Home Team
Lesson for September 5, 1948

HUSBAND AND WIFE: Team or tug-of-war? In times when more and more homes are splitting apart, it is refreshing to read the story of one home that stuck together. We do not know whether these two ever had children; no doubt their home was happier if they had. But we do know their names. No one who ever spoke of them mentioned one without the other. You could not think of Aquila without thinking of his wife Priscilla (or Prisca for short), or vice versa. They were displaced persons, but that did not keep them down.

Family Trade Union

LIKE ALL JEWS of that time, they had a specialty, a trade they had learned. In this case someone had taught Prisca the same trade (or did she learn it from her husband?), so the two of them formed a sort of trade union. They were tentmakers, working not only in heavy tent-cloth but in the tanned skins of which many tents in that time were made. Their home was a workshop, their hands were bent by long use of hard tools, very likely they initiated their produce. P & A tents were good tents. Their business was good, for we know they always had room for another guest, for another hand at the workbench. That was one thing helping their marriage to stick.

How many husbands and wives today are working teams? One reason why divorces are more common in cities than on farms is that the city man and his wife seldom have any work in common, while a farmer and his wife are a working team in which each needs the other to succeed. Find some work you two can share, even if it is washing the dishes, and you have something to help you hold together through the years.

More Than Meals

ANOTHER bond that held these together was their hospitality. They had a long list of friends, some of them distinguished. We know about Paul and Apollos and we hear of many others. But when Apollos stayed at their house, he was getting more than meals. If you don't do more for a guest than feed him, he might as well be at a restaurant. If you don't do more than amuse him, he might as well be at the movies. What those two did for Apollos was to give him ideas, bigger ideas, truer and better than he had ever had, about the Christian faith. No doubt Apollos enjoyed Priscilla's lamb chops, but when he left that home he was not merely a well-fed man but one whose soul had grown.

Here again is something for husband and wife today. What are you doing for the people who come in your door? If they come for dinner you wouldn't insult them with trash or poison. What do you give their minds, their souls? Poison, trash or food?

The Church in Their House

EVIDENTLY the P & A tents made enough money for Priscilla and Aquila to have a spacious home, for we find Paul in a letter mentioning "the church in their house." This more than anything else kept these two together, a working team. You know in every church there are a few key people. They may not be conspicuous, but like the distributor under an automobile hood, if they are not there things do not run smoothly and maybe not at all.

Aquila and Priscilla were like that. Their church naturally revolved around them. This must have taken a good deal of their time, no doubt it cost them money, and it must have meant work. But if the church was in their house it was because they wanted it that way. It would be hard to believe that they asked for this so as to keep themselves from drifting apart; yet undoubtedly that was one effect of it.

The great majority of divorces are among people who have no connection with the church whatever. Many, of course, are of persons who are on church rolls somewhere. But how many broken marriages do you know among persons who are active in Christian work?

Babe Ruth

George Herman Ruth, most famous of all baseball players and the idol of American youth, who died recently of cancer in a New York hospital, was 53 years of age. He had been ill about two years.

No athlete ever attained such a high place in the esteem and affection of so many as did Babe Ruth, and tributes to his memory have been paid by leading figures of the nation and by his former associates in the national game. President Truman, former President Hoover and Governor Dewey were among those who praised the home run king in public statements. Special programs in his memory were broadcast over nation-wide radio networks.

While Babe Ruth's fame rests principally on his unequalled record of batting 714 home runs in regular season play and 15 more in World Series contests, for a grand total of 729, he held many other records. He batted 60 home runs for the Yankees in 1927, the largest number by one batsman in a single season.

He began his 22-season major league career as a left-handed pitcher with the Boston Red Sox in 1914, and in 1916 he pitched and won the longest game in World Series history—14 innings—during which he gave up only 1 run. He pitched the greatest number of consecutive scoreless innings in World Series play—29 in 1916 and 1918.

Ruth joined the New York Yankees in 1920, and became a baseman and outfielder in order that the team might have the benefit of his batting in every game. That year he amazed the baseball world by batting 54 home runs. In 1921 he got 59 homers, only one less than his all-time record, which aided the Yankees to win their first league pennant.

They won the American League pennant again in 1922 and in 1923, and in the latter year won their first World Series championship by defeating the New York Giants, to whom they had lost in the two preceding years. The Yankees won 10 world championships during Ruth's career with the team, and 3 additional league pennants.

In all, the Babe set 76 new records in baseball, 62 of which still stand.

One of the finest tributes paid him after his death was that of President Will Harridge of the American League, who summed up his career in these words:

"Babe Ruth was the greatest single figure and personality in baseball. The indomitable sportsmanship and courage he displayed so many years on the playing field, and which he showed thru his long illness, stands as part of a glorious Ruth legend that will live on always in the annals of our national sport and be an inspiration to youth forever."

Army Secret

Not all Army secrets concern the atom bomb, it has been revealed by persons in the know. It seems that army medics have a new hush-hush project under way—they are going to take the bray out of the Army mule. When questioned about the project, army veterinarians refused to comment. However, it is understood that orders will soon go out to "debray" mules before they are sent overseas. Army officers point out that a braying mule can reveal the presence of U. S. soldiers to the enemy and so the project is truly a military operation.

Women IN THE CHURCH
by Mary Fowler

Emotional tensions within the family and the home are the principal causes that lead to anti-social behavior and the making of criminals, according to a study recently made by a group of Columbia University psychiatrists of the families of criminals. According to the head of the studies, Dr. David Abrahamson, "Fundamentally we have found that more than the economic and social position of the family, the emotional relationship between parents and children influences character development. Our experience proves that family tension, even of a subtle nature, breeds criminals. Homes where there is bickering and nagging cause children to tighten up with resentment and hostility, resulting in their rebellion against authority and responding to the will of the gang. Often the family stress comes from dominating or weak parents, or a brother or sister getting more than a right share of the family blessings. In all the families examined it was found that there was an emotional tension. This tension was found to be a breeding place for hostility and resentment which not only led to criminal behavior but also to bodily and mental diseases."

1,000 Students Learn To Fly At U. of Illinois

University Airport One of Finest; Fleet of 32 Planes

More than 1,000 pilots—15 of them women—have been trained at the University of Illinois since the University's Institute of Aeronautics began operations in 1946.

Students in flight training have been 97 per cent veterans—men and women entering special fields in aviation, and planning to fly as industrialists, farmers, teachers, salesmen, and geologists. Others have felt the need for direct flying experience because of its over-all importance in the Air Age.

Launched as a pioneering venture in the field of aviation education, the U. of I. Institute under the direction of Dr. Leslie A. Bryan is recognized today as the leading organization of its kind.

Reflecting the Institute's amazing record of achievement since May, 1946, is the fact that flight courses have been completed successfully by 95 per cent of the total enrollment. In 1947, there was a daily average of 500 take-offs and landings, with 18 of the University's fleet of 32 planes being used in student training. In fields of research related to aviation, 20 of the University's colleges and departments now are cooperating with the Institute.

Utility of the University's 762-acre airport is evidenced in the huge hangar with its well-equipped maintenance and repair shop and classrooms, in 16,000 square feet of new ramp space, in field lighting facilities, obtained through a direct state grant, and in the erection of 20 nested T-hangers for the housing of privately-owned planes.

Dr. Bryan explains that a comprehensive program of aeronautical education and research is made possible by the fact that the University owns and operates its own airport and planes, and because the Institute is set up as an administrative unit which can cross departmental lines whenever such moves are advantageous.

The Institute's educational program now consists of six self-supporting aeronautical courses involving pre-flight and flight training and leading to a private pilot's license, a commercial pilot's license, a flight instructor's rating, and an instrument rating. In the process of development are courses in airport management, air line pilot training, aviation and engine mechanics training, and a general course dealing with the political, social, and economic aspects of aviation.

Uni. of Ill. Expands Navy Pier Courses

Completing its second year of classes with the 1948 spring semester, the undergraduate division of the University of Illinois located at Chicago's historic Navy Pier has already gained a name for itself in educational circles. The two-year school has a record of instruction of 6,500 freshmen and sophomore students and is continuing to expand course offerings and to establish new activities.

Since the division was opened in October, 1946, courses available in liberal arts, commerce engineering, and architecture have been increased from 121 to 170. The teaching staff has grown from 210 to 276.

The expansion in the academic field has been paralleled by the development of physical facilities. Ten new classrooms have been added to bring the total to 68. Eleven additional laboratories have been equipped to provide a total of 33 laboratories for students in physical and biological sciences and engineering studies.

Teaching facilities have been supplemented by study and recreational areas. Two large study halls and a library study area accommodate 1,200 students. The Navy Pier campus, stretching nearly one mile into Lake Michigan, houses student cafeterias, lounges, a bookstore, and organizational offices for 31 cultural and social extra-curricular groups.

The 1947-48 school year saw the "Chi-Initi" teams competing in intercollegiate athletics in seven sports—basketball, swimming, gymnastics, wrestling, tennis, track, and cross-country. Sports activities center in the Navy Pier gymnasium which accommodates eight full-size basketball courts.

Demand for entrance in the new school continues to be high. With 3,846 students enrolled for the first day of classes, the enrollment jumped to 4,451 for the 1947 fall semester. Enrollment estimates for the fall semester, 1948, indicate another capacity registration.

What do students think of the new school? According to Arnold L. Larsen, president of the Student Congress and a sophomore student in architecture, "Our unique campus at Navy Pier has proved to be an asset rather than a handicap." He lauded "the unusually close relationship that has grown from students and faculty members building a school together."

Dean Charles C. Caveny, administrative head of the school since its establishment, early set the goal of "maintaining the high academic standards traditional at the University of Illinois." To encourage a well-rounded college life, he and his staff have fostered the development of extra-curricular groups—both social and cultural—to supplement the academic program.

SHORT STORY

Prove Your Love

By HANK McCALL

JIM WEEKS took his spite out on his car and moaned, "With all the girls in this town to pick from, I get engaged to the one with the wildest ideas."

He had dashed out of Jane Blake's house two minutes before without kissing her good-night. They were engaged, they wanted to get married, their parents liked the match; in short, everything was perfect except Janie's crazy notions. A doubting, brooding mood had possessed her all evening. His trouble started when he rashly promised to do anything to prove his love.

3 Minute Fiction

Janie laughed but said seriously, "Jim, I'm going to give you a chance to prove that promise. We aren't going to get married until you get us an apartment to live in."

"Apartment? Why, Janie, you know we can't get an apartment in this town. Besides, we get the third floor of Dad's house."

"No, Jim. No apartment, no wedding."

The next morning Jim came to work a gruff, bitter young man. He ate lunch with Bud Hoven, an old friend in the engineering department. The usually quiet Bud was in high spirits.

"Jim, open your ears and listen to some good news. I'm going to production school in Chicago two weeks from today. The company pays all expenses, even for the wives. Betty and I will lock up our apartment and prepare to enjoy a free four-week vacation."

"Lock up your apartment? Bud, listen to me," pleaded Jim. He explained his predicament while Bud listened sympathetically. Jim easily persuaded him to sign over his apartment.

THOSE days were a whirlwind of frantic scurry. The attendants' gowns had to be ordered, the arrangements for the reception and dinner had to be made, and all the thousand other things that go with a wedding had to be settled in one short week. The time between the nuptials and Bud's departure was to be spent in honeymoon.

The day of the rehearsal found all details carefully assigned. The practice went smoothly until Bud beckoned Jim aside. "I don't know how to say this, Jim, but the company has changed its mind. I was transferred to next month's class."

A squadron of bombers wouldn't have made the roar that Jim's dream boats did as they crashed into the rocks. He had one idea to get across. "Don't tell Janie, Bud. We can't call off the wedding now. I'll find a place tomorrow if I have to buy a hotel."

HE SAID goodnight to Janie early and headed home. As he was waiting at a stoplight a paper-boy thrust the weekly edition of the newspaper into his window. He had no choice but to buy it.

Remembering that this edition carried the next morning's want ads he turned to the last pages. His eye searched for the "Apartments for Rent" section, stopped and then danced. His hands shook so hard that he could hardly discern the print. There it was, a thousand to one chance, but it was there.

"APARTMENT FOR RENT. CALL 7883 AFTER SEVEN A. M. DO NOT DISQUALIFY YOURSELF BY CALLING BEFORE SEVEN."

The morning light had scarcely appeared before Jim was heading for the apartment address. He found the street and the house, parked his car and ran up the steps to the porch.

He was startled when a voice called, "Jim, you're a little late." A girl sat in the corner, quietly waiting for the landlord.

Janie was laughing when she kissed him. "Don't be so shocked. Betty tipped me off to your little scheme. You don't think that I'd give up the wedding now, do you? I saw this advertisement in the paper last night, looked up the number, and got here first. It's my apartment but you can pay the first month's rent."

Smile Awhile

Magistrate—Now, my boy, do you understand the nature of an oath?

Boy—Ain't I your caddy?

Nature seems determined to make us work.

Yep—the less hair we have to comb, the more face we have to wash.

Sufferer—Do you extract teeth without pain?

Dentist—Not always. I sprained my wrist on one a couple of days ago, and it hurts yet.

What happened, George?

Puncture. You should have looked out for it. The guide book says there is a fork in the road just about here.

This notice appeared in a Western Kentucky newspaper: Positively no more baptizing in my pasture. Twice here in the last two months my gate has been left open and before I chase my heifers all over the county again, all the sinners can go to Hades.

An eminent clergyman was golfing on this course for the first time, and for his caddy had a lad full of spice and ginger.

At the first tee, the reverend gentleman asked the caddy how far it was to the first hole, and the caddy replied: Three hundred and fifty yards, parson.

Oh, remarked the clergyman, just a drive and a putt.

He teed up his ball, took his stance, and then, after waggling his club a bit, finally drove the pill about 20 yards down the course.

The caddy hitched up his trousers and peered out over the fairway.

Reverend, he finally remarked, that's gonna be one helluva putt!

There is a lady operating a boarding house down in Alabama who has a simple, silent, but most effective method of collecting money from delinquent boarders.

A new arrival at this lady's establishment noticed at supper that one of the boarders had one fork too many beside his plate, and seemed to be acutely embarrassed over the circumstance.

Why is he so disturbed over the extra fork? the new boarder whispered to the gentleman seated beside him.

Oh, that's how the landlady collects past due board bills, was the laughing explanation. When she puts that extra implement beside a plate it simply means 'fork over.'

Fast Aviation Growth
Aviation's amazing growth since the 1925 Morrow board report on air policy provides a yardstick of the importance of today's U. S. air policy investigations. Here's the picture—airline fares down 67 per cent; 4,000 times as many passengers; 1,000 times the pilots; 10 times the airports, and planes nearly three times faster than 1925. Today we have about 500,000 pilots, 6,000 airports and speed of 650 mph. About 16 million people paid 4.7 cents per mile airline fare in 1947.

Cheese on the Shelf
Another entry to the handy shelf of ready-to-serve food in cans is processed cheese. Cheese packed in metal containers is not a new idea. Some was packaged this way before the war for export and domestic use. But the demand for cheese as a long-term shelf food is increasing. At present, the cheese is available in 14-ounce vacuum packed, key-opening cans. It requires no special refrigeration and may be stored on the food shelf with canned fruits and vegetables.
