 yards of an occupied building. After paying off, Heisey said he still thot it a good investment, the price of strawberries being what they are.

Religion, and its progress in the world, suffers more from self-anointed saints than from all the sinners.

Farmers Can Increase Profits By Killing Flies

Fly-free farms will be a reality for middlewest farmers this year if they follow the advice for spraying as given in an article on insect control in the May 22 Prairie Farmer. This article states that as much as 15 per cent more milk is given by dairy cows not bothered with flies, and beef cattle will gain one-third pound more per day if protected by spraying.

DDT spraying is recommended in most cases. Directions for mixing DDT solutions as well as operating sprayers is given. The control of household insects, such as roaches, ants and fleas, is outlined. How to kill the most common garden insects is the subject of another article.

Who is this Man?

Now and then, in the pages of the Clarion, I run a biographical quiz, under the heading of "Who Is This Man?" For instance...

"He was one of the earliest lovers in American history..."

"And yet he was too shy to court a woman outright..."

"He came to the New World on the Mayflower..."

"A cooper to repair the beer barrels accompanying the Pilgrims..."

"Who is this man?"

I thought that everybody was stumped. But not Ma Hoskins, who returned the clipping to me with "John Alden" on it. She recognized all the clues—including that reference to "beer" and "cooper."

For Ma—who's read her history, knows that beer as the beverage of moderation, is as old in this land of ours as the never-ending American search for tolerance which brought the Pilgrims over to this country in the first place.
