By DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: The Book of Job.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Job 23:3-10.

Drama in the Bible

Lesson for November 7, 1948

THOMAS CARLYLE, a crusty dyspeptic but a literary artist of no small skill, was visiting a Christian friend. In the morning at family prayers (so the story goes) his host put into his hands a copy of the Bible and asked him to read a chapter. Carlyle opened at the first chapter of Job; read it—read on to the next and the next and the next — and refused to stop reading till he had finished all 42 chapters.

Dr. Foreman

Job is like that. It is a book you hate to put down. In all the Bible it is the outstanding example of the drama; a drama of conflict in which the opposing forces are not people as much as ideas.

The Characters

THE characters at first are three: God, Satan and a man named Job. Job is a good man, in fact God calls him perfect. He is also prosperous, and thereby hangs the tale. For one fateful day God and Satan have a conversation about this man. The Lord inquires if Satan has seen him, and how good he is. Oh yes, Satan says airily, he has seen him, but he does not think highly of his "goodness." He is too well paid for it. He has a large and happy family, and has immense wealth; why shouldn't he be good? Take away his prosperity and he will curse you to your face, Satan sneers.

So God lets Satan work his malice on the man. In a terrible series of disasters, one rushing on another's heels everything Job has owned vanishes. His children are killed by storm and fire, and Job is left a childless, penniless man. But Job does not complain; his faith in God still does not waver. So when next Satan reports to God, the Almighty asks again: Did you see my servant Job? He holds fast to his integrity. Ah, yes, sneers the unbelieving fiend. Yes, but he still has his health. He can have another family, another fortune. Make life itself so miserable that he will long to die, and then you will see his goodness vanish, then he surely will curse you to your face.

So God let Satan do his worst—Do all you can to him, God says, only leave him alive. And then Job is made horribly and painfully ill, he cannot sleep for the torture of boils covering him from head to foot. Three of his friends come to visit him. For seven days they sit in silence, and then begins a great debate with Job on one side and his friends on the other: Why must such things be? Why must good people suffer?

Was Job Real?

DON'T ask: Was Job a real character, or a made-up one like Hamlet and Macbeth? It is very likely there was once upon a time some man by that name who suffered in that way, and that he had friends, not too sympathetic, who talked it over with him.

As Hamlet and Macbeth were historical characters, whom Shakespeare used with high art to express profound ideas, so the author of Job may well have used the trials of some man he knew, or knew of, to express truths about a problem as profound and widespread as the human race.

For Job most surely is real: his local name may be Smith or Jones, and he may be living just around the corner from you. Indeed, sooner or later every man's name is Job. Sooner or later, every thoughtful person has to face the tragedy of human suffering: Why must such things be?

Suffering Is Test

THERE is, however, one solution which comes out in the course of the drama. It is not a theoretical solution; that is, it does not altogether answer the question, WHY must men suffer? It does tell us WHAT we can do about it.

Suffering is a test: A test of man's faith and real goodness. "When he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold," Job says. (23:10.) The test of a ship is not the quiet waters of the harbor but the roaring open sea; the test of a man is not comfort but stress and pain.

To have faith in God only when we are well-fed and softly cushioned is not faith at its best. Faith and goodness prove their reality only when they hold together even when torn by the nails of a cross.

Cheaper Meat In 1949

Department of Agriculture reports forecast a somewhat larger supply of meat next year as a result of the big 1948 corn crop, and lower prices may be expected, but they will come slowly. Increased meat production will be confined chiefly to pork and other hog products, as there is unlikely to be more beef available.

It is estimated that the country will raise 83,000,000 hogs next year, as compared with 75,000,000 this year. Heavier feeding of corn may add to the total weight of animals to be marketed in 1949.

Meat prices already have declined considerably from the record high of last summer, and are not expected to go much lower during this fall and winter. The full effect of increased meat production is not to be reflected in lower prices until about a year from now.

It should be borne in mind that the extremely high price of meat which consumers have had to pay has been due in part to the unprecedented demand. In the four years before the war, the American people consumed an average of 134 pounds of meat per person annually. This year consumption has been at the rate of 145 pounds, although we have had an addition of several million people to our population in the meantime.

So, while meat prices will be lower next year, they can not be expected to reach pre-war levels while the present business boom, with its high national income, continues to bolster consumer demand.

United Nations Day

Sunday, October 24, was observed as United Nations Day, it being the third anniversary of the date when the required number of ratifications of the United Nations Charter had been deposited by member states with the Department of State in Washington.

The Charter had been signed by representatives of 50 nations on June 26, 1945, at San Francisco, but it was required that the Charter should be ratified by each nation's governing body—congress, parliament, or by what ever name it is known—to make its provisions fully binding on member states. It was further provided that the Charter should not become effective until it was ratified by the United States, Britain, the Soviet Union, France and China and a majority of the other members. By October 24, such ratifications had been made by 29 nations, and Secretary of State James F. Byrnes then signed a protocol formally proclaiming that the Charter had come into force. Other member nations ratified the Charter later.

Since it came into being three years ago, the work of the United Nations has been greatly hampered by the obstructionist tactics of the Soviet Union, which has never supported the basic principles of the organization in good faith.

Instead, Russia has taken advantage of the desire for peace on the part of the rest of the world. She has kept a vast army estimated at five million men, under arms since the war—not for defense, but as a threat to peace-loving nations which have virtually demobilized their own forces.

The story of Soviet encroachments on the small nations of Eastern Europe is too well known to need repeating. Russian violations of agreements made at Yalta, Potsdam and elsewhere have been flagrant and continuous. The blockade of Berlin is merely another manifestation of Soviet ruthlessness and usurpation.

In view of the critical situation which has been created by these actions of the Soviet Union, there didn't seem to be much to celebrate on United Nations Day this year. It is generally admitted that the danger of another war is greater today than at any time since the surrender of Japan.

Still, it would be folly not to do everything possible to keep the United Nations going, in spite of its present weakness. At least it affords a forum for the expression of world opinion, and the debates on various questions have served to show up the general viciousness of Soviet doctrines and policies.

There seems little likelihood that Russia will voluntarily leave the United Nations in the near future, and while she remains a member the organization will exercise a restraining influence to some extent. Meanwhile, the non-Communist nations should try to build up their military strength in preparation for any emergency.

With or without Russia, the United Nations should be preserved.

Household Hints

To loosen tight screw tops on bottles, try using a nutcracker.

Sew buttons on work clothes with dental floss. They will stay on indefinitely.

Pack summer clothes away carefully this fall so that they will be in good condition for wear next spring.

One or two tablespoons of honey added to any cake mixture will help to keep the cake from drying out.

To clean a discolored aluminum pan, use a cloth dipped in lemon juice, rub until spot is gone, then rinse with water.

You can drive ants away by placing the skin of a cucumber where they are found. They will all disappear.

If you are not sure about the cause of a stain in clothes or linens, it is best to apply the mildew treatment first in removing it.

Mend clothes immediately after washing, before they are sprinkled and ironed. This will give them a much better appearance.

To make collars with that professional look, trim the seam to a quarter-inch and stitch around the edge, then clip off the corners.

To keep silk hose from twisting and blowing over the clothesline while they are drying, drop a marble into the toe of each stocking.

When you are baking, break eggs in the measuring cup first. Then when you measure the shortening it will not stick to the cup, but will slip out easily.

Cereals cooked in milk instead of water have a higher food value and improved flavor. However, since milk scorches easily, a double boiler should be used.

Saute a little chopped onion and green pepper in a skillet to mix with slightly beaten eggs; fry in small omelets and serve between slices of whole wheat toast with homemade chili sauce.

Hay Fever Technique
A new method of hay fever treatment is with pollen extracts. However unless the pollen extracts are mixed with oil or gelatin substances, they are absorbed into the system too rapidly. If reactions occur after an injection, usually in about one hour, the patient is far from the doctor's office and unable to secure proper observation. Because of this, most physicians prefer the watery ragweed extracts even though they have no prolonged effect. Dr. Leopold C. Lazarowitz of the New York hospital uses the principle of chilling to overcome this difficulty. He bandages a small ice-bag to the mid-outer part of the arm for 15 minutes before and 15 minutes after a subcutaneous injection of ragweed extract. In this way the circulation in and around the puncture is retarded. The results are said to be satisfactory, enabling the patient to be able to stand doses of extracts from three to four times larger than normal.

An American's Faith

This year at the commencement exercises of Harding College a notable address was delivered. It was no ordinary speech. The burden of its message was so significant, and the appeal so earnest, that I wish the audience had been many times larger. I am therefore taking this method of passing to you a portion of this solid and thoughtful address. It was made by Mr. Lamar Fleming, Jr., of Houston, Texas.

"This historic responsibility is new to us. . . . But those who view accomplishments in the atomic laboratories and the development of other terrible means of destruction must recognize that no one on earth longer has the power to decide whether he will live alone. That power of decision has passed to those who are evil enough to . . . use terrible new weapons for their evil designs—unless mankind combines to prevent them from so doing.

Our Call from Destiny

"If we accept that, being sons of God, we are brothers to all mankind, and that we are the only nation strong enough to lead mankind to combine for suppression of violence and recovery of Peace, we cannot reject the role to which our Destiny calls us. We will cherish the memory of more placid days, when this responsibility was not upon us, but we cannot reject our Destiny.

"We must enter this role in humility, conscious of our shortcomings and determined to overcome them to the best of our ability. We must search our souls. We must do more than conquer the resistance to truth which springs from our animal instincts. We must chastise all who seek to inflame and prey upon our group grievances, greeds and hatreds. We must remind ourselves constantly that our duty of human brotherhood is no less to distant peoples . . . than to our neighbors in our home towns.

Men of Good Will

"We must realize that peace and well-being will not return to them nor remain with us unless we achieve the ability to work together in a brotherly and mutually helpful company, each placing the common good above the greeds and ambitions of any person, group, or nation. We must include . . . peoples temporarily prevented from cooperation toward the common good and must pray for the day when their chains will be removed and they will be free to join our company.

"Above all, we must require of this great undertaking that it function by the standards of millions of individual consciences, which are the communion of sons and daughters with their Spiritual Father—not by group, party, or national ethics, in which conscience gives way to animal instincts, fears, and passions of the herd, and responsibility is spread so thin that no one feels it as his own. This calls for a profound spiritual revival—in us, and in all men and women of good will.

Well of Goodness

" . . . I have faith that all men and women everywhere have something in common between them, that is fundamentally good, and that time and great effort and patience will restore the mutual flow of this goodness and understanding between them, not merely in your lifetime but also in mine. . . . I have great faith that the well of goodness in the Americans of your generation will be full enough to start the mutual flow."

Mother—Jimmy, sit down and tell your little sister a story.
 Jimmy—I can't sit down; I just told daddy a story.
 First Old Maid—Oh, Agatha, I'm going out with a used car salesman.
 Second O. M.—What's the difference, as long as he's healthy?
 Foreman—Now, then hurry up.
 Worker—All right, boss, but Rome wasn't built in a day.
 Foreman—Maybe not, but I wasn't foreman on that job.

On Willie's return from his first dancing class, his mother asked, Well, Willie, how do you like your dancing lesson?
 Oh, he replied, it's easy. All you have to do is turn round and round and keep wiping your feet!

Wife—How many fish was it that you said you caught Saturday?
 Jake—There were six of them dear. Don't you remember?

Wife—Yes, that was what I thought you said, but the fish market charged you for eight.

Do you have to keep the women inmates separate from the men? inquired the visitor at the asylum.
 Sure! replied the attendant. These people here ain't near as crazy as you think!

We don't doubt that your check is good, said the manager politely, but have you any identification?
 The pretty young thing faltered: Will a mole on my left knee do?

As the young mother saw the rapture, admiration, wonder and incredulity reflected in her husband's face as he gazed at their infant son in his crib, tears of tender emotion filled her eyes.
 A penny for your thoughts, she murmured softly, as she stood beside him.

Well, he blurted out, for the life of me, I don't see how they can make a crib like that for $7.49 at today's spiraling costs of production and distribution!

Duck Stamp Revenue Saves Many Wildfowl

Since 1934, when duck stamp sales were first issued, more than 13 million dollars have been collected for waterfowl restoration and conservation. The largest number of stamps, 1,725,505, were sold last year.

Among the areas acquired with duck stamp money one of the most important was the 15,000 acre refuge known as the Horicon marsh near Waupun, Wis., established as the Horicon national wildlife refuge in 1940. Present plans of the service are to make it a major wildfowl refuge for the lake states.

Duck stamp funds bought 34,000 of the 320,326-acre Okefenokee national wildlife refuge in southeastern Georgia near Waycross — known as the "mysterious Okefenokee."

Key wildfowl areas bought out of duck stamps on the Atlantic coast include the Chincoteague refuge in Virginia, the Parker refuge in Massachusetts and the Brigantine refuge in New Jersey, eight miles north of Atlantic City, which is a concentration point for Atlantic brant.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

"Husbands, Wives, and Marriage"

Maybe you read that survey published recently in a national magazine, entitled "Husbands, Wives, and Marriage."

It showed that among happily married couples, those who criticized themselves outnumbered those who criticized the other person. Among unhappily married couples, it was just the opposite—each one tended to criticize the other.

That's the way it is in our town, as I guess it is in yours. Criticism, whether it's of a wife's taste for hats, or a husband's taste for pipe tobacco and an evening glass of beer or ale, is a sure start towards unhappiness.

As for what made happy marriages, companionship within the home was listed most important of all. And from where I sit, a husband and wife who can spend an evening by the fire—with nothing more exciting than a mellow glass of beer, and a friendly conversation—are a truly well-matched couple!

Rat Killing Arranged For November 5 & 6

Farm Adviser, W. B. Bunn, announces that plans have been completed to distribute prepared Red Squill Bait to kill rats everywhere throughout the county at the same time. The baiting will take place on the evenings of November 5 & 6.

In urging farmers and townspeople to cooperate in destroying rats, Mr. Bunn pointed out that rats travel from one property to another. By baiting all properties at one time it is possible to greatly reduce the infestation.

Prepared Bait will be made available to everyone on a non-profit basis for the two day campaign. Distributors have been arranged in every community center throughout the county. The distributor for Broadlands community is Broadlands Grain & Coal Co.

Dear Contributor—When you have any news items for this paper, we kindly ask that you make our Wednesday noon deadline, if possible.

Kerosene in Dangerous Hole

Sneak killers lurk in virtually every American home. These killers are poisons which claim more than 2,000 lives a year. Small children under five are the most frequent victims. Guard against these sneak killers in three places where they are usually found: Bathroom—medicines and drugs. Kitchen—cleaning, bleaching and disinfecting compounds. Basement or garage—insecticides and kerosene. Kerosene's poisonous characteristics have long been overshadowed by its fire hazard. With the exception of food poisoning, kerosene leads the list of virtually every home poisoning survey, the National Safety Council says.
