Broadlands Chapter, OES, Observes Chaplains' Night

Broadlands chapter, O. E. S. observed Chaplains' Night, Saturday with nearly one hundred members and guests present.

Mrs. Lena Helm, Tuscola, sang "Just For Today" before the opening of the chapter, and the Broadlands officers entered to the music of "The Priests' March" with Mrs. Zermah Witt as organist. Mrs. Thelma Kent of Milford served as guest chaplain. While she knelt at the altar after the prayer, Mrs. Helm sang "I Am Praying for You."

Mrs. Jessie Bergfield, chaplain for 14 years, and past matron of Broadlands chapter, was the guest of honor. As the conductress escorted her to the East, Mrs. Helm sang "My Cathedral" in her honor, and nine chaplains from neighboring chapters formed a cross around the altar. The Broadlands officers enacted a simple but impressive religious service honoring Mrs. Bergfield, and the Star points of the chapter presented her with a bouquet of flowers in their colors. Nineteen past chaplains formed a semicircle in the west and each was given a small purple and white cross to wear. For all the chaplains at the meeting Mrs. Helm sang "The Prayer Perfect," and after the Farewell she sang "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind."

Mrs. Mohr announced Sept. 25 as Advance Night in Broadlands chapter with Helen and James Wilson serving in the East, and associate matrons and patrons filling the stations.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Davis and their committee had charge of refreshments which consisted of white cake, grape punch and mints.

For a Better City
Lesson for September 19, 1948

"FOR A BETTER CITY" is a good slogan. No one would think of objecting to it. If the great city of Ephesus, capital and metropolis of the wealthiest and most thickly populated province of the Roman Empire, had had a chamber of commerce, no doubt they would all have been in favor of a Better City. There would be no argument about that. The question is: What makes a city better? Four different ideas on that line—two very bad ones and two good ones—can be seen in the story of Acts 19.

You should read the story itself before looking over these comments. Because we are beginning toward the end of the story, with the very lowest and silliest of the four ideas how to make a city better. It is a very simple idea: Just "holler, yell, make a demonstration. Make it long, make it loud, and the city will be the better for it. For two mortal hours that absurd mass-meeting kept the uproar going: "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!"

A curious thing, the mob-mind. If something is true, how can noise make it truer? If a thing is a lie, how can all the shouting in the world make it respectable? But the mob-mind thinks that if a thing is said loudly enough and by enough people, it is bound to be true. So that theater-full of fools wasted a good afternoon shouting a lie into the deaf blue heavens. It did Diana no good. She was as dead as Marley's ghost, she had never lived, in fact. It was no use drumming up the decibels. Do you know people who think they can make your town better by shouting about it? It won't work. You can make a town or county famous if you shout long enough; but you won't make it better.

Making Money
THE SILVERSMITHS there in Ephesus had another theory. The way they looked at it, the big thing is money. They used to make money selling their little silver shrines. Now this fellow Paul had come along, persuading people that hand-made gods are no gods at all, and the trade in "sacred" trinkets had fallen off. It looked like a bad year for the silversmiths. To make things better, they decided, they needed more money. More business! More production! The fact that what they produced was not only worthless but actually harmful, did not seem to bother them. Do you know people like that today?

Abiding By the Law
THE TOWN CLERK of Ephesus had a simple idea, vastly better than these other two. He saw no sense in the mass meeting, he seems not to have been taken in by the silversmiths' crocodile tears. If anything was wrong in Ephesus, he said, the courts were open, and trials were open, and trials could be held. We have laws—let us live by them; that was the gist of his idea. That is not bad advice. All honor to the honest servants of the public who now as then give their best efforts to seeing that good laws are made and well enforced.

Changing Lives
SPEAKING OF LAWS, there are three kinds of people in the world. One kind will not obey the laws whatever they are. These are the criminal classes. A second kind stay "inside the law" but they never advance a step beyond them. A third kind, too rare, will go far beyond the law's requirements in personal living and in social helpfulness. Now Paul had been in the city of Ephesus for some months, and he had nothing to do with the laws of that city. Yet what he was doing was more effective in making that city better than anything the courts could have done. For what he was doing was nothing less than changing lives. "The trouble with people is that they're people," and the business of Christianity first of all is changing people. It is no use hanging out the slogan "For a Better City" unless you are working for better people. A tree is no healthier than its roots, and a community's roots are the characters of her people. And from St. Paul's day to this, the one and only organization which sets out to change people from the inside, is the Christian church.

Faith In Governor Green

Gov. Dwight H. Green has received an endorsement, and with it a pledge of confidence, that is not only significant, but a source of special gratification. It is an all-out pledge of support in November by the Trades and Labor Assembly of Centralia, composed of 23 unions, including the United Mine Workers of that area. Many in Illinois felt the poignancy of bitterness and grief that steeped the Centralia coal miners in the wake of the lamentable mine disaster there last year. Miners' families were broken up, miners' work companions were snuffed out.

Time, however, has given men of sound judgment opportunity to appraise not only that disaster, but mining conditions generally throughout Illinois. The miners know that broadly speaking, Governor Green has gone all-out in his determination and effort to make coal mining safe. They know that he would have sacrificed himself rather than have the Centralia horror occur.

But they know, too, that the human equation is ever present, that it is in those fateful split seconds that someone's error touches off catastrophes. They know that Green's every impulse has been to make such commitments impossible, where he was physically able to do so, and they have paid him tribute on that basis. They take into consideration, too, the fact that the Green administration has guarded jealously the broad rights of people who work for a living.

The Centralia tribute is notable and it is full of meaning. It is an answer to politicians who would gauge the disaster on measurements of tawdry partisanship, and shout themselves to glory over the broken forms of men who would rather have lived.

The Centralia voice will be heard throughout Illinois and the nation.

Charles Evans Hughes

In the death of former Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, the nation has lost a truly great statesman and jurist, whose long and able public service has left a lasting impression upon his country.

He was governor of New York from 1907 to 1910, when he was appointed an associate justice of the U. S. Supreme court by President Taft. In 1916 he was nominated for president by the Republican Party in opposition to Woodrow Wilson, and on election night he was thought to have been elected, but later returns showed that he had lost California by about 4,000 votes, which gave the victory to Wilson.

Mr. Hughes served as Secretary of State under Presidents Harding and Coolidge from 1921 to 1925; was appointed in 1926 by Coolidge as a member of the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague, and also served on the Permanent Court of International Justice under the League of Nations.

In 1930 he was appointed Chief Justice of the United States by President Hoover, and served until 1941, when he resigned on account of advancing age. He was 86 at the time of his death. Besides the offices mentioned,

Mr. Hughes served in numerous other posts of high importance in national and international affairs, and he was universally recognized as one of the greatest figures of his time.

Nine For President

Comparatively few persons could name all the political parties and their candidates for President and Vice President in the present campaign. For the benefit of any who may be interested, they are named as listed by the Associated Press, as follows:

- Democratic—Harry S. Truman and Alben W. Barkley.
- Republican—Thomas E. Dewey and Earl Warren.
- States Rights Democratic—J. Strom Thurmond and Fielding L. Wright.
- Progressive—Henry A. Wallace and Glen H. Taylor (Also supported by the Communist and American Labor parties.)
- Socialist—Norman Thomas and Tucker P. Smith.
- Socialist Labor—Edward A. Teichert and Stephen Emery.
- Prohibition—Claude A. Watson and Dale Learn.
- Greenback—John G. Scott and Granville B. Leeke.
- Christian Nationalist—Gerald L. K. Smith and Harry A. Romer.

In 1944, candidates of all minor parties combined received less than half a million votes, except in the state of New York, where President Roosevelt was nominated by the American Labor and Liberal parties. These two parties polled about 825,000 votes, which enabled Roosevelt to carry the state, which otherwise would have gone to Dewey.

No minor party has carried any state since 1924, when the Progressive candidate, Robert M. La Follette, received Wisconsin's 13 electoral votes. This year the only minor group candidate for President with any chance to win electoral votes is Governor Thurmond, who may carry two or three of the southern states unless ruled out by a Supreme Court decision.

Sidelights

There were times when men would fight over a few cents. They were scarce and hard to get. Now, however, you can't give good food away, it seems. Henry Bobbin, a farmer of Nanticoke, Pa., has been trying to give away 40,000 heads of cabbage. He advertised he would give it away to anyone who wanted to pick it up at a nearby park. A few showed up but took away only about 500 heads. Said Bobbin: "It's pretty tough when you can't even give things away."

This fellow down Miami way that uses ice in building Florida homes should drop by this area some Summer day. No, they are not building igloos down in Florida, but W. R. Twiford, the inventor, actually uses ice as an ingredient for his building material. He mixes chopped ice with concrete, then pours the concrete into blocks. The concrete hardens, the ice melts, and a very lightweight "cavity block" results. The new type block, it is said, makes a better insulator against dampness, heat and cold.

Science has placed its stamp of approval on the corn as a weather forecaster. For years we have smiled when someone said: "It's gonna rain—my corns are killing me." Now, Dr. Lawrence Cummings, New York's director for the Pediatrics Society, says: "It is true that you can forecast the weather through aching corns. The corn is a mass of skin cells that press upon the nerves in an affected area. When the normal air pressure balance changes, it disturbs the painful area."

The newly married man found himself in a predicament and went to his boss about it. "As you know, I got married last month and need a raise," said the worried husband. "So you have found that two can't live as cheaply as one and you need more money to take care of living expenses," said the employer. "Well, that's not exactly it," explained the young man. "I seem to make enough for us to live on, but before getting married I told my wife what I make and now I'd like a little more for my own use that she doesn't know about." He got the raise.

Household Hints

Add a little salt to the water in a double boiler if you wish it to come to a boil more quickly.

A good thick gravy can be made by using the water in which rice has been cooked.

You can remove rust from iron frying pans with scouring powder and steel wool.

Tea or coffee stains can be removed from teacups by rubbing with a damp cloth dipped in salt.

Wrap dampened colored clothes in waxed paper, to keep them from fading onto other clothes in the basket.

Cardboard milk containers can be torn into pieces which are handy to use as plate scrapers and sink cleaners.

Avoid stale odors in your pressure cooker and other cooking utensils by leaving covers slightly open when the utensil is not in use.

When you forget to put salt in the cooked cereal, dissolve salt in a little boiling water and mix with the cereal so the taste will be uniform.

SHOOT STORY

Uncle Joe Rules The Roost

By M. J. COLLINS

BY GOL, woman, why don't you put that book down and come to bed? Uncle Joe had just gone into the bedroom off the kitchen.

Aunt Martha was comfortably seated in a rocking chair by the large old-fashioned stove, feet on the oven door, reading a love story.

He slid cautiously under the sheets. "Ouch! It's cold!" he exclaimed. "My feet are like ice."

Aunt Martha ignored his moaning and groaning for a few seconds. "Don't tell me you want the old lady to warm up your feet!" she said tartly. "At this time of the year, spring, too."

"I don't care if it's the hundred and second day of spring. The way the weather is acting up now you'd think it was the middle of winter, the ground-hog must have seen about four shadows this year! Brrrr! I'm freezing."

"Oh, all right," Aunt Martha said resignedly, putting her book on the kitchen table and getting up. "What's that!" she exclaimed suddenly, cocking her head to one side.

"Someone's stealing our chickens!" Aunt Martha cried excitedly. "I read about a gang that's doing it all over the country. Do something, Joe!"

"Get the shotgun!" Uncle Joe belatedly sliding out of bed. "I'll show them!"

AUNT MARTHA dashed upstairs to the bedroom they used in the summer and got his shotgun out of the closet. When she returned Uncle Joe was out in the kitchen, still in his night shirt. He had laced his boots on and had an old toque of Aunt Martha's pulled down over his ears.

"Where's that flashlight?" "I don't know, you had it last."

"Get the lantern then."

"You're not goin' out there without your pants," Aunt Martha cried, aghast at his get-up.

"Stand aside, woman, this is a man's job," he ordered imperiously. "Ain't no time to fool around." He dashed straight for the chicken house; his night shirt flying. Aunt Martha, wrapped in an old coat, was close at his heels.

"There's nothin' in here," he told Aunt Martha a few seconds later. He peered around intently. "Not a thing," he muttered. "Good gravy! Scat you! Scat!" he yelled suddenly. There was a crash and the dim light of the lantern went out. Aunt Martha gasped at all the racket.

"Joe! Joe! Are you all right?"

There was no answer. Then Uncle Joe cried hoarsely, "Get the flashlight, Martha, there's three of them wandering around in here. Hurry!"

AUNT MARTHA opened the door cautiously. A very strong odor assailed her nostrils. She swung the beam of the light all over the place. Most of the hens were standing or sitting all over the straw-covered floor, the lantern and shotgun were there also. "Joe, where are you?" she called.

"I'm up here."

Aunt Martha swung the beam upward. Uncle Joe was perched on the topmost roost, hanging on to a rafter, in the company of about 20 distraught hens. It was hard to say who looked the most alarmed, Uncle Joe or the hens. Aunt Martha laughed loudly.

"All right, laugh," he said sourly as he climbed stiffly down from his precarious perch. "What else could I do? At least I frightened them away."

"I don't doubt that," Aunt Martha said, dryly.

"Say, I don't feel any too warm out here," Uncle Joe shivered.

"You better git back to the house this minute, Joe Quinn, or you'll catch your death of cold." Aunt Martha took over the situation.

Uncle Joe permitted himself to be hustled into bed. As he sat up sipping the hot lemonade Aunt Martha had made him, he said, "I'm cold all over."

A short time later she brought in two old-fashioned hot water bottles wrapped in towels. She tucked in one at his feet and put the other at his back.

"There they are," she said sweetly. "That'll keep you warm."

Smile Awhile

White Collar Man — One who carries his lunch in a brief case instead of a pail.

Five-year-old Sue was "helping" her daddy at his work bench in the basement. Finally he tired of her incessant chatter and questions, and he asked her to be quiet for a little while.

I don't have to be quiet, Sue stated importantly. I'm a woman.

So you and your neighbor are not on speaking terms!

No. He sent me a can of oil to use on my lawn mower when I started to cut the grass at six in the morning.

And what did you do? Sent it back and told him to use it on his wife when she started singing at eleven at night.

Two nurse maids were wheeling their infant charges in the park, when one asked the other: Are you going to the dance tomorrow night?

I'm afraid not, she replied. What! exclaimed the other. I thought you were so fond of dancing?

I'd love to go, explained the conscientious maid, but to tell you the truth, I'm afraid to leave the baby with its mother!

In London, the Hyde park orator made frequent references to Darwin's "Origin of Species."

A tall man and his short companion hung on to the outskirts of the crowd, but were unable to get near the speakers.

What's his trouble, Bill? asked the small man, tired of craning his neck to no purpose.

Eat More Fruit, I think, replied the other. All he keeps talking about is Darwin's oranges and peaches.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

"Farming" Versus "Ranching"

Talked to some editors who run my column in their papers—in states where there's mostly cattle and sheep raising—about the differences there might be between farming and ranching.

And they told me: "Joe, there's no real difference between cattlemen and farmers. We make our living from the land like your folks do; we have the same 4-H Clubs and Granges; the same problems of prices and marketing.

"When it comes to recreation, we have the same liking to get together now and then for a barbecue and a friendly glass of beer."

And from where I sit, that about sums it up. Ranchers may have different names for things or grow different crops. But all over America folks who work the land share those common traits of hard work, sober moderation, and good fellowship, whether they're growing cattle for beef, or barley for good American beer and ale.
